Kingston Acres II

$128,900 & up

Yes, after five years of planning and developing KINGSTON ACRES II has arrived. And it was worth the wait.

A limited edition of just fourteen outstanding colonial houses, KINGSTON ACRES II has begun construction and two models have been completed for your inspection.

Basically, the houses are expanded, oversized models with proven floor plans to delight the most discerning family. Large entry foyers are just the beginning with tremendous living rooms and formal dining rooms. Enormous eat-in kitchens are standard, too. The family room is available with brick fireplace and wooden panelling if desired. Large 2-car garage, of course. And don't forget the tiled powder room.

Upstairs you'll find four super bedrooms and two full baths. The master suite is especially oversized with many extras.

Please make it a point to visit KINGSTON ACRES II. We're open for inspection from 10:30 to 6:00 on weekdays and 11:00 to 4:00 on weekends. Closed Tuesday.

924-6739

DIRECTIONS: From Princeton take Nassau Street through the Village of Kingston. (Route 27.) Turn right on Fairfield Drive. Follow Fairfield to Schuh Drive and the models. See you there.

You Can Find More than Dinosaurs at N. J. State Museum; Contemporary Art Exhibits Stress Work of New Jersey Artists

"If you don't come every two weeks, you're going to miss something," remarked Karen G. Cummins, assistant director of the New Jersey State Museum, as she turned a corner into still another broad spacious gallery, its serene whiteness soft on a cloudy day and sparked with the contemporary color of James Kearns' paintings, sculpture and drawings.

The idea of traveling to Trenton to see first-line contemporary art may raise an eyebrow in Princeton. Trenton? Art?

But it's possible. And more art-lovers from Princeton seem to be doing it every — well, maybe every two weeks, lest they miss something.

And the Friends of the New Jersey Museum, with 300 Princeton members already on the rolls, are about to launch a campaign for even more.

WELCOME TO YOUR MUSEUM: The 1965 New Jersey State Museum, on West State Street in Trenton, comprises exhibits of contemporary art, a Planetarium, a Science Hall, a gift shop and an auditorium. The sculpture garden has sculpture by Princeton University's James Seawright, a mosaic by Ben Shahn and this maquette of an Alexander Calder in Mexico City. Outdoor concerts are given here in the summer.

90,000 Schoolchildren. You may think of the Museum as the home of Indians and dinosaurs, which indeed it is. On a recent morning, a troupe of kindergarten-first graders clomped down the stairs into the big white lobby, having spent a happy morning with fossils, like the rest of the 90,000 kids a year who visit the museum.

But on February 24, Museum Friends will hold an opening reception and preview for the Waylande Gregory show, "The Diversions of Keramos," which will document the figurative clay sculpture produced in this country from 1925 to 1950.

A one-day symposium will be held April 14 on these ceramists, and in context, the Museum will show popular films of the 1930's and 1940's during late March and early April.

George Segal's "Standing Girl Undressing" is here (as well as other Segal works) and Roy Lichtenstein's comments, in Benday dots, on Monet's haystack series, and a Milton Avery.

So it needn't be art by a New Jersey artist like Waylande Gregory, although Ms. Cummins says "We feel an obligation, as THE New Jersey state museum. During the year, we exhibit as many as 18 New Jersey artists and craftspeople in a major show, with brochures for each. It's so important, in helping artists build a national reputation."

N.J. Artists. She points to "Serie Metafisica" of Herk Van Tongeren, head of the Johnson Atelier and another sculpture, "Heat Series" by Rutgers professor John Goodyear. (This one is plugged in: grasp the upright metal wand and feel its warmth).

Bradford Graves' "An Algebra of Many Cats" is a maquette for a larger sculpture, but equally effective on its smaller scale.

New acquisitions include Daniel Garber's "Haunted," from 1925 and Stuart J. White's "A Real Piece of Americana," a surreal comment on fire.

"Fund-raising by the Friends provides money to buy these things," Ms. Cummins explains. "Actually, the Friends often persuade each other to donate various works! And where we need matching funds, which the National Endowment for the Arts required for our purchase of the Kenneth Snelson, the Friends provide that.

"The major weight of our collection is contemporary. It can be by a New Jersey artist or have a New Jersey meaning, or possibly both."

Here, for example, are Gregorio Prestopino's oil, "1932," Helaire Hiler's "Newark" painted in 1932 and Oscar F. Bluemner's "An Expression of a Silktown in New Jersey," from 1915.

Major exhibits change every two months, but timing is staggered, which accounts for Ms. Cummins' remark that there is "something new every two weeks."

Old Friends, Too. "But we want old friends, as well as what's on the frontier," and Ms. Cummins indicates a gallery corner containing Chinese furniture bought in 1910 by the Washington Roebling family, its elaborate and convoluted carvings startling to the eye after the contemporary art.

"If it belonged to the Roebling family, it will have a special place here, even though it might not have been made in New Jersey," she smiles. The Roeblings were a power in industrial Trenton and are intimately linked with the city's history.

One of the Museum's many splendid pieces of silver, for example, is inscribed to the Roebling family.

Although there are other pieces of furniture, many from the 18th century, they are displayed as objects, not in "rooms".

"New Jersey is rich in historic-house museums, so it is pointless to be another one," Ms. Cummins explains. "We've taken New Jersey history and traced it with objects: the earliest ceramics and today's, side by side, for example."

Glass cases display the rare red ware and yellow ware, glass from 1770 to the Durand glass of the 1920s and '30s and stoneware from the crudest early ware to more elaborate forms.

Four Enthusiastic Actors Will Star this Weekend In the PJ&B Production of 'Where's Charley?'

Happy is that show whose principal actors would rather be in it than eat. Where's Charley?, the PJ&B musical which will be seen five times this weekend at McCarter Theatre, has at least four such actors.

Derry Light, Priscilla Orr Treadwell, John Watson Stewart and C. Peter Kauzmann were interviewed during a rehearsal break at the handsome Princeton Theological Seminary auditorium. Their enthusiasm was infectious. It presages a joyous time for audiences this coming weekend.

What makes Where's Charley? a sure-fire comic hit? For starters, it is based on Brandon Thomas's Charley's Aunt (which the interviewees had not seen but which the interviewer could certify as one of the funniest plays in his experience).

"This musical's humor is really timeless," said Priscilla. "Even so, I feel that right now it's particularly timely. With people thinking of the possibility of nuclear war, this is a spirit-lifter, a great, laughing, entertaining show. People are ready for good laughter and silliness. A lot of the situations in the play are predictable, which somehow makes it even funnier."

News of The THEATRES

Wonderful Songs. Derry added, "Many of the songs are really wonderful, and that has to contribute to the show as a whole. Everybody must know Once in Love With Amy. My Darling, My Darling is a beautiful song, and The Woman in His Room, sung by Amy, is a marvelous soliloquy. Then there is the big chorus number, The New Ashmolean Marching Society and Students' Conservatory Band. One of the favorites of Ray Bolger (the original Charley) was Make a Miracle."

Summing up the play, Derry concluded, "A lot of it is really adorable." "Without being cloying," Priscilla added.

Since the men came late to the interview, the girls talked freely about them. "John (who plays Charley) does a wonderful job," both agreed. "He moves beautifully, he's a terrific dancer. He's equally credible as a man and as a woman. Once he got used to being in women's clothes, there was no trace of awkwardness." Priscilla added, "I'm exhausted watching him. I don't know how he remembers all the bits he has to remember."

And how about Peter (who plays Jack Chesney)? "Oh, he's charming."

John Stewart arrived in time to talk a little about his part as Charley. "This is the first major role I've ever had," he said. "What's remarkable about it is the fun I have — fun to be in love, fun to have friends like Jack, fun to discover all the strengths I would not have found if I did not have this opportunity to be bizarre."

All four made a point of emphasizing that Where's Charley? is far from being a four-character show. "There are great other parts and great people doing them, many old PJ&B favorites. Diana Crane is Donna Lucia D'Alvadorez, Harry Clark is Brassett, Ed Stout is Sir Francis Chesney, and Michael Lawrence is Mr. Spettigue. The chorus — 53 in all — are some of them Charley's Oxford schoolmates, some are guests at the Red Rose Cotillion."

No conversation about Where's Charley? could get far without mention of Milton Lyon, the director, and Joan Morton Lucas, choreographer. An innocent question was thrown in as bait: any incidents or anecdotes about either of them? While the others were racking their brains what to say about Milton, Derry recalled, "The first time I saw Joan she was Miss Mazeppa in Gypsy, (1963) the stripper with a trumpet. I was just a kid in the first scene, but I remember Joan with long black hair dangling down her back, and a teensy Brunnhilde-like bikini outfit. She was an eyeful." This picture of their favorite choreographer seemed to be a thought-stopper, so that director Lyon escaped with his past left unilluminated.

Different Paths. Different paths brought these four costardom in Where's Charley? For Peter Kauzmann this is his fifth consecutive PJ&B production. Last year he appeared as Mordred in Camelot.

Stewart tells it in his own way. "My first exposure to PJ&B was sitting in the audience and seeing my parents (Mary and Watts Stewart) bring down the first-act curtain of Showboat (1964). The first thing I myself ever did was Kiss Me, Kate three years ago. Milton asked me if I knew my left foot from my right. I said yes, and he said, 'You'll be one of my dancers then.' I came back the next year and the year after that, each year learning more by being exposed to what Milton and Joan both have to offer."

PJ&B audiences have heard Priscilla Orr Treadwell only twice, as a violinist in the orchestra for Kiss Me, Kate and as Peep-Bo in The Mikado. She has made her mark, however, with Pennington Players, Princeton Community Players, Shakespeare '70 and others, taking leading roles in South Pacific, Camelot, The Sound of Music, The Mikado, You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown, The Fantasticks, Side by Side by Sondheim, and in three different productions of Jacques Brel.

Derry Light seems to have grown up in PJ&B — nine shows in all. Beginning as a child in Gypsy and the eldest princess in The King and I, she was in the chorus of Finian's Rainbow, a dancer in Brigadoon and Can-Can, Eliza in My Fair Lady, Yum-Yum in The Mikado, Guenevere in Camelot, and now Amy in Where's Charley?

Derry, Priscilla, John and Peter are looking forward to the four-day, five-show run of Where's Charley? So are several thousand of their fellow playgoers who know a good thing when it comes their way.

Want to Audition?

Auditions for a new musical-mystery, "Dead Give-away" by Michael Rosenfeld, will be held February 27-29 from 8 to 11 p.m. in Murray Theatre on the Princeton University campus (near Firestone Library and the University chapel).

The musical will be given in early May under the direction of Veronica Brady. Casting is open to the public, and a few non-speaking parts are available. Those auditioning for singing roles should bring their own sheet music.

Rosenfeld, who is completing a degree in music composition under Milton Babbitt, has composed the music and written book and lyrics for "Dead Give-away." The musical was a finalist in the annual Richard Rodgers Production Award Competition. Rosenfeld won an award for his work on the soundtrack of the film, "Arthur."

Audition details are available from 921-3104 or 924-4508. No appointment for an audition is required.

GARP

And His World. "The World According to Garp," the screen adaptation of John Irving's novel, will be screened next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at Kresge Auditorium in the Movies-from-McCarter series. Showings will be at 7:15 and 9:45 each evening.

Director George Roy Hill's screen version is faithful to the Irving novel, preserving most of the disasters that regularly occur in Garp's life. Robin Williams stars as T.S. Garp, and the film follows him from prep school where his mother (Glenn Close) is a nurse, to a college student courting his future wife (Mary Beth Hurt) and on to a successful career as a writer and father of two sons.

In the supporting cast is John Lithgow whose portrayal of the transsexual football player, Roberta, won him an Academy Award nomination.

WELCOME BACK!

Marcel Marceau. He hasn't been on McCarter's stage since 1976, but he did receive an Honorary Doctor of Fine Arts degree from Princeton University in 1981. He has performed at McCarter 16 times since his first appearance in 1956, and every performance has sold out.

Marcel Marceau, almost universally acclaimed as the world's greatest living pantomimist, will return to McCarter with two performances: Tuesday and Wednesday, March 6 and 7, both at 8 p.m.

pany will portray 40 characters in A.R. Gurney's "The Dining Room," which will be on stage at the theatre from February 29 through March 18.

In Gurney's play, the dining-room is used because it is, in his view, the central meeting place of the American family. Scenes from past and present everyday life, scenes that are sad and funny, real and even more real than life, materialize before the audience.

James Wolk's set will allow the audience to look through the outside of a house — the fourth wall in the set design. That wall will then fly up, and the classic dining-room will be revealed. Susan Rheaume's costumes are basic, with articles of clothing added to identify the characters.

Penelope Reed, Stacy Ray and Mary Martello will play the female roles and Jay Doyle, Robert Lanchester and Greg Thornton will be the men. Nagle Jackson is directing.

Admission is free. A grant from the Geraldine R. Dodge Foundation supports the series.

In "At Home Here," Mr. Curran, an actor in the resident McCarter company, has fashioned a black comedy which explores the relationships among three generations of women. His colleagues Penelope Reed and Tony Campisi of the McCarter company, will perform.

'NICKLEBY'

At Peddie School. It's only a two-hour version, not Broadway's eight-hour tour, but it's still "The Life and Adventures of Nicholas Nickleby" and it will be given Friday and Saturday, February 17 and 18, by the Junior Drama Club at The Peddie School, Hightstown. Performances will be at 8 in Geiger-Reeves Hall on the Peddie campus.

The 32 student members of the cast are under the direction of Jeffrey Holcombe and student director Amy Seigel.

TO READ NEW PLAY

In McCarter Series. "At Home Here," a new play by Keith Curran, will be given a staged reading next Monday at 7:30 at Princeton Inn College, Alexander Street, to start the spring programming for the Playwrights-at-McCarter series.

SPEND A DAY IN N.J.

With Art Association. "A Day in New Jersey" at museums in New Brunswick and Newark is the latest tour offering from the Princeton Art Association. It will be Tuesday, February 28: $12 for PAA members, $15 for nonmembers. Participants must take their own picnic lunch.

First stop is the Jane Voorhees Zimmerli Art Museum on the Rutgers campus in New Bruhswick. The work of David Smith and his wife, Dorothy Dehner is now on exhibit, along with "The Artist and the Quilt."

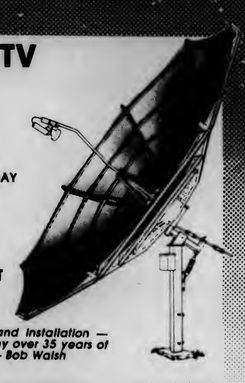
At the Newark Museum, the group will see "The Eight and Their Influence," marking the 75th anniversary of the museum. "The Eight", in their day as American artists, were often referred to as "The Ashcan School."

Ballentine House, an 1885 home, and the Tibetan collection will also be on the tour.

Reservations should be made by February 23 through checks mailed to the PAA, P.O. Box 3019, Princeton.

ARTISTS INVITED

The summer series of four single-artist shows at "Ellarslie" will be held again this year, and the sponsoring Trenton Artists Workshop Association is inviting artists to submit slides — deadline February 22 — for judging. Juror will be Robert Birmelin, professor of art at Queens College.



The shows will be during May, June, July and August at "Ellarslie," the Trenton City Museum. Each artist will have a single month.

The competition is open only

THE AMERICANS

Of '30s, '40s. "American Art of the 1930's and 1940's" is on view at the Princeton Gallery of Fine Art, 8 Chambers Street, and will remain through March 15.

Five artists are represented in the show, each with a distinct and different contribution to American art of that era. Artists are Milton Avery (1885-1965); Clarence Carter (1904-); Werner Drewes (1899-); Raymond Jonson (1891-1983) and Ralph Rosenborg (1914-).

Critics have said that Avery combined European modernism with his own personal vision of the world, while Carter worked in a regionalist-precisionist style. Drewes was the first Bauhaus-trained artist to work in this country, while Rosenborg is often called a fore-runner of American Abstract Expressionism. Jonson's paintings of the American southwest evoke his "transcendentalist" label.

The gallery is open Tuesdays through Fridays from 10 to 5 and Saturdays from 11-5.

EXHIBITS

Watercolors of Hopewell Valley, Belle Mead and the environs of Princeton by Rosella Petito will be on view through March 31 at the Hopewell Frame Shop and Gallery. Her "Bedens Brook" received an award last year in a juried show of the Tri-County Art Association and her painting "Breakers" won an award in 1981. She has exhibited in juried shows of the Garden State Watercolor Society and in several banks. Her work may be seen Tuesdays through Saturdays, 10 to 5.

Twenty paintings and sketches by inmates of Trenton State Prison are now on view at Nassau Presbyterian Church. Using oil, pastels and other media, prisoners draw on themes far removed from their prison environment. The exhibit is open from 9 to 5 and is free.

Tigers Can Capture Ivy Title By Winning All Remaining League Contests at Home

With half the games remaining in the Ivy basketball schedule, the question: who would be the team to beat has been answered. It's Princeton.

The next question is, "Can anybody catch the Tigers?" The answer to that is no, unless they are upset on their home court. The Orange and Black is clearly the best team in the league at this moment, and Carril-coached teams rarely lose down the stretch.

Last weekend in Jadwin, the Tigers slipped by Columbia, 34-28, in a contest that had everybody yawning, and then blew out Cornell, 63-43, on Saturday. That gave them a 5-3 league mark, a half game ahead of Penn.

Assuming Princeton defeats the Quakers in their rematch scheduled for Tuesday night in Jadwin (see page one for result), it will have a one-game edge in the standings, with just six remaining to be played. A victory by the Quakers would create a four-way tie for first, but still leave Princeton in a good position.

SPORTS

Harvard and Brown, two of the closest teams in the standings, both must play in Jadwin, along with Yale and Dartmouth. And you can count on the fingers of one hand the number of times all four of those teams have won here in the last quarter century.

Dartmouth owns the two most recent victories, a one-point win in overtime five years ago and a two-point triumph in 1968. The other three go back further than that.

The Big Green and the Crimson will be here this weekend, and Princeton will be waiting with open arms, anxious to atone for the close defeats it suffered against them in early January. Dartmouth will be the opponent Friday (Channel 52 will televise this one) and Harvard Saturday; both contests begin at 8.

Harvard, which won a pair of games last weekend at home against Brown and Yale, could easily lose to Penn in the Palestra on Friday night before coming here. A second loss on Saturday to Princeton, could end its chances before the weekend is over.

Two Crimson players, Bob Ferry and Joe Carrabino, are ranked second and third, respectively in Ivy scoring, behind Butch Graves of Yale. Ferry is averaging 18.3 and Carrabino, 17.8. In the game at Cambridge, they helped the Cantabs forge an early lead, and a cold-shooting Princeton team rallied late in the game, but never caught up, losing 49-47.

Dartmouth, led by Paul Anderson's 16-point average, has yet to win on the road this season. It squeezed out a 47-46 overtime triumph against Princeton in Hanover, but should be no match for the Tigers this time.

Mullin Buries Cornell. Pete Carril had said more than once that Cornell looked like the team to beat this year, proving he is a better coach than a forecaster. The Ithacans snuck ahead early, but fell behind late in the first half, and never came close in the second.

With about half the first half gone, the Big Red owned a 15-9 lead, thanks to the inside shooting of Ken Bantum and a couple of buckets from the outside by Drew Martin and Brad Bomba. But the Tigers had Kevin Mullin on a hot streak, nd the senior forward almost nglehandedly put them in he lead.

Working against the isitors's man-to-man efense, Mullin drove around is man repeatedly, scoring rinceton's first 10 points. He ad 18 in the first half on 8 for 0 shooting, finishing with 27 or the night, a new career igh, surpassing the 25 he colected a week ago.

His shooting pulled the range and Black from the 5-9 deficit into a 21-15 lead ith 4:56 left in the half. The igers led by five, 27-21 at the ntermission, and slowly increased that throughout the inal 20 minutes. When Banum picked up his fourth foul with approximately 14 minutes to go, the Tigers were retty much home free.

Howie Levy contributed his usual 12 points, and Isaac Carter added 8. John Smyth is the only cause for concern at the moment. He canned only two of 11 shots from the field, finishing with six points.

Friday Night Sleeper. It was difficult to tell who was more frustrated Friday night, the Princeton team or the fans that showed up expecting to watch a good basketball game.

What they got instead from pint-sized Columbia coach Buddy Mahar and his players was boringball. But what the cellar-dwelling Lions almost got in return was a victory, and it's hard to fault their game plan.

Columbia made Carril's squad look like a run and gun club, as it held the ball for several minutes at a time, before attempting a shot. The Light Blue's only lead came at the outset when it converted a layup off the opening tap.

The Tigers responded with a pair of lay-ups of their own for a 4-2 advantage, and never trailed again, but they were never in the clear until the final 30 seconds of the game.

Princeton had hoped to be able to run up a large enough lead to force the visitors out of their slow-down tactics, but a five-point margin, 13-8, with 5:44 left the in the half was the most the Tigers could manage.

They did not score again before the intermission, and Columbia closed to within one, 13-12. A long basket by Smyth at the buzzer was not allowed, one of the referees ruling it left his hands too late.

Throughout the second half, the Tigers clung to one- and three-point leads, determined not to let Columbia forge ahead and put the ball into a deep freeze. Behind 21-20 with less than six minutes to play, the Lions twice had a chance to go in front, but failed each time. On one occasion Mark Lay could make neither of two free throw attempts; on another the Light Blue was called for traveling.

Fortunately for the Tigers they finally reached the one-and-one situation with 3:37 to go, and calmly proceeded to sink 11 of their 12 free throws. Ryan was perfect in six attempts, Levy hit three of four, and Carter sank a pair. Princeton finally opened a six-point margin with 44 seconds left, 32-26, and heaved a huge sigh of relief.

Levy, aided by some good passes from Ryan, had 12, proving he can match his season's average even in a game of this type. Ryan had eight, and Carter, who threw in a couple of key outside shots, also finished with eight. His contributions to this team are growing with every game.

TIGERS COME ALIVE

Beat Dartmouth in Hockey. The sun came out for everybody Sunday afternoon, including the Princeton hockey team.

On a day when everyone ventured outside to enjoy the warm weather, coach Jim Higgins' skaters warmed up inside Baker Rink, capturing their fifth victory in 21 games, plus one tie.

The Tigers have had no shortage of problems and injuries this season, but playing at only two-thirds strength, they still looked like a class act against a disorganized Dartmouth sextet. Coming into the game, the Big Green had won only twice in 20 games, and Princeton wasn't about to lose to one of the few weaker teams in the ECAC's Division I.

It mattered not that the Tigers faced off without the services of five regular skaters, including junior captain Steve MacDonald, sophomore Pat Brodeur, the team's leading active scorer, junior defenseman Rob Scheuer, sophomore Danni Titus and freshman Joe Ross. All are nursing assorted injuries.

The Tigers also had no problem with both their first and second string goalies out of action. Wally McDonough and Dave Marotta were both sidelined with minor injuries suffered in the Harvard game. McDonough got his with a puck in the knee, and Marotta pulled a hamstring muscle.

Third-string goalie Tony Manory had not been overly impressive in his limited service in goal this season, so Higgins pinned his hopes on freshman Dave Shea, who had never seen a minute's playing time.

Shea responded by turning away 34 of the 36 shots that came his way. He didn't allow a goal until 6:52 remained in the contest, and the Tigers had built a safe, 5-0 margin. The visitors' other tally came with two minutes left.

Meanwhile the Tigers started slowly with one goal in the first period, another in the second and three more in the third. The Orange and Black capitalized on four of five power play situations with such ease, you would have thought they had been doing it all season. Dartmouth was zero for six.

Scott Howe got things rolling with a slap shot from the left point, past a screened Dartmouth goalie on Princeton's first power play opportunity at 13:48. Tim Oshier and John Rocco picked up assists.

Rocco made it 2-0 near the end of the second when his quick wrist shot from the slot zipped along the ice and into the left corner of the net. Tim Cole and Todd Ladda set up the play.

Three more power play goals followed in the final period, two within 36 seconds. Cliff Abrecht scored with the Tigers enjoying a two-man advantage. Half a minute later they were skating five on four when Howe got his second of the game.

Cole finished off the scoring with 9:10 left in the game, assisted by Ladda and Rocco. Dartmouth outshot the Tigers by a narrow margin, but Shea kicked everything away until the game was in hand.

A pair of non-league contests will occupy the Orange and Black this week. Colgate will be here Wednesday at 7:30 for the final home game of the season; on Saturday Princeton will travel to Orono to play Maine. It lost to Colgate in the consolation round of the Syracuse tournament in December, blowing a six-goal lead in the process.

The season will end the following week with a road trip to Harvard and Dartmouth.

Hammered by Harvard. Friday night the Tigers stuck to their more familiar scenario of falling far behind early, rallying briefly, and then giving up more goals.

Harvard took a 2-0 lead in the first period, its second goal coming on a power play with Howe off for tripping. The Crimson added two more in the second for a 4-0 advantage.

The Orange and Black's offense finally got in gear in the third on a pair of goals by Allan Gray. The freshman wing, tallied on rebounds in front of the net on both occasions, two minutes into the third period and again at 12:57.

If Princeton fans nurtured any hopes of a comeback, it took the visitors only six seconds to put them to rest. Harvard scored immediately off the following face-off, when Tony Viscone took the puck, and banged a slapshot past McDonough from just inside the blue line.

Higgins sent Marotta in at that point, but he was greeted rather rudely by Harvard, which scored its sixth goal just 28 seconds later. Marotta was slightly injured on the play, and McDonough found himself back in the nets for the rest of the night.

He managed to hold off further damage until Rocco was sent to the penalty box for holding at 16:36. Fifty seconds later, the Crimson scored easily converted their power play opportunity.

For a change Princeton was not outshot by the usual 2-1 margin, but it was close. McDonough faced 49 shots, while his teammates had 29 on target against Grant Blair. The victory was only the eighth for the Cantabs, against nine losses and one tie.

PHS QUINTET OUSTED

From County Tournament. Princeton High School was eliminated from the Mercer County Girls Tournament Monday when it was defeated 62-36, by sixth-seeded Nottingham. The Little Tigers had been seeded last among the 11 teams.

Nottingham (12-6) led all the way, outscoring PHS (3-13) in every period. The North Stars will next oppose third-seeded Notre Dame in the tournament.

Monica Greenland scored 18 points to account for half of the Little Tigers' total. Teammate Tracy Hemmingway added eight and Suzanne Allen, five. The North Stars were led by Chris Hahn's 18 points. Also in double figures for the victors were Delora Chroba (16), and Denise Cantara and Theresa Abbott with 11 each. It was the third win by Nottingham over PHS this season.

Three days earlier on Friday, in a Colonial Valley Conference league game, Nottingham had stopped the Little Tigers, 67-35.

The North Stars held PHS to 12 first-half points while scoring 41 of their own. Paige Walden was high for PHS with a dozen points, while Dawn Hendryx tossed in 20 for Nottingham. Abbott again was a thorn in the Little Tigers' hide with 15 points and 10 rebounds.

IT'S TOURNAMENT TIME

For Hun School Five. The regular season for the Hun School basketball team, one which saw the Raiders post a sparkling 19-5 record, is over. Now it is tournament time for coach Bob Hendrickson's squad which finished up the season with back-to-back wins over Pennington School and Rutgers Prep.

Monday's scheduled contest with rival Princeton High was wiped out when the Little Tigers had to play Peddie in one of three preliminary games needed to pare the field in the County Tournament to a final eight. It will not be rescheduled.

Saturday at 2, in the opening round of the New Jersey Independent School A Division state tournament, Hun, seeded number one and the defending Division A champion, will host fourth-seeded St. Benedict's. In the other opening contest, second-seeded Lawrenceville will entertain third-seeded Peddie at 2:30.

Hendrickson reported that he intended to find out all he could about St. Benedict's this week. For the moment, the only item in Hendrickson's scouting folder on St. Benedict's is that they play, he said, a very rugged schedule.

Should Hun and Lawrenceville meet for the title game (there are only the four teams in the A division), it would be their third meeting this season. Hun won the first meeting and Lawrenceville their second. Last year when the two were scheduled to meet for the title, Hun was awarded the championship on the basis of its better record when examination schedules at Lawrenceville prevented the two teams from playing.

Hun Seeded Second. In the Mercer County Boys Basketball Tournament, Hun has been seeded second behind Ewing. It will oppose the winner of this week's Steinert vs. Marie Katzenbach School for the Deaf contest Tuesday evening at 8:30 in the quarterfinal round at the Mercer County Community College gym where all remaining tournament matchups will be played.

Lawrenceville is seeded third, Notre Dame fourth, West Windsor fifth, and Peddie sixth among the 14 teams. Last year, Hun battled highly favored Ewing before bowing in the tournament's championship game.

Hun Stops Rutgers Prep. Rutgers Prep came to the Hun gym Saturday afternoon with a 13-5 record and three big players measuring 6-8, 6-6 and 6-5. The Argonauts left with a 73-60 defeat and a lesson that outside shooting alone will not win most ballgames.

They had good shooters, but how long can you rely on outside shooting was a question posed by Hendrickson after the game. "They try to get more shots than the other team and hope to win."

Hun took control of the game when it outscored the visitors, 36-18, in the middle two periods. Hendrickson cited the defensive play of John Goeke who clamped a lid on Rutgers Prep's top offensive shooter, 6-6 Raoul Hunt. "John did a great job on Hunt," said Hendrickson. "He got 14 points but half of them came late in the game against our jayvees."

For offense, Hun turned to Ted Bransfield, post graduate player from Pennsbury High who Hendrickson described as a pure shooter. The 6-3 Bransfield tossed in a game-high 24 points, 17 in the first half. Eleven came in the second period when he connected on three consecutive jumpers from the corner during a stretch when Hun reeled off 13 consecutive points.

John McDonough added 20 big points for Hun and Joe Mackin and Goeke contributed 12 each. The win was Hun's 19th of the season.

A day earlier, Bransfield and McDonough, the PG from Christian Brothers Academy, combined to lead Hun to a 70-56 win over Pennington School.

Each scored 23 points, Bransfield popping in 11 in the third period when Hun outscored the visitors, 17-9, to widen a five-point halftime lead. Goeke with 12 was the third Hun player in double figures.

Pennington was led by its outstanding player, Jay Bailey who had a game-high 28 points. With the loss, Pennington dipped below .500 with a 10-11 mark.

PDS BEATEN 78-64

By Rutgers Prep. The Princeton Day basketball team won one of two games last week, but not the important one.

The Panthers had hoped to defeat Rutgers Prep, and gain the top seeding in the Prep "B" tournament set to begin this Saturday. Instead, the Argonauts came away with a 78-64 victory last Wednesday on their home court.

Thus, PDS was seeded third behind RP and Pennington. It will meet Wardlaw at home in the opening round, beginning at 2 p.m. The semi-final round is set for Wednesday, Feb. 22, and the finals the following Saturday.

PDS got off to a woefully slow start, managing just seven points in each of the first two periods, while the home team hit for 38. With that kind of a first-half, there was no catching RP in the final two periods, even though PDS improved its play.

Frank Little led the losers with 18 points, Lynch Hunt had 13, and Scott Roberts, 12. The winners raised their record to 13-6.

On Friday, Roberts canned 18 to lead the Blue and White to an easy home win over a weaker Neumann Prep squad, 72-44. PDS jumped out to an early lead in the first quarter, and coasted the rest of the way. Jon McConaughy contributed 13 points, and Little had 12.

Now with an 11-9 mark, the Panthers will have a return match with Lawrenceville this Wednesday, and face Academy of New Church Friday, before tournament play begins.

PANTHERS ROUTED 12-0

By Lawrenceville Skaters. The first loss in December was 7-1, but the Princeton Day hockey team had improved measurably since then, so no one was quite prepared for the outcome of the rematch against Lawrenceville last Wednesday.

The Larries tallied three times in the first, three times in the second, and added a crushing six goal outburst in the third period for a 12-0 rout. The result was one of the most lopsided in the history of the series between the two schools.

It caught PDS coach Jeff Cutts by surprise. He had expected a closer game, considering the Panthers' efforts in the last few contests, including a 4-2 loss to Hill. "The way we played against Lawrenceville was the sign of a young team," Cutts commented.

Adding injury to insult, PDS lost its leading scorer, senior center Mike Blaxill and junior wing Tom Foster, both with shoulder injuries. The visitors played a strong checking game, bumping the Panthers off the puck time and again. PDS managed only nine shots on goal to 34 for the winners.

Defenseman Rich Stewart had the hat trick for Lawrenceville, forwards Tim Slaughter and Andy Tingle both tallied twice and picked up two assists. PDS goaltender Brad Smith was a busy man all afternoon.

Princeton Day will try to bring its 5-8-1 mark closer to .500 this week in games against the Lawrence Midgets, scheduled to be played Tuesday, and Council Rock, this Wednesday, at home.

PHS, HUN OUTMATCHED

In County Mat Tournament. Wrestlers from Princeton High and Hun School were overshadowed in the annual Mercer County Wrestling Tournament which was won by Peddie.

Peddie placed four in the Saturday night finals at the Steinert High gym, and all four triumphed to seal the team championship for the Falcons with 112½ points. Hamilton was second with 94½, Hightstown, the defending team champion, was third with 92½, and West Windsor fourth with 87½. Princeton High, which placed two in the consolation finals, was third from the bottom among the 15 competing teams with 16 points; Hun finished in fourteenth place with 8½ points and placed one in the consolation round, while Hopewell Valley failed to score a single point.

For the first time the tournament was dominated by the prep schools which won half of the 12 individual titles (four by Peddie, two by Lawrenceville School).

"Overall, I was pleased despite the fact that we were not very high numerically," commented PHS coach Lee Merrill. The kids were well pleased. I thought our showing was ... creditable."

Perhaps the most surprising performance by the Little Tigers was fashioned by senior Evan Cohn, one of the three team captains. Competing in the 135-pound division, the unseeded Cohn began by upsetting third-seeded Gary Houghton of Ewing, 7-5. In the quarterfinals Saturday morning, Cohn then stopped sixth-seeded Otis Boone of Trenton, 7-2.

In the semi-final round, Cohn was pinned in 1:57 by second-seeded Steve Warshany of Hightstown; in the consolation round for third place he was pinned in 4:10 by Clark Huang of West Windsor. "He did very well," said Merrill.

PHS heavyweight Tamer El-Shakhs, seeded third, drew a bye in the preliminary round and advanced to the semis with a 9-3 decision over Steinert's Brian Moscetti. In the semi-finals he was pinned by second-seeded Lenwood McCray of Trenton in 3:07. McCray went on to win the heavyweight title when he outlasted the top seed, Jim Falcone of Hamilton, 12-10, in the finals.

In the consolation round, El-Shakhs opposed fourth-seeded Anthony Messina of Ewing. El-Shakhs was ahead of Messina, recounted Merrill, when he decided to ease up and conserve his strength. "It was a mistake. He should have gone all out," said Merrill. Messina came back to pin El-Shakhs in 3:42.

Princeton's Brett Van deBovenkamp, the third seed at 188 pounds, was a victim in the quarterfinals of one of those what-would-have-happened ... if.

After pinning Hopewell Valley's Bob Weasner in the preliminaries, Van deBovenkamp had Lawrence High's tall and lanky Jim Azarowicz in a pinning hold. "He had him stacked up; he was flat," said Merrill.

When the referee dropped to the mat to get a closer look — "where he should be" — said Merrill, he was kicked "squarely between the eyes" by a flailing foot of Azarowicz. The referee reared up for a few seconds, recalled Merrill, and by the time he got back down again, Van deBovenkamp had lost it and Azarowicz came up to record a pin at 4:55.

Him Hit by Flu. Hun coach Dave Faus would just as soon forget the tournament.

The Raiders' lone hope for an individual title, second-seeded Todd Lipani at 157 pounds, was defeated, 8-2, by Greg Kelly of Lawrenceville School in the quarter-finals, after drawing an opening round bye. Kelly had been seeded seventh.

"Todd didn't do anything," said Faus, "which is pretty much the story for our entire team." Lipani, reported Faus, was suffering from the flu, as were team members John Selasko, Seth Wheaton and Steve Wolf. Faus estimated 75 to 100 Hun School students were sick with the flu. "Unfortunatley, some of them were also members of the wrestling team," he said.

Rob Cobun, Hun's 141-pounder, fared the best for the Raiders. After a bye, the fourth-seeded Cobun blanked Steve Bernhard of Ewing, 8-0, but then was pinned by top seeded Tony Mark of Trenton in the semi-finals in 1:31. In the consolation round, Cobun was edged, 5-3, by Mark Robinson of Notre Dame.

Princton High was scheduled to end its regular season this Wednesday evening at 8 at Lawrence High; Hun will entertain New Hope-Solebury Thursday at 3:30 and will end its regular season the following Wednesday against Wardlaw.

The NJISAA Prep School Tournament will be held Feb. 24-25 at Dwight Englewood, and the NJSIAA District Matches for public schools will be held the same weekend at Hunterdon Cental High School in Flemington.

PHS FALLS SHORT

In Tournament Game. The Princeton High School lost its last two games in the closing seconds of play but the one that hurt the most was Monday's 55-54 loss to Peddie. The defeat eliminated PHS from the Mercer County Tournament and sends sixth seeded Peddie against the winner of the Lawrence-Hopewell Valley game in the tourney's second round.

After dropping a 67-61 decision to Peddie on its home court two weeks ago, PHS coach Marvin Trotman had predicted that his Little Tigers would rebound and take the measure of Peddie. His crystal ball reading looked right-on when PHS outscored the home-team Falcons, 20-8, in the second period to take a 33-22 halftime lead.

Regan Second in Skiing

Jason Regan, an eighth grade student at Princeton Day School, easily won his age group, and clocked the second best time of the day in the Mercer County Ski Slalom championships held recently at Belle Mountain. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Regan, Harbourton-Woodsville Road, Pennington.

Competing in the boys' 12-14 category, Regan posted a combined time of 25.5 seconds for two runs over the 1,200 foot course, almost four seconds faster than the second place finisher. Robert Hibbs, of Ewing Township, who won the men's 26-33 age group, posted the best time of the day, 23.3.

Some 40 skiers competed in the annual event. Trophies were awarded to the winners in each age group by the Mercer County Park Commission. Medals were given to the second and third place finishers.

But Peddie finally tied the score with two minutes to go. PHS regained a one-point lead when Scott Yates hit the front end of a 1-and-1 but missed his second shot. With 16 seconds left, Bill McCarthy hit a 16-foot jumper to give the Falcons their 55-54 lead. The Little Tigers came down the court but failed to get a shot off before time ran out.

McCarthy's basket was his only of the game. He had entered the contest when Peddie's top player and high scorer with 21 points, Monte Gallant, fouled out with 2:30 left to play.

Bruce Breder backed up Gallant with 17 points as Peddie increased its record to 15-9. PHS (5-11) was led by Freddie Young's 21 points and Keith Green's 13.

Overtime Loss. Earlier, on Friday, PHS lost a 74-71 decision in overtime to Nottingham.

PHS led 64-60 with 15 seconds to play in regulation time and appeared to have the game sewed up. But in a game in which there were 54 turnovers, nothing is certain. PHS would soon become the victim of what Trotman called, "The greatest non-call of the century."

Brian Blakely, who scored a game-high 25 points, scored for Nottingham with five seconds to go and was fouled. Since a free throw would still leave the North Stars one point short, Blakely tossed the ball up hard against the backboard, grabbed the rebound and shoveled a pass off to teammate Mike Barbalacci underneath who laid the ball in to tie the score.

Although Steinert claimed the ball hit the rim, Trotman insisted it never did and the ball should have been awarded to Princeton. "The ref just blew the call," he said.

In overtime, Scott Yates gave PHS an early three-point lead but the North Stars stormed back on a pair of baskets by Barbalacci, another by Blakely and one by Dwayne Simpson to seat the win.

Young again led the PHS offense with 21 points. Jon Davidson, Darryl Hemmingway and Yates all contributed nine points each.

The win was only the North Stars's sixth this year but two of those have come over PHS. The game was another example of how little has gone the Little Tigers's way this season.

HUN MATMEN LOSE

But Lipani Defeats Pfann. The Hun wrestling team was defeated by Hamilton Monday, 44-22, but the long-awaited confrontation between Hun's top wrestler Todd Lipani and Hamilton's, Steve Pfann, went Hun's way.

Lipani scored a major, 16-5 decision over Pfann, who had entered the match with a 20-0 record and just two days earlier had won the 158-pound Mercer County crown. "Todd was just out of this world," commented Hun coach Dave Faus.

The expected meeting between Lipani and Pfann in the County Tournament over the past weekend failed to materialize when Lipani, weakened by the flu, lost a decision in the quarter finals to Greg Kelly of Lawrenceville. Pfann then defeated Kelly in the championship round for his County title.

Hun picked up its other points on pins by Pong Unakal over Carmen Huber in 4:47 at 101 pounds and Seth Wheaton's fall over the Hornets' Ed Moses in 3:08 in

Began as Science Museum. Science — that's the way it all began, with a cabinet full of rocks, assembled in 1836. It has been a science and history museum since 1891, and especially a geology museum. In the 1920s, in a State House annex, it began to exhibit fine and decorative arts.

The present sleek white building was completed in 1965, and the Museum began to enter the fine arts field because now there was space.

"We came into it late," Ms. Cummins says with some regret. "Now it costs huge amounts to buy good things. That's one reason for the Friends — we want a list of possible donors, because so much is acquired through the Friends.

It is in Science Hall that you feel the continuing presence of this century-long tradition.

In the imaginative exhibit called "Animals of the Suburbs," for example, is a decrepit garbage can spilling food for the stuffed raccoon and the rat. Cockroaches and a Japanese beetle are nearby.

You can touch a real mastodon bone (protected with a coat of plastic), gape at two mastodon skeletons and see a comprehensive exhibit of nuclear fission and fusion. And the Pine Barrens, besides.

Each January, the Friends sponsor Super Science Weekend, ranging this year from Penelope Possum to 150 Years of Electromagnetism.

Planetarium an Attraction. The big hit, of course, is the Planetarium.

"Because it's free, it's a great place to come for a family of three or four kids," Ms. Cummins points out.

Children must be at least seven, for regular programs.

If you're under seven, the Planetarium can be scary and dark. If the words are over your head, you're bored; if it's too long, you're itchy. The Museum wants a positive experience, with the vocabulary and the timing just right.

So, for the under-sevens, there is a special program where it's all fun, with little stories like "Who Stole Jupiter?"

Families also troop to the Museum on Saturday and Sunday afternoons for the movies. In March, the Museum will show futuristic films related to George Orwell and "1984" like "Fahrenheit 451" and "Metropolis," and there will be a symposium with David Burnham, author of "The Rise of the Corporate State."

Disney's "Snow White" is also on the movie list because the Museum likes to show good kids' films that aren't on television, and have just been re-released.

Concert Offerings. There are concerts, too, in the separate building housing the Museum auditorium. The Center Philharmonic, a new community symphony orchestra, performed Beethoven's Fifth Symphony in a concert in early February and jazz pianist-composer Della Green played last Sunday.

And in the shop, you can buy a $600 wood sculpture from Zaire or a New Jersey seashell.

The more, it seems, the better. Friends, as well as funds.

Basic operating costs for the Museum are met by the state. Grants or Friends' fundraising does all the rest.

"Newark Museum gets two-thirds of its operating budget from the state," Ms. Cummins remarks somewhat ruefully. "We get 100 percent, and their two-thirds is almost as much as our total."

No Admission Charge. There is no admission charge at the State Museum; Newark charges a "contribution" and levies a charge against some school groups, which the Museum in Trenton does not.

The State Museum has corporate sponsors like Prudential, which has been a faithful supporter for many years and has just given the money for a Tesla oscillator. New Jersey Bell and other corporations give money also.

Even though the Friends cannot offer members free admission, since everybody gets in free, there are other perquisites.

Carol Rosenthal, Friends president, talks about the preview receptions before an opening, usually held Fridays from 6 to 8 with "superb free food" from the Friends Hospitality Committee, and a cash bar.

Friends may also join a tour, like a recent one to SoHo and one last month to the American painting exhibit in Washington. Occasionally, there is a trip to Europe to see private collections.

Friends' membership starts at $25. Checks, to Friends of the NJ State Museum, go to the Museum at 205 West State Street, Trenton, N.J. 08625.

From the signs that tell unaccompanied children to stay out of certain galleries, to the kids pounding down the stairs and talking excitedly about dinosaurs — New Jersey's State Museum has something for everybody in the state of New Jersey.

—Katharine H. Bretnall

Where to Park

Parking is not easy at the New Jersey State Museum but it can be done. Incidentally, the Museum is closed Mondays.

On weekends and after business hours, park in the big lot that is behind and below the Museum. Take the Willow Street exit off Route 29 to reach the lot.

Weekdays, when offices are open, street parking is chancy (the lot above is full) but you can park in the garage of the Capitol Plaza Hotel on State Street just off Calhoun.

MARLATT A MOUNTAINEER: Hun School senior Patrick Marlatt has been awarded a full, four-year football scholarship to the University of West Virginia. The 6-6, 235-pound Marlatt was a standout tackle and linebacker for Hun and the team's captain. He was a member of the football varsity for four years. Standing from left are Hun football coach Bill Quirk, Headmaster G. Gerald Donaldson Jr. and Marlatt's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Marlatt of 118 Cherry Brook Drive. (Kai Ingwersen photo)

RECORDS ARE SET

By First Aid Squad. The Princeton First Aid and Rescue Squad reports that the squad answered 116 calls in December, bringing the total for 1983 to 1380 calls.

These are all-time records, both for the month and for the year. According to Squad Captain Ed Obert, the previous record for a year was set in 1968 when the squad provided primary ambulance coverage to most of the area surrounding Princeton and handled 1328 calls.

The call total for 1983 includes 1244 emergency dispatches, 86 routine transportation calls, and 50 "others" which include mostly standbys at various local events.

Some 363 of the calls were handled as mobile intensive care unit (MICU) calls for which telemetry contact was established with the hospital and advanced treatment started in the field. A total of 57 of these calls were for patients who were in respiratory or cardiac arrest. Nineteen of these patients (33 percent) were successfully resuscitated.

An additional 120 of the MICU patients showed marked improvement or had potentially life-threatening heart rhythm irregularities suppressed prior to arrival at the hospital. In 1983, Princeton's MICU handled more calls than any other Mercer County unit except the Trenton Lifemobile.

In 1983 the number of mutual aid calls rose as more neighboring municipalities have called for the help of the Princeton MICU or the heavy rescue truck to help with their more critical cases. Of the 1983 total, 474 calls were in Princeton Borough, 547 were in Princeton Township, and 359 were mutual aid calls.

The squad's 40 members spent a total of 5400 hours actually on calls. The paid day crew handled 526 calls, about 41 percent of the emergency calls. The squad's vehicles were driven a total of 12,500 miles.

Among other accomplishments for the year were the acquisition of several new portable radios; the addition of a new paramedic (bringing the total to five); the certification of all of the paramedics in advanced cardiac life support; the training of nine members in advanced motor vehicle extrication; the addition of several new pieces of heavy extrication equipment; and the replacement of the squad's older ambulance with a new one to arrive this spring.

their 188-pound match. Hun's Rob Cobun won the 141-pound match by forfeit.

Hamilton scored five pins in the meet to post its 12th victory in 18 matches. Hun's record is 3-12-1.

PHS Is Routed. Princeton High's mat team was routed by Steinert Monday, 55-5, at Steinert.

PHS took a short-lived lead when freshman Paul Crystal won the opening match by forfeit. The Spartans won all the rest, five by pins. The closest match for the Little Tigers came at 135 pounds where Evan Cohn lost an 8-6 decision to Tom Kinczel of Steinert. The victors evened their record at 6-6.

Borough Challenging Sewer Authority's Way Of Calculating Its Bills

Infiltration and inflow in the bookkeeping department may be causing as much surcharge as problems in the sewer lines, it appeared this week.

Budgets for the Stony Brook Regional Sewerage Authority are based on operating expenses times the percentage of flow assigned to a given municipality in the previous year, explained John McGee, head of the Authority this week.

But Borough Mayor Barbara Sigmund thinks that using a percentage is the wrong way to go.

The Authority's budget is not anchored to actual flow, she said, "and why isn't it?"

"Most people think we're paying for the amount going through, not for a certain percentage of a budget. Municipalities should be paying on the actual flow they produce."

Borough Council last week unanimously agreed to withhold the payment due February 15 for the 30-day grace period (10 percent penalty for going beyond that period) until the billing matter is cleared up.

Mayor Sigmund charged last week, in a letter to the Authority's executive director, Arthur Kling, that Borough residents are paying over 1000 percent more for sewer treatment now than in the last three years of Princeton's independent sewer plant.

Meanwhile, the mayor said she expects to meet Monday with Mr. McGee and the Borough's representative on the Authority, Robert Mills, to talk about bookkeeping procedures and the contents of her letter.

"I was somewhat surprised by her letter," Mr. McGee says. "We work over our

EPA ADMINISTRATOR William D. Ruckelshaus was in town last Saturday to receive the highest honor that Princeton University can bestow upon an alumnus–the Woodrow Wilson Award for distinguished achievement in the nation's service. Speaking informally at the Alumni/ae Day Luncheon in Jadwin Gym, Mr. Ruckelshaus delighted the audience of more than 1,200 with his self-deprecating humor. Earlier, he gave a formal address in Alexander Hall on the importance of and need for building public trust in the EPA. (Bill Allen photo)

EPA Head William Ruckelshaus Receives Woodrow Wilson Award

"He has felt the wrath of a President and the heat of Congress but remains unscathed in keeping the public trust with integrity, courage and personal honor."

With these words, R. Manning Brown, president of the board of trustees of Princeton University, presented the Woodrow Wilson Award to William D. Ruckelshaus, administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. Mr. Ruckelshaus, who graduated from Princeton in 1957, received the award at a luncheon meeting of the Alumni Association in Jadwin Gym. The award is presented annually on Alumni Day "to the alumnus of the undergraduate college whose activities exemplify Woodrow Wilson's ideal of Princeton in the nation's service."

Previous recipients include Presidential Assistant James A. Baker, who was honored last year; Paul A. Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board; former Ambassador George F. Kennan; Sen. Claiborne Pell; New York Times editorial page editor John B. Oakes; Ralph Nader; Adlai E. Stevenson; former Attorney General Nicholas D. Katzenbach, and New Yorker writer John McPhee.

Mr. Ruckelshaus was the first administrator of the EPA in the Nixon Administration. During the Watergate disclosures, he stepped in to take over as acting director of the FBI, and then was appointed United States Deputy Attorney General under Elliott Richardson. When Nixon called for the firing of the special Watergate prosecutor, Archibald Cox, Mr. Richardson and Mr. Ruckelshaus defied the Presidential order, lost their jobs and won the nation's respect.

New Alternatives Will Be Studied For Alignments of Routes 92, 206

The Department of Transportation has eliminated one of the four build alternatives for Route 92 that it proposed last March and added two others, with some variations or "shifts" in alignment.

The five alternatives that have been advanced for further engineering and environmental study were outlined Tuesday night to municipal officials at a meeting in Township Hall. The public meeting on the alternatives will be held Monday night at 7:30 in the West Windsor-Plainsboro High School. The public is invited to come as early as 6:30 to view maps and ask questions of DOT engineers and project location officials.

Still in the running for consideration as the route that is supposed to connect Route 206 north of Princeton and Route 33 east of Hightstown is a freeway generally along the original preserved alignment. A new element, however, is the proposed relocation of Route 206 in a westerly curve behind the Princeton airport. As proposed by the DOT for further study, 206 would take off from a point just north of the Ewing Street intersection, cross Cherry Valley Road, proceding west of Princeton airport, parallel to Oppossum Road, to rejoin 206 north of Orchard Road.

Along the Princeton-Montgomery border several alignments are shown, either straddling the border, which Princeton officials object to on environmental grounds, or cutting further into Montgomery where several developments are either proposed or underway. Intersecting Route 27 at Raymond Road, this Alternative I crosses Route One at county road 522 and paralleling Schalks Road proceeds across Plainsboro and Cranbury to the Hightstown bypass, about which there seems to be little disagreement.

An identical alternative in terms of alignment, except that it was to be an expressway with some traffic signals instead of a freeway (all interchanges are grade-separated) will be modified to a freeway alternative. Still another possibility is constructing only the Princeton and Hightstown bypasses.

Two new alternatives have been proposed to address the concern for farmland preservation in Cranbury

Generous Gift; Wrong Recipient

His intentions were friendly, but his selection couldn't have been more off the mark.

Thirty-nine-year-old Mertyn L. Marshall of Trenton was in an expansive mood late Thursday evening when he observed Ralph Terracciano dining with some friends at The Annex Restaurant on Nassau Street. He sat down at their table and offered Mr. Terracciano a marijuana cigarette. What Mr. Marshall obviously didn't know is that Mr. Terracciano is a Borough patrolman.

"Do you know who I am?" asked the surprised, off-duty officer. When Mr. Marshall replied that he did not, Ptl. Terracciano informed him that he was a police officer and Mr. Marshall was under arrest.

Ptl. Terracciano had someone call the police who arrested Marshall after they found four marijuana cigarettes in his possession. He was taken to headquarters, charged with possession of less than 25 grams of marijuana and later released, pending his appearance in Borough court March 7.

William Ruckelshaus

Described as "the architect of the nation's environmental program," the man who was called in to head the EPA again after the resignation of Anne Gorsuch was cited for "his willingness and ability to serve with distinction, for his solid record of achievements, (and) for the trust that he engenders."

Earlier in the day Mr. Ruckelshaus spoke before 1,000 alumni in Alexander Hall on "Risk in a Free Society."

He told the gathering that in his second tenure at EPA, his first goal "was the restoration of public confidence in the agency," and added that "straightening out the way we handle health risk is central to achieving it."

Mr. Ruckelshaus remarked, "We will retain the administrative flexiblity we need to effectively protect the public health and welfare if the public believes we are trying to act in the public interest."

Also honored at Alumni Day ceremonies was John W. Tukey, Donner Professor of Science and and Professor of Statistics. Prof. Tukey, who describes himself as a "chemist-turned-topologist-turned-statistician," was presented the James Madison Medal honoring an alumnus of the Graduate School who has distinguished himself in his career.

The Moses Taylor Pyne Prize, the highest general distinction conferred on an undergraduate, was awarded to two seniors. They are Stephen V. Vavasis, a mathematics major from Arlington Heights, Ill., and biochemistry major Lynn A. Weston of San Diego, Calif. They were cited as members of the senior class "who most clearly manifested excellent scholarship, character, and effective leadership in the best interests of Princeton University.

budgets pretty carefully on a line-by-line basis."

He added that he had received the letter only last Friday and did not want to comment on it in detail.

Mayor Sigmund also said this week that she has written to mayors of the other three municipalities belonging to the Authority — Princeton Township, West Windsor and South Brunswick — asking for a meeting to talk about sewer costs, the basis of these costs and controls in the system.

Township Examines Flow. While all this has been going on, Township engineer Robert Kiser, at the request of Mayor Winthrop S. Pike, has been examining flows at the two stations that serve Princeton: the Number Six meter on Alexander Street and the Princeton pumping station meter at River Road.

He found that Number Six had a "very flat line" on the chart last March and April, although it was a very rainy period when heavy flows might be expected to show. At the same time, the River Road station did show the expected ups and downs of a rainy time. Differences between the two amounted, on some occasions, to five million gallons a day, Mr. Kiser found.

"Either the meter is not registering properly," he suggested, "or there is a restriction in the line that doesn't allow the full flow to get in."

The Authority has hired C.F.M. Associates who are now checking out the meters. Also, Mr. Kiser said, meters are very sensitive, designed with a floating ball which can become tangled with something like toilet paper, and sink, thereby distorting measurements. The Authority is planning to acquire a sonic meter which measures the height of the flow through sound waves, he said.

Mr. Kiser's figures will be reviewed this Thursday at an Authority meeting. Mr. McGee said he had not yet seen them.

Underbilling Reviewed. After January 1, Mayor Sigmund, concerned about another sewer problem — the three years of underbilling because readings from Number Six meter were multiplied by 100 and not 1000 — asked municipal attorney Walter Bliss and engineer George Olexa to investigate the Authority's figures.

"They wanted to see what the Authority's auditors had seen," Mayor Sigmund said. "But they were only given read-outs of the same figures the auditors saw. Apparently the auditors didn't go back to the meters. So George and Walter are now looking at the meters."

"I hope that, by sitting down with Mayor Sigmund, we can alleviate her concerns," Mr. McGee says. "We're very concerned that what we do is well-understood by the public, and we want it known that we conduct our affairs on a fair and equitable basis. We've got to be pure as Caesar's wife."

HISTORIC SITES?

Maybe Time Is Now. The explosion of Route One, along with public reaction to Collins' plans for Palmer Square and new construction already up in Princeton, has led members of the Joint Historic Sites Committee to think the time may be now, for an Historic Sites ordinance.

This Thursday, in the public part of Council's 8 p.m. work session, members of the Committee will make a presentation and propose the idea to Council. They will show a few slides of places like Annapolis which are similar to Princeton in size, demography and the presence of a large institution, showing what an Historic Sites ordinance might accomplish.

Such an ordinance was drawn up in the late 1970s but was abandoned in 1978 under the objections of Princeton University and Princeton Theological Seminary.

"We were invited back last fall by the former Mayor and Council to make a presentation," says Constance Greiff, of the Commission, but scheduling problems could not be resolved.

"Now there is a new administration. This Council has only one or two members who were there during former discussions of the ordinance, so there are new people who haven't heard our arguments.

"Probably public reaction to Collins and Route One has led the Borough to re-think the idea. After all, historic areas are the prime ones for roads — Alexander Street has been suggested as a main throughfare into Princeton, for example!"

Mrs. Greiff recalls that Princeton University opposed an ordinance partly on the grounds that people in Princeton were such a fine group of people that regulations weren't needed.

"But some things have happened since," she remarked, "and I think there is greater public interest in the entire subject."

BACK TO RUSSELL

With Protests. Petitions signed by 48 families in the Edgerstoune Road area will go along with the formal preliminary plans when developers of the Russell estate, off Edgerstoune, go before the Environmental Design Review Committee and the Planning Board.

The formal plans are not very different from the informal review concepts shown to the Planning Board last month. There are still 56 lots clustered in the same configuration on the 84.8 acres, with a road out into Edgerstoune and another into Route 206 (Lawrenceville Road).

Petitions ask rejection of any plan with access onto Edgerstoune, or any plan showing Edgerstoune carried through to a junction with Rosedale. At present, only a path connects the two roads.

Plans that Springland Associates has developed do not show the Edgerstoune-Rosedale connection.

Springland will appear March 14 before the EDRC and in April before the Planning Board.

week. The vote was 5-0, Peter Bearse absent.

The new officer will join the ranks in August or early September, depending on the Borough budget. The amount set aside for this year is $8,000.

Chief Michael Carnevale will assign the additional officer to the 3-11 p.m. shift, when police duties are apt to be heaviest. The addition will increase the number of officers on the shift from five to six.

At this Thursday's work session, Council is scheduled to consider camera surveillance of the rear of Borough Hall to catch vandals interested in police cars.

In other action last Tuesday, Council introduced the ordinance giving mayor and Council members a salary raise, and another ordinance providing a 6.75 percent increase in the salary pool for non-union Borough employees. The increase is overall, and does not necessarily mean a 6.75 percent increase for each employee.

Under the officials' salary ordinance, the mayor's salary will be raised from $1,800 to $3,500 and Council members' from $1,200 to $2,500. Public hearing on both ordinances will be March 13.

A $90,000 bond ordinance providing money for sewer monitoring equipment was also introduced, with public hearing March 13 and a $28,000 ordinance for repair of the Park and Shop lot on Spring Street.

A report is due this week on repairing the weakened floor of the firehouse on Chambers, Engine Company Number 3. Money originally scheduled for the Borough's share of additional public library money, now available following Township veto of the additional allotment, will go toward repair of the floor. The amount is about $3,000.

Repairs for Engine Company Number 1, on Chestnut Street, will also be done under this year's budget, Council agreed.

DORM THIEVES CAUGHT

And Charged. Two suspects fleeing from an entry into an unlocked dormitory room in Dodge-Osborn Hall on the university campus were later apprehended Saturday by Borough police.

Charged with burglary and theft are Douglas W. Oliver, 21, of Trenton, and Linwood A. Feliciano, 22, of Burlington. Oliver is also wanted by the Mercer County Sheriff's Office for a burglary in Trenton.

Both were taken to the Mercer County Detention Center in default of $5,000 bail each set by Borough Judge Russell W. Annich Jr. Their court appearance here is set for March 7.

Borough desk officer William Hunter received a call at 6:59 p.m. reporting two theft suspects fleeing Dodge-Osborn Hall. He radioed a description. Sgt. William Clark and Ptl. Donald Dawson observed two suspects fitting the description on Nassau Street near Bank. One, later identified as Oliver, was wearing a Sony Walkman portable cassette player with orange headphones over his ears -- one of the items that had been reported stolen.

Police arrested both. Feliciano had in his possession a stolen quartz wristwatch and a calculator watch.

At police headquarters, Oliver gave his name as John Anderson but gave police his correct Social Security number. The latter when fed into the police computer revealed a "hit" from the Sheriff's Office. Police report that all the stolen articles have been returned to their owners.

About Downtown ...

The second meeting of the Borough's Economic Development Committee, this one designed for those who can only attend meetings at night, will be held Monday at 7:30 in Borough Hall.

Merchants, professionals and citizens are invited to attend and tell the co-chair, Richard Woodbridge and Irv Urken, what they like and dislike about the Borough's center city.

"We want it to be a positive meeting, not just with negative things," Mr. Urken said this week. "And we'll talk about more than traffic and parking."

The first meeting, held in the afternoon, was largely devoted to expressing frustrationg about parking.

PCDI HAS CONTRACT

For Home in Maine. The Princeton Child Development Institute, a pioneer in research on autism, is under contract with the Maine Bureau of Mental Health and the Community Shelters for Children in Augusta, Maine, to provide training, consultation and evaluation services for the development of a community-based, family-style group home treatment program for autistic children.

The first such home in Maine, it will be based on Family Focus, the first Teaching-Family Model group home for autistic children in the United States, developed by the Princeton Child Development Institute in 1977. The Institute now operates two of its own Family Focus group homes for autistic children in the Princeton area and, through its training center, extends its workshop, consultation and evaluation services to other programs throughout the country.

Recently, the training center has served programs in New Jersey, Nebraska and Florida.

subsequent investigation uncovered the marijuana. The two brothers were taken to headquarters, charged and later released.

SCOFFLAWS ARRESTED

By Township Police. Two Princeton residents, and a third person from Morrisville, Pa., were arrested by police last week, after a crime check revealed they were wanted for ignoring warrants.

Kenneth McRae, 22, 16 Mulberry Row, was arrested last week in the Borough and turned over to Township police who had a warrant for his arrest for ignoring motor vehicle summonses totalling $85. McRae was held in Township jail and later released in $85 bail.

Donald B. Tadlock, 40, 29 Green Street, was arrested Monday evening in the Borough and also turned over to Township police, who had warrants for his arrest for contempt of court and for ignoring two motor vehicle charges. He was being held in Township Jail in $330 bail until his appearance in Township court.

After the car in which he was a passenger was stopped Monday night for a motor vehicle check by Township police, Oliver D. Yawn, 32, of Morrisville, Pa., was held in $1,290 bail for the Trenton Police Department. A computer check had revealed that Yawn was wanted by police there on motor vehicle warrants.

STUDENT SUITE ENTERED

In Holder Hall. An unlocked students' suite in Holder Hall on the Princeton University campus was entered last week and police report there were three victims.

One lost a $200 35 mm camera and a Sony Walkman radio valued at $125; a second lost a $30 pair of earrings and a third $150 from a wallet left on a bureau.

A 19-inch color television set, a cassette tape deck and a stereo receiver with a combined value of $583 were stolen Saturday from a Witherspoon Lane home. Police report that an outside storm door had been forced and then six glass panes in an interior storm door had been punched out and a security chain lock broken to gain access to the inside. Ptl. William Nathan investigated.

There was a burglary and attempted theft at a Green Street residence between 9:30 Friday night and 12:15 Saturday morning.

The victim told Ptl. Joseph Wilhelm when she returned home shortly after midnight she noticed that the rear door had been forced open. Entering, she did not observe anything missing but later noticed that a stereo system in a second-floor bedroom had been disconnected. Nothing was taken, police report.

An entry into a Little Brook Road home while the occupants were away on a three-day vacation last week, was reported by Township police. Two television sets and a quantity of jewelry were taken.

The rooms and attic had been ransacked, police said, after the intruder had gained entry by prying molding from a pane of glass in a living room door. The victims discovered several doors in the house had been disturbed when they returned home at 11:30 Friday night.

TWO SUITS STOLEN

Pair Charged with Shoplifting. A suspicious Princeton Army-Navy Store merchant reporting two suspicious customers in his store has led to the arrest of two shoplifters.

Charged with shoplifting and possession of stolen property — suits taken from Langrock and Harry Ballot — are Otis Russaw, 39, and Clifford Melvin, 27, both of Trenton. Russaw was also charged with hindering a police investigation when he gave a false name.

Ptl. Dennis McManimon was alerted Thursday afternoon by the Army-Navy Store merchant who pointed out two men getting into a

School Board Deadline

Although the deadline for filing is this Thursday at 4, for those who want to run for the school board, so far there is no contest in either Borough or Township. Petitions have, however, been taken out by residents considering a run in the race.

In the Borough, Corinne Kyle is unopposed, so far, for the single seat available. Harry Levine and Hugh Brandt are running for the two Township seats open this year. Both are incumbents. Mrs. Kyle ran last year unsuccessfully.

Mustang. The merchant told the officer the two had been acting suspiciously in the store and he had found a jacket in a dressing room they had left.

The officer followed the car and stopped it on Nassau Street. As he approached the car to ask for the driver's registration, Ptl. McManimon saw a blue suit on the back seat with a price tag still on it. The two occupants, when questioned, said that they knew nothing about how the suit got there.

After noting a Langrock label in the suit, the officer checked with the store and was informed that a blue suit valued at $350 was missing. Police determined that a grey suit found in the car valued at $275 had been shoplifted from Ballot's.

Police also charged the driver with a motor vehicle violation when they found an open bottle of liquor in the car. Both suspects were later released, pending their appearance next month in Borough court.

Slow Driver Stopped. When Ptl. Anthony Federico and Ptl. Joseph Wilhelm observed a car traveling 15 miles an hour in a 30-mile zone on Nassau Street at 2:52 Friday morning, they followed the car and stopped it on Moore Street near Hamilton Avenue.

The interior light came on when the car door opened as the officers were checking the driver's credentials and they noticed what appeared to be a black wooden club on the rear seat. They asked if they could look at it. Upon discovering it was a sword cane with a two-foot steel sword inside, they charged the driver, Raymond G. Johnson 3d, 22, of Harris Road, with possession of a dangerous weapon.

THEFT REPORT

Wallet, Wallet, Wallet. Three thefts involving unattended wallets were reported last week by police.

A red nylon wallet containing $35 was stolen Friday morning from a coat in a coat room in the Campus Club on Prospect Avenue where the victim, a university student, had left it betwen 8:15 and 9:45. She also lost her driver's license and credit cards.

While a Princeton resident was taking a 35-minute swim at the YMCA Thursday morning, someone took her purse from her unlocked locker in the women's locker room. The $100 blue leather purse contained a check book, eyeglasses, contact lenses and assorted makeup and the victim listed her combined loss at $430.

While a Princeton resident was attending the Unitarian Church Sunday morning, she placed her pocketbook under a table in the church lounge. When she retrieved it at 11:30, she noticed that her wallet containing $100 had been stolen.

An employee at Epstein's in the Princeton Shopping Center lost $90.12 Saturday to a thief who used a key to open her locker in the employees' locker area. The victim told police that she had gone to the bank to cash a check for $90.12 and had purchased something at a drug store. She placed both items in her locker and then went to lunch. When she returned at 12:15 she discovered the money from the bank had been taken. The incident is still under in-

In one of two coat thefts, a navy blue, three-quarter length raincoat valued at $100 was stolen between 7:55 and 9:10 Wednesday morning from a coat rack at the Greenhouse Restaurant in the Nassau Inn. The victim, a Princeton resident, told police the keys to his car were in one of the pockets.

A green corduroy coat worth $140, containing an $8 pair of ski glasses, was stolen early last week between 1:30 and 2 a.m. from a coat room in the Campus Club. The victim is a university student.

While his 1982 BMW was parked for a 12-day period at the Park & Shop lot off Chambers Street, someone, the Princeton owner told police, removed both license plates from his car.

A girl's red Univega bicycle was stolen last week from a rack at the John Witherspoon School where the owner, a student at the school, had left it unlocked.

COSTLY DAY IN COURT

For Princeton Driver. It was a costly day in Township traffic court last week for Briar N. Tadlock of 29 Green Street.

For a second offense of driving while intoxicated, he was fined $515, sentenced to 30 days community service, had his license revoked for two years and was ordered to attend Alcoholics Anonymous for a year. A second offense of driving with an open container of alcoholic beverage in the car cost him another $215.

Mr. Tadlock was also found guilty on a charge of assault for which Judge Sydney Souter issued a 90-day suspended jail sentence and one year of supervised probation. He was also ordered to pay $25 to the Violent Crime Compensation Board.

Fined $65 each were Irene M. Stokes, 120 Jefferson Road, failure to yield after making a left turn, and Florence S. Helitzer, 59 Harrison Street, failure to yield before turning.

Christine L. Kennedy, 41 Greenbrier Row, paid $35 for failure to have car inspection.

SEEN STEALING FILM

Charged with Shoplifting. Mary Harris, 21, of Trenton, was arrested Friday and charged with shoplifting boxes of Polaroid film valued at $268.81 from the Acme Market in the Princeton Shopping Center.

She was observed by off-duty Ptl. Robert Buchanan placing the film in her handbag. Harris was arrested by Ptl. John Clausen who was called to the store and, after being charged was released to the custody of a brother.

CAR DAMAGED BY FIRE

Leaking Brake Fluid Blamed. Leaking brake fluid which spilled over onto a hot engine is being blamed for a fire Monday morning that extensively damaged a car operated by Marian H. Callighan, 4 Quarry Lane.

Ms. Callighan told police that she was returning home from shopping shortly before 10 and was about to enter her driveway when she noticed that her brakes were not working properly. She was able to stop her 1968 sedan, smelled something burning and then saw smoke coming out from under the car's hood.

Two fire engines and 12 firemen responded to a call from a neighbor and extinguished the fire, but not before it caused extensive damage to the engine compartment. Police said that they believe faulty brakes allowed the fluid to leak out.

THREE CARS INVOLVED

In Mercer Street Accident. Three cars traveling south on Mercer Street last Wednesday were involved in a collision between Parkside Lane and Maxwell Road.

Cars driven by Pamela Caserta of Trenton and Jay P.

To Discuss Mt. Laurel

Borough residents are invited to go to Borough Hall next Wednesday, February 29 at 8 for continued discussion of a possible Mt. Laurel ordinance for the municipality.

Borough attorney Walter Bliss is expected to have a tentative ordinance which members of the audience may comment upon. Such an ordinance might require developers to set aside a certain percentage of new units for lower-income buyers, or set up other mechanisms to assure such housing.

Slovin of Willingboro had stopped because of heavy traffic conditions at 5:25 p.m. when a third car, traveling behind, operated by Lorin Zissman, 53, of Park Lane, collided with the rear of the Slovin car. The impact pushed the Slovin car into the rear of the Caserta car.

Ptl. Robert Buchanan, who issued Mr. Zissman a summons for careless driving, noted that there were no skid marks prior to impact. Mr. Slovin and Ms. Caserta were both taken to Princeton Medical Center where Mr. Slovin was treated for contusions and abrasions of the head. Ms. Caserta complained of head pains.

Mr. Zissman escaped injury. His car had to be towed from the scene; the other two cars were driven from the scene.

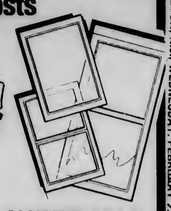
TO SUPREME COURT

With Re-Districting. New Jersey's Democrats said this week they will ask the U.S. Supreme Court to overturn the Congressional district map chosen last week by a three-judge Federal panel.



Princeton, left out in the cold in all the political maneuvering, has been moved out of Republican Congressman Matthew Rinaldo's Seventh District and into Republican James Courter's 12th District, when everyone expected Princeton to be moved into Republican Christopher Smith's Fourth District.

The map chosen by the panel of judges is the one drawn up by lawyers for New Jersey's five Republican members of Congress. The U.S. Supreme Court had rejected a Democratic map, stating that the population dif-

LET'S TALK ABOUT

SPRAY OILS ARE BACK - with Sam DeTuro

Woodwinds Associates

Oil sprays for the control of insects are back in the limelight. They are one of the oldest insecticides. Mixtures containing coal oil were used as far back as the 1860's. Oil-based sprays were in common use in the 20's, but with not always predictable results. Modern chemistry, plus research, has overcome the old hazards and improve effectiveness of today's refined oils. Oil sprays, both summer and winter, kill the eggs of mites, aphids, cankerworms, webworms and leaf hopper and control some adults, too. Kill is accomplished by the deposit of a minute amount of paraffin that interferes with the breathing or gas exchange of the egg or insect. Spray oils have advantages over some of the chemical insecticides. They are non-poisonous to people, pets and birds. They are rapidly biodegradable, nearly odorless and have no lasting effect on the environment. As with all sprays, though, there are limitations. Plants suffering from drought may be sensitive and a few varieties should be avoided. Call WOODWINDS (924-4500) for your Dormant Oil Spray in March.

ferences between districts were too great. Governor Thomas Kean and the Legislature were unable to agree on another plan before a deadline of February 3, and so the court-ordered three-judge panel stepped in.

In any case, says Princeton Democrat Peter Bearse, he still plans to try for the Democratic nomination in the Fourth District. There is no law requiring candidates to live in the districts they represent.

The new map reduces the Democratic vote in the Fourth District from 57 percent to 52 percent, according to Jeffrey Laurenti, one of Mr. Bearse's two opponents (the other is James Hedden) in the Democratic primary, making it harder for any Democrat to defeat Congressman Smith.

"I'm still the only one who stands a chance of beating Chris Smith," Mr. Bearse said after the re-districting was announced. "I'm the only one with the demonstrated ability to attract Republicans and independents as well as Democrats.

"Princeton has been part of Mercer County politics for years and so have I," he continued. "That's where we belong and I am going to run."

Lawyers for New Jersey Democrats charged that the three-judge panel went beyond its powers in choosing the map, disregarding basic policy decisions that should be made by the Legislature.

Muriel G. Buttinger

PSYCHIATRIST TO SPEAK AT YWCA. Muriel Gardiner Buttinger, M.D., psychiatrist and author, will be the speaker in the second of the YWCA's "Lunch With a Bite" series. Dr. Buttinger will speak Friday, February 24, at 12:15 at the YM-YWCA, Paul Robeson Place.

Her topic will be Sigmund Freud as he was regarded in Austria before 1940 and in this country since that time. Dr. Buttinger is the author of Code Name Mary, an account of her experiences as an American medical student in Vienna who was part of the underground assistance to refugees during World War II. She also wrote a book called Wolfman based on her experiences with Freud's famous patient.

Another book, written on the basis of her experience as a psychiatrist and school and juvenile consultant was about juveniles who had committed murder. A close friend of Anna Freud, Sigmund Freud's daughter, Dr. Buttinger is a sponsor of the official Freud archives. She has lived in Pennington for more than 40 years.

WOMEN ARE FOCUS

Of Coalition, 1984 Vote. As a result of an initiative by the League of Women Voters in the Princeton area, a Women's Coalition has been formed to bring as many women as possible into the political process for the 1984 election.

Nine organizations have united to form the Women's Coalition. Of the nine, seven have national affiliations: The American Association of University Women; the League of Women Voters, the National Organization of Women (NOW); the Older Women's League (OWL); the Princeton YWCA; the Unitarian Church, and the Women's Political Caucus of Mercer County. The Princeton University Women's Center and the Woman's Newspaper of Princeton are also members.

A Coalition press release points out that women make up 53 percent of the voting-age population in the United States. In the presidential election year 1980, the proportion of women voting was equal to that of men. The voter turn-out was approximately one half of the eligible voters.

Only 10 percent of elected officials are women. Women have specific identifiable interests which can be translated into votes. An effort will be make to inform women of their potential in the political process.

Events Planned. The Women's Coalition and its member organizations have planned a number of events for and about women in the coming weeks. In celebration of Women's International Day

Bearse Defends Choice.

To the Editor of Town Topics:

I wish that Rabbi Wisnia had called me about his concerns regarding Mel King (see "Mailbox," Town Topics, Feb. 15, p. 17).

Rabbi Wisnia was, most unfortunately, misinformed about the statement he attributed to King. The statement was actually in response to a question asking whether, as mayor of Boston, King would welcome Arafat to the city. "Welcome,' here, was a word used to describe an official response from a city official.

King's reply was that he would "welcome" Arafat providing he came in peace and had recognized the right of Israel to exist (a recognition not yet offered by any Arab state or the PLO). King did not use the phrase "warmly welcome," nor did he offer to embrace Arafat.

Allow me to add that Mel King has a well-earned reputation for battling anti-semitism, particularly during his years as a state legislator. During his mayoral campaign, he received the endorsement of prominent Jewish figures, including U.S. Congressman Barney Frank.

While I have no doubt that Mel King and I do not agree on every issue, we do agree on the need for community groups to work together to improve their neighborhoods and towns. King has been instrumental in developing and aiding such citizen self-help groups, and it was this shared concern that led to my asking him to appear at my campaign brunch.

Let me close by affirming my unwavering support for the State of Israel. And let me add a request that anyone with any questions about this or any other issue contact me directly. My telephone number is (609) 921-3155.

WAR IS TOPIC

Of Lecture at University. "Mars, Rams, Arms, Wars: The God in the Disease" will be discussed by psychologist James Hillman in a Spencer Trask Public Lecture at Princeton University on Tuesday at 8 in Dodds Auditorium of the Woodrow Wilson School.

"The history of humankind is a history of wars," says Dr. Hillman, a founding fellow of the Dallas (Texas) Institute of Humanities and Culture. In the Trask lecture he will examine the "Love of War" as a psychological phenomenon, that is, "as an undeniable archetypal reality."

A graduate of Trinity College, Dublin, Dr. Hillman earned his doctorate at the University of Zurich. He served for a decade as director of studies at the C.G. Jung Institute, Zurich, and has been a visiting lecturer at various U.S. universities. He was professor of psychology and graduate dean at the University of Dallas in 1978-80. Currently publisher and editor of Spring Publications, Inc., he is a regular lecturer at the Eranos Conferences, Ascona, Switzerland.

EDUCATOR TO SPEAK

At Library Dr. Ernest L. Boyer, president of the Carnegie Foundation, former U.S. Commissioner of Education, and head of Governor Kean's advisory panel on teacher certification, will speak at Princeton Public Library Tuesday at 8 p.m. His topic will be "Excellence in Education."

Dr. Boyer's most recent book is "High School, a report on Secondary Education in America." His report notes many weaknesses in our public schools and outlines priorities for improvement. His suggestions would build on what is best in existing schools to set higher goals for all students.

Before coming to the Carnegie Foundation, Dr. Boyer was Chancellor of the State University of New York, and taught at a number of universities. He holds 47 honorary degrees, was selected by his peers as the nation's leading educator in a 1983 national survey, and was given the William Moss Institute award. For five consecutive years he was listed by U.S. News and World Report as one of the top educators in the U.S.

The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, located now at 5 Ivy Lane, is an education policy study center established by Andrew Carnegie in 1905. Dr. Boyer has been president since 1980.

YWCA PROGRAMS TO GAIN

From Services Auction. The YWCA will hold its second Services and Surprises Auction on Saturday, March 3, at the YM-YWCA Building. Paul Robeson Place. Proceeds from the event help to fund a number of ongoing YWCA programs.

One of these is Adaptive Aquatics, designed to teach swimming skills to handicapped children. There are currently nine Princeton-area youngsters ranging in age from 7 to 17 who are enrolled in the class.

Ernest L. Boyer

Each has physical, mental or neurological needs which are best met in an individualized, one-to-one style class. Each is taught by a Red Cross certified YWCA swimming instructor who has previously evaluated the needs of the student. Several who began as non-swimmers are now comfortable and capable swimmers; several are preparing to compete in the Special Olympics swimming competition. Parents report that successes in the water have meant increased self-confidence for their children and have contributed to improved eating and sleeping habits.

Another program that will gain from the Services and Surprises Auction is Saturday Spotlight, a social-recreational experience for educable mentally retarded and learning disabled teens 14-19 years old. The program provides a place for these teens to meet new friends and have fun while participating in a variety of activities and exploring interests.

The Auction will begin at 6 and will include a buffet supper, Silent Auction and Live Auction, with Woody Woodford at the gavel. Tickets are $20 apiece, and may be purchased at the YWCA office.

THE PRINCETON BYPASS: This part of the proposed alignment for Route 92 is the same on all five alternatives that have been advanced by the DOT for further detailed engineering and environmental study. The dashed lines represent variations in the route that have been eliminated from further study. The solid lines are candidates for the route of the four-lane highway that the Department of Transportation expects to have selected by next year at this time. The solid round circles represent grade-separated intersection, and the open circle at Route 518 and the proposed Route 518 spur is an at grade intersection.

and Plainsboro. One would route 92 north of Dey Road, the other would propose direct access to the New Jersey Turnpike at Exit 8A from Route 1.

According to Russell Stevenson of the DOT, in making its studies, the Department found what he called "a big demand for traffic from townships west of Princeton desiring to go east across Route 1. Currently using Route 518, Cherry Valley Road and Route 206, this traffic would make use of the proposed 92 and relieve Princeton congestion by some 20 percent, he estimates.

Mr. Stevenson said that DOT traffic studies for the year 2008 project 17,500 vehicles per day generated locally and seeking to go to areas to the east. His assertions were disputed by Montgomery Township Committee members who maintain that traffic coming down a widened 206 from Route 287 and Hillsboro in the north will cause more of a problem.

Montgomery Committeeman Daniel Huttar, one of the authors of the CARS proposal which has been eliminated from further consideration by the DOT, told Mr. Stevenson: "The problem with a road of this magnitude is that development along it will be so explosive. Congestions will be worse, and the safety record on Route 206 will deteriorate. You are causing more problems than you solve."

New Alignments

"Roadway triggers growth," agreed Mr. Stevenson, "but it can be controlled. It is a matter of zoning and joint planning by municipalities." He also conceded that Route 92 would not solve all the traaffic problems in Princeton, but he said it would relieve it by as much as 20 percent. "Twenty percent would be very acceptable," Princeton Township Mayor Winthrop S. Pike noted.

Route 518, Cherry Valley Road, and Carter Road all will become major arteries taking traffic to and from the northern terminus of Route 92. Improvements to Route 1 and to Route 571 through West Windsor will also be needed to improve traffic congeston, Mr. Stevenson said.

The municipalities represented Tuesday night each continued to press for its own alignment preferences. East Millstone urged that its proposal for an alignment along the Millstone River be reconsidered. Cranbury said it would press for the 92-32 alternative. South Brunswick was concerned about traffic using its local streets.

At the close of the presentation, Mr. Stevenson said, "I thought we'd be reaching some sort of consensus tonight, but all we've done is raise more issues."

Public Meeting on 92

The N.J. Department of Transportation will hold a public meeting on Monday in Princeton Junction to discuss the Route 92 Corridor Study in Mercer, Middlesex and Somerset Counties.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 in the West Windsor-Plainsboro High School, Commons One, Clarksville Road. An "informal information center" will precede the meeting, beginning at 6:30.

The meeting will give the public the opportunity to review findings on the various Route 92 alternative alignments that the Department developed, or was asked to investigate, subsequent to the public meeting held last March.

NJDOT project location and environmental staffs will make short presentations. Comments and questions will be received following the presentations.

For further information concerning the meeting, call John Mycoff, Area Coordinator, NJDOT Office of Community Involvement at 292-6802.

$13.6 MILLION GOAL SET

For Annual Giving. Princeton University's 1984 Annual Giving Campaign officially began Saturday with the announcement that $6,940,724 had been raised from 11,759 donors. Annual Giving Chairman Arnold M. Berlin reported to an Alumni Day audience that the 1984 goal is $13.6 million.

Annual Giving is an extensive effort to raise unrestricted funds among Princeton University alumni, parents and friends. Last year 57 percent of the alumni constituency contributed $12.4 million. The current drive ends on June 30.

For the third year, the drive is part of A Campaign for Princeton — a $330 million, five-year fund-raising venture, scheduled for completion in June 1986. Annual Giving seeks to raise $68 million during the five years.

ART AUCTION PLANNED

By Nursery School. The Princeton Junction Cooperative Nursery School will hold its third annual Art Auction on Sunday, March 4, at Conant Hall, Educational Testing Service, Rosedale Road.

The auction, run by Howard Mann of Howard Mann Art Center in Lambertville, will begin with a preview at 2 before bidding starts at 3. Original works by Dali, Delacroix, Boulanger, Picasso, Durer, Roualt and Miro will be featured. Opening bids will range from $40, to $3,000 for a work by Joan Miro, according to Mr. Mann.

Admission is $5. Wine and hors d'oeuvre will be served, and the proceeds will benefit the nursery school. For tickets call Dave Todhagen at 587-5744. Tickets may also be purchased at Allens Children's Center, 134 Nassau Street.

For a financially secure retirement, open a Nassau Savings IRA (Individual Retirement Account) today. Anyone who is gainfully employed is eligible, even if covered by an employer pension plan.

You can contribute up to $2,000 annually, or up to $2,250 if your spouse does not earn outside income. Contributions are tax deductible and earned interest tax deferred until you start to withdraw from your IRA (between 59½ and 70½) when most people are in a lower tax bracket.

Reduce your income tax! For example, if you're in the 25% tax bracket and contribute $1,000 to your IRA, you deduct the $1,000 on your federal tax form; your tax is reduced by $250. The net IRA cost is $750. In effect, you keep an additional $250 of your hard-earned money.

For your passport to a carefree retirement, develop the profitable IRA habit at the Nassau Savings nearest you. Open your IRA with a contribution of $10 or more. Follow up whenever you desire, there's no minimum deposit required. You can contribute up until you file your federal return (usually by April 15th) the following calendar year.

Remember, the younger you start the greater tax savings you'll enjoy, and the more you will have for a financially secure retirement.

RELIGION

PASTOR IS ELECTED

Chairman of Board. The Rev. Robert A. Beringer, pastor of the Hopewell Presbyterian Church, has been elected chairman of the board of The Presbyterian Homes of New Jersey, whose head offices are in Princeton.

The non-sectarian organization operates residential and nursing care facilities for the elderly in eight different locations throughout the state, and is New Jersey's largest private, non-profit operator of such facilities.

The Rev. Robert Beringer

Mr Beringer has served as pastor of the Hopewell Presbyteerian Church for 20 years. He is a graduate of the Princeton Theological Seminary, where he earned both Bachelor of Divinity and Master of Theology degrees, and also holds a graduate degree from Cornell University.

Mr Beringer has been a Presbyterian Homes board member for two years and served as board secretary last year. He serves also as president of the Family Service Association of Trenton-Hopewell Valley, and as an active member of the Juvenile Conference Committee of Hopewell Valley.

Facilities operated by The Presbyterian Homes include homes or residential complexes in Asbury Park, Neptune, Hightstown, Hadonfield and Plainfield. It also maintains health care facilities in Neptune, Somers Point and Hightstown with another about to be built in Plainfield.

WORSHIP SERVICE SET

By Church Women. World Day of Prayer, an annual celebration sponsored in the United States by Church Women United, will be held on Friday, March 2. In Princeton, the celebration will be held at noon at the Lutheran Church of the Messiah, 407 Nassau Street.

Worship will be led by women from the community who will follow a script written this year by women in Sweden on the theme "Living Water from Christ, Our Hope." The Rev. Jean Smith, assistant at Trinity Episcopal Church and current president of the Princeton Clergy Association, will give a homily entitled, "Reflections on Living Waters."

World Day of Prayer unites women of faith in some 5,000 communities in the United States and 170 countries around the globe in a common day of prayer. This year marks the 97th consecutive observance of an event begun in 1887 by women of the United States as a day of prayer for mission. Today it has grown to include thousands of Christian women of various races, cultures and traditions on six continents.

A fellowship time will be shared after the service. Participants are encouraged to bring a sandwich; beverages and cookies will be served. A special invitation is extended to women of Swedish ancestry. Alice Hoon is the coordinator for the service.

FIRST WOMAN NAMED

Full Professor at Seminary. The board of trustees of Princeton Theological Seminary has announced the appointment of Dr. Jane Dempsey Douglass as the Weyerhaeuser Professor of Historical Theology, effective at the beginning of the 1985-86 academic year. Dr. Douglass is the first woman to join the Seminary's faculty as a full professor.

She is presently professor of church history in the School of Theology at Claremont College and Claremont Graduate School in California, where she has taught since 1963. Prior to joining the faculty at Claremont she was associate director of the Presbyterian Student Center in Columbia, Mo., and a teaching fellow in church history at Harvard Divinity School.

Dr. Douglass received the A.B. degree from Syracuse University, the M.A. from Radcliffe College, and the Ph.D. from Harvard University in history and philosophy of religion. She has also studied at the University of Geneva. Author of several books, she is an ordained elder in the Presbyterian Church and a member of the Caribbean and North American Area Council of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches.

BUSINESS

BUT CHEESE, TOO

In New Restaurant-Bar. In the beginning, they were going to call it The Cheese Cellar, but that sounded snacky and too much like a place where you would pop in and buy a wedge of something wrapped in plastic.

So now it's J.B. Winberie, Restaurant and Bar. The Stouffer-owned restaurant is on the north side of the One Palmer Square Building, entrance from Palmer Square East, open Mondays through Saturdays from 11 in the morning to 1 at night; Sundays from 11 to 3 for brunch and 3 to 10 for dinner.

With wine racks at the entrance and four dining areas with vaulted ceilings, Winberie has been designed with a wine-cellar look. There is dark mahogany woodwork and leaded stained glass and bronze, all nicely and discreetly lit with candlelight and antiqued chandeliers.

Winberie is proud of its Look of Lean menu, ("under 390 calories") with Veal Piccata, Pasta with Shrimp, Herb Broiled Sole, Chicken Marsala.

Starters include mushrooms stuffed with artichokes, baked brie with almonds and various cheese fondues, like the cheddar and beer or Emmenthal and Gruyere blended with Chablis and kirsch.

If you don't need the Look of Lean, lean toward the four-cheese linguini, sirloin strip steak with noisette potatoes and broccoli, baked scrod, chicken breast saute. And there's a cheese-and-sausage board, served with fresh fruit, French bread and Lavosh, the American cracker bread covered with melted cheese.

And you can buy a hamburger for $3.95 or a cheeseburger for $4.50. Prices are topped by the sirloin strip for $12.95. Other specialties are in the $5.95-$7.95 range.

The compartmented menu allows customers to create their own meal, choosing appetizers only, perhaps, with a splurge on dessert. The wine list includes domestic and imported.

CUSTOMIZE YOUR OWN HOME!

STAY CLOSE TO FAMILY AND FRIENDS

Privacy. We all enjoy it. You've certainly earned it! Luxury and privacy are built right into Homestead's four spacious, single family models featuring 2 bedrooms, 2 baths, attached garage with automatic opener, central air-conditioning, a house full of Sears Kenmore appliances, a Sentry 24™ Security System with medic alert, smoke and intrusion alarms and much more! So, why retire in a clustered community when you've earned your own privacy!

That's right, most retirement communities won't budge an inch when it comes to making changes. Take it or leave it so to speak. Not Homestead at Mansfield. Within basic model design requirements, and at nominal cost, we'll customize your home to meet your individual needs. Enlarge a dining area, add more closet space, you name it, we'll provide it!

Retirement community living shouldn't mean having to leave those who are close to you. Children and grandchildren. Friends. Especially around the holidays. All are important factors to consider when selecting a retirement environment. Because Homestead at Mansfield is conveniently located and easily accessible to major arteries, you'll never be too far from life's most cherished possessions, the people you love!

Princeton Residents Dispute New Jersey's New Guidelines for Safe Microwave Exposure

How safe is safe?

This is the question that sometimes pits citizens against authorities as each attempts to cope with the by-products of industrialization and a high standard of living. Not only does it arise in issues concerning hazardous waste landfill sites and toxic substances seeping into drinking water, but also, less talked-about but just as pervasive, the so-called "electronic smog" that is everywhere.

Not many weeks after the controversy surrounding the installation of the microwave security system around Drumthwacket, some Princeton residents found themselves on opposite sides of the state's attempt to set standards governing radiofrequency and microwave exposure. In the absence of federal guidelines, the New Jersey Commission on Radiation Protection of the state Department of Environmental Protection has held public hearings recently before adopting a Radio Protection Guide.

The guide would set maximum exposure limits to electromagnetic energy of radio frequencies between 300 kilohertz and 100 gigahertz.

What Does That Mean? Electromagnetic radiation consists of waves of electric and magnetic energy moving together through space with the speed of light. Each wave has a wavelength--the distance between corresponding points of consecutive waves--and a frequency of vibration--the number of waves that pass a given point in a second. Frequencies are measured in hertz, with one hertz equal to one cycle per second. The higher the frequency and smaller the wavelength, the greater the energy.

The electromagnetic spectrum includes all the various forms of electromagnetic energy, from extrememly low frequency radiation with very long wavelengths, to x-rays and gamma rays which have extremely high frequencies and correspondingly short wavelengths. In between these extremes lie radio waves, microwaves, infrared radiation, visible light, and ultraviolet radiation.

Radiofrequency (or RF) radiation is found near the low-frequency end of the spectrum. The most familiar applications are AM and FM radio, television, CB radio, walkie-talkies, short wave radio and other communication devices. Less well-known but also important are devices that use RF radiation to heat material in the same way that a microwave oven cooks food.

Radiofrequency heaters and sealers are used to mold plastic, seal shoes and pocket books, and process foods. Diathermy is a medical application that uses RF energy to heat tissue below the surface of the body.

Microwave Radiation. Microwave radiation is electromagnetic radiation at the high-frequency end of the RF spectrum. In addition to microwave ovens, common uses of microwave energy are in the transmission of telephone and telegraph messages, in military and civilian radar systems, in the transmission of signals between satellites and earth stations and in the relay of signals in certain broadcasting operations such as subscription television.

Of the various forms of electromagnetic energy, x-rays and gamma rays present the greatest relative hazard because of their greater energy content and greater potential for damage. Known as ionizing radiation, x-rays and gamma rays have the ability to strip atoms and molecules of electrons, thus producing chemical alterations and the potential for damage to body tissue.

Other forms of electromagnetic radiation, such as RF and microwave, lack that ability and are often referred to as non-ionizing radiation. However, RF radiation can be hazardous due to its ability to heat biological tissue rapidly, and it is generally agreed that exposure to levels of RF energy of about 10 milliwatts per square centimeter or more can cause significant "cooking" of tissue. The two areas of the body that are particularly susceptible are the testes and the eyes, and there are known instances of cataracts and sterility from exposure to high levels of RF radiation.

There is considerable controversy in the scientific community, however, as to the biological effects of low level, or "non-thermal" RF energy, that is below the point of producing significant heating. Low-level effects reported and under investigation by researchers around the world, but not proven to everyone's satisfaction, include headaches, irritability, fatigue, cardiovascular effects, changes in hormone levels, effects on the blood-forming and immunological system, and reproductive effects.

Nub of the Argument. It is on the issue of biological effects--how safe is safe and at what point should standards be set--that Princeton residents involved in the recent hearings differ. Dr. Fred Sterzer, director of the microwave technology center at RCA Laboratories, and Dr. Henry Powsner, radiologist at Princeton Medical Center, are members of the N.J. Commission on Radiation Protection.

Appointed by the governor, the commission consists of five citizens and three DEP officials. Responsible for all types of radiation safety in the state, from x-ray procedures in hospitals to nuclear power plants, it has recently celebrated its 25th anniversary.

According to Dr. Sterzer, all eight members of the Commission felt that rules governing the rapidly proliferating use of radio frequency energy be adopted for New Jersey, a state which has a high concentration of transmission towers and many industrial applications. "The Commission would have much preferred that the federal government established a standard that in turn would be binding on the states," Dr. Sterzer says.

The Environmental Protection Agency has said it would establish some guidelines but has not done so; OSHA, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration responsible for workplace conditions has adopted a standard of 10 milliwatts per square centimeter which is not enforceable. Thus no enforceable standards exist, either for the general population or for the workplace.

The standard that Dr. Sterzer and his colleagues on the N.J. Commission on Radiation have proposed is the revised standard adopted in 1982 by the American National Standards Institute (ANSI). ANSI standards are intended as a guide to aid the manufacturer, the consumer and the general public and are not mandatory.

The 1982 ANSI safety levels with respect to human exposure to RF electromagnetic fields are lower than those adopted five years earlier and more complex. They take into account the fact that humans are more susceptible to RF electromagnetic energy at certain frequencies than at others and are therefore "frequency-dependent."

The Best Available. In response to criticism that the ANSI standards are heavily

"The jury is still out on the biological effects of low-level radiation."

About Drumthwacket

The microwave security system at Drumthwacket has been tested a number of times but not turned on officially yet. It is designed as a pulsed beam operating at a frequency level that permits a power density of 5 milliwatts per square centimeter of exposed flesh, under the ANSI and proposed New Jersey standards.

Measurements taken by the state when the system is turned on show a power density of 50 microwatts. Even allowing for a doubling of that density to take into account the on-off pulsing, it is far below what is permitted. The prefix "micro" indicates one millionth of a part, "milli" one thousandth, in a metric or related measurement system.

This Year's PJ&B Offering at McCarter Is a Fresh and Funny "Charley's Aunt"

Before "La Cage aux Folles" there was "Where's Charley?", a musical comedy based on Brandon Thomas' "Charley's Aunt," that is one of the original transvestite musicals, and PJ&B's selection for its 26th annual production.

The year is 1892 during the graduation festivities at Oxford University. Two roommates, Charley and Jack, want to host two young ladies, Amy and Kitty, but Charley's widowed aunt, who was supposed to serve as chaperone, has not appeared. Naturally, Charley ends up pretending to be his aunt, Donna Lucia D'Alvodorez, fresh back from Brazil ... "where the nuts come from." The plot complications of "Where's Charley" and the humor hinge largely upon the ridiculousness of a man impersonating a woman.

Every year, one ticks off the list of popular musicals Milton Lyon has directed for PJ&B and wonders what he could possibly do next; what is left for him to do? Although "Where's Charley?" was a typical PJ&B show in that it involved well over 100 people in the cast, chorus, dance corps, orchestra, crew, and production staff, it was a refreshing change, at least to this viewer, because it was not nearly as familiar as such old standards as "My Fair Lady" or last year's "Camelot." This meant the actors weren't competing with well-established images of the likes of Audrey Hepburn, Rex Harrison, and Richard Burton in the lead roles.

Not only was PJ&B's production of "Where's Charley?" a fresh change, I am also happy to report that it was extremely funny — producing perhaps the most sustained laughter McCarter Theatre has seen in quite some time. This can be attributed in part to George Abbott's clever book and Frank Loesser's music and lyrics, but it is more particularly due to John Watson Stewart's fine performance as Charley and his absolutely superb and wild performance as Charley's aunt.

From the moment he accepts flowers from the ladies and sticks them first under this arm, then down the front of his dress (blocking his face), Stewart's use of props for comic effect was among the best I've seen. He was similarly hilarious with his fan, not only fluttering it madly, but using it at one point as a dustpan and at another as a weapon with which to fend off his suitors.

Charley has all the best lines of the show, and Watson let none of them go to waste. His timing was wonderful when delivering such gems as, "Be gone, my good man, and don't bother me any longer," and, in answer to the real Donna Lucia's question, "What part of Brazil did you live in?" — "The residential part." And as if this weren't enough, Stewart brought the house down with his charming song-and-dance routine in the best known number of the show, "Once in Love with Amy." This was Stewart's second appearance with PJ&B (his first was in "Kiss Me Kate" in 1981), and we hope to see him in many more.

Backing up Stewart in a production that sometimes seemed overly long when he was offstage was an altogether fine cast, including C. Peter Kauzmann as Charley's earnest roommate Jack; Priscilla Orr Treadwell as Kitty; Derry Light, veteran star of nine PJ&B shows, as Amy; Ed Stout as Jack's rather appealing father; Michael W. Lawrence as the mean guardian of the two young ladies who in his greed tries to woo Charley's "aunt"; and Diana Crane as the lovely real aunt.

The choreography was once again by Joan Morton Lucas, the lighting by Don Ehman, the excellent period costumes by Marie Miller, and the beautiful sets — including a wood-panelled room at Oxford, a garden backed by an Oxford skyline, and a chandeliered ballroom — were by Robert Little. And once again, we're left wondering: what can they possibly do next?

'PIPPIN'

At Theatre Intime. Stephen Schwartz' musical "Pippin" will open this Thursday at Murray Theatre on the Princeton University campus in a production mounted by Theatre Intime. The show will play again this Friday and Saturday and the following week-end. Curtain-time is 8:30 each evening.

The score includes "Magic to Do" and "Corner of the Sky." The story tells of the young Pippin, son of a powerful king, and his efforts to hold his birthright.

COME ON IN ...

To "Dining Room." "I've always wanted to be a playwright, always had it in the back of my mind," says A.R. Gurney, who wrote "The Dining Room," but somehow there was the need to support a wife and four children and so he taught for 23 years at M.I.T.

"The Dining Room," currently a big offering on the regional theatre circuit, will be given by the McCarter Theatre company starting next Wednesday, February 29 and continuing through March 18.

"Teaching illuminated my writing," Mr. Gurney has commented. "I never found the two wholly disparate."

'THREE PREMIERES'

By Princeton Ballet. "Three Premieres — Two Evenings" is the billing for the opening of the Princeton Ballet's spring season at McCarter on Tuesday, March 13, and the Nicholas Music Center at Rutgers Tuesday, April 10. Performances will feature three new works by contemporary choreographers.

Highlight of the evenings will be "Fast Company" by Stuart Sebastian, set to music by Erroll Garner and described as "dynamite" by New York Times critic Anna Kisselgoff when it was given recently by the Dayton Ballet. Mr. Sebastian is director of the Dayton.

Programs will also include "Trios," a ballet for eight dancers which Dermot Burke, assistant director and ballet master of the Princeton Ballet, has set to music by Prokofiev.

Christian Holder's "Song Without Words" is the choreographer's first work for the Princeton Ballet. He has done ballets for the Joffrey and other groups and last season did the costumes for the Princeton Ballet's "Khatchaturian Suite."

STUDENTS FORM GROUP

To Present Plays. The first presentation by JAG Productions, a new theatrical company composed of high school students in the Princeton area, will be given this Thursday at 8 in the Kirby Arts Center, Lawrenceville School.

The one-act play is "Bed," by Lawrenceville student Gus Liem, described as a tragicomedy. Its chief character is a man hospitaliz-

MUSIC

TWO PERFORMANCES

Of Beethoven's Ninth. The Westminster Symphonic Choir and the Princeton Ninth Symphony under conductor Michael Pratt on Friday and Saturday, March 2 and 3, at 8:30 p.m. in Princeton University's Alexander Hall. The concerts mark the first time that the two musical organizations join forces in a major performance.

The 175-voice Westminster Symphonic Choir has performed most of the great choral masterworks under major conductors. Known for its ability to blend with an orchestra, the choir is composed of men and women from Westminster Choir College, all of whom are music students as well as experienced performers.

Under the leadership of Westminster's principal conductor, Joseph Flummerfelt, the choir prepares major symphonic works for concerts and recordings. Through the years it has performed with the Philadelphia Orchestra, the National Symphony, the Boston Symphony, and many other major orchestras, including over 300 performances with the New York Philharmonic.

The performances of the Princeton University Orchestra have drawn enthusiastic audiences and favorable reviews. In addition to its concerts, the Orchestra has performed as the Opera Orchestra for many productions of the Princeton University Opera Theatre, most recently for Mozart's "Cosi fan tutte."

For the last seven years, Michael Pratt has conducted both the Orchestra and the Opera Theatre productions. He is a graduate of the Eastman School of Music and has been assistant to Gunther Schuller at the New England Conservatory and to Leonard Bernstein for a recording with the Boston Symphony. Mr. Pratt has been guest conductor for the last four years at the Manhattan School of Music in New York, the Aspen Music Festival and assistant conductor of the Cathedral Concert Orchestra in Newark.

The four soloists for Beethoven's Ninth Symphony will be Judith Nicosia, soprano; Mary Wescott, mezzo-soprano; George Gray, tenor, and Barry Ellison, baritone. All of the soloists have been heard in the area in solo recitals, as soloists in oratorios and in operas.

Tickets at $3 (students $1), with no reserved seating, are available at the Concert Office, Music Department, Princeton University, Princeton, 08544, telephone 452-5707); at the President's Office, Westminster Choir College, 924-7414, and at the door before each performance. For mail orders, make your check payable to Princeton University Orchestra, and send with a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Concert Office (address above).

CONCERT SUNDAY

For Children at YWCA. The Princeton High School orchestra, directed by Portia Sonnenfeld, will perform a free concert for children at the YMCA, Paul Robeson Place, on Sunday at 2 p.m.

The concert is part of the year-long effort to prepare for the international music competition in Vienna, Austria, this July. Princeton High School's orchestra and choir are among a select few chosen to represent the United States at the International Youth and Music Festival, supported and subsidized by the City of Vienna and the Austrian Ministry of Education and the Arts.

The children's program for Sunday will feature some of the selections that the orchestra will play at open-air concerts for Viennese audiences. Included are Brahms Hungarian Dances, a Haydn minuet, Scott Joplin's "The Entertainer," and country fiddle tunes.

Of the $180,000 needed for the trip, parents have pledged $102,000 and the students have raised $16,000 with various projects, including a "work month" which consumed nearly 4,000 musician hours. Next month the students plan to hold a marathon dance to make up a $35,000 deficit.

Sponsors are being sought for violinists and singers. The musicians will dance to the top 40 rather than Brahms or Haydn. For information on the concert or on sponsoring a student for the marathon dance, call Florence Burke at 924-5600.

Contributing support to the teenage competitors are such corporations as Tucker, Anthony and R.L. Day, Inc., and radio station WHWH. Dana Productions, Minute Press and Quidnet Capital Corporation.

Music-at-McCarter Presents Concert by Young String Trio; Individual Talents Have Not Yet Coalesced into Solid Ensemble

The fifth event of Music-at-McCarter's 1983-84 season featured an evening of string trios performed by three young masters of string literature. Gidon Kremer (violin), Kim Kashkashian (viola) and Yo-Yo Ma (cello) teamed up Monday evening to play works from the classical period and the twentieth century.

As solo artists, these performers have come to be recognized as being among the best in the world today. One glance at their lists of engagements with major orchestras and various record companies will affirm that fact. As a trio, though, they have not coalesced into a solid ensemble. They do not yet possess that "second sense" of reading each other through eye contact and mutual musical feeling which sets the best chamber ensembles apart from the others.

In this performance, Kremer was definitely the weak link. Throughout most of the concert his tone was unduly thin and lacked a definitive character. Kremer's playing had a feeling of hesitancy about it, giving the impression that he was not as confident about his playing as either Ma or Kashkashian. This resulted in balance problems in several works, and a very audible error in the Menuetto of Beethoven's Trio in C (Op. 87). His performance overall felt breathless and tense, especially in comparison to Ma, who was obviously far more at ease.

It should be noted, though, that Kremer's playing improved considerably in the Mozart Divertimento in E flat (K. 563). Compositionally the piece makes better use of the intrinsic qualities of the string trio, and Kremer was able to relax with it. As a result, the trio played with better ensemble, more precise intonation, nicely shaped phrases and more unified musicality.

Warm Viola Tones. Violist Kashkashian played with a warm, rich tone which blended well with Ma's. Being the middle instrument, she was often required to fill in harmonies, making frequent use of precisely played double, triple and quadruple stops. Kashkashian's technical fluency was spotlighted in the first movement of the Trio No. 1 (Op. 34) by Hindemith, by far the most demanding work of the program. The agility and enthusiasm with which she played this piece were indicative of her penchant for music of this century.

Although the other performers were very good in their own rights, no one could doubt that Ma was the most outstanding. His tone, his articulation and his phrasing all contributed to the magnificence of his playing. Beyond this, though, he performed with incredible ease, moving freely with the music, allowing it to flow through his instrument. The depth of his expressiveness nearly overshadowed that of his colleagues. This kindled the feeling that this trio, which excellent in many ways, is somewhat unbalanced musically.

Nothing has been said about the twelve-tone work by Ernst Krenek entitled (in translation), A Little Musical Bouquet in Honor of Johann Sebastian Bach. The work seemed contrived and far too cerebral to be aesthetically appealing. The concert notes listed several works whose opening themes were woven, by sheer coincidence of serial technique, into the fabric of this trio. None of this, save the BACH variants at the end, were apparent to the ear. However, the performers seemed to enjoy this little thematic game, and though the work was not particularly pleasing to this listener, it was nonetheless well played.

Following the Mozart Divertimento, this trio performed an unannounced encore which was equally as delightful as the Mozart, and left the audience with but a dim recollection of the esoteric sounds of Krenek and Hindemith, and of the problems experienced by Kremer.

A MICHAEL GRAVES DESIGN: Art Ventures, Princeton's newest gallery at 12 Nassau Street, provides a viewing area that is a work of art in its own right.

ART

ART VENTURES

Princeton's Newest Gallery. Although the walls are covered with paintings, prints and drawings, Princeton's newest gallery could stand on its own as a work of art. Impressive combinations of structural elements - curved walls that sweep around corners, soaring spaces washed with light, and countless small, carefully conceived functional and ornamental details join to create an environment that has the visual impact of a well-developed sculptural work.

There is a lot to look at. Color is introduced where you least expect it. Bright shapes accent stark white walls. Windows are often used as architectural accents -- complements to the carefully arranged spaces that frequently offer unexpected vistas. And, there is even a built-in work of art -- an enormous mural by the noted Princeton architect, Michael Graves.

The dramatically arranged, contemporary interior that is neatly contained within the quaint, Dutch-style architecture of 12 Nassau Street was once the offices of Michael Graves and, as such, represents one of the architect's impressive efforts. In fact, gallery owner William Krauss reports that the unusual space is, itself, an attraction. He explains that the office-cum-gallery draws architecture students by the dozen; students who come to look at and study a space Krauss describes as... "One of Graves' early post-modern efforts and one of the most beautifully crafted spaces anywhere."

A businessman who once trained as an architect, Krauss expresses enthusiasm for such details as the narrow window, set at an angle in the thick, masonry wall, that appears to carve a slab of light out of solid materials. And, even though its view is of a neighboring brick wall, he waxes poetic about its introduction of "texture as a decorative piece of my life."

The space also functions nicely as a setting for looking at art. The offices were designed to capture impressive quantities of natural light and, as such, make viewing an especially pleasant experience. And, although the walls serve as an attraction in their own right, they also provide a suitable and unobtrusive background for the varied works that are on display.

The current collection, a mixed media group show, includes the work of area artists such as photographer, Naomi Savage, painter, Thomas George and sculptor, Jane Teller. In addition, there are drawings, photographs, paintings and prints by Harry Callahan, Andy Warhol, Milton Avery and Herb Jackson, among others.

Future shows, however, will also include the work of young artists who are not yet established. Krauss explains that he hopes that by..."splicing the work of well known artists with that of those who are just beginning to attract attention," he will be able to attract an audience that will share his pleasure in the work of the newer artists while they enjoy the work of those who have already arrived.

At Princeton Gallery of Fine Art, American art of the 1930's and 40's -- works such as those featured in the current display, occupied a pivotal position in the art of this century. It was a period when romantic, regionalist imagery -- farms, country landscapes and the like -- were still popular. It was also an era when artists were reaching out beyond established styles to develop new modes of expression. As such, variety and change became the single most common characteristic at the time.

Variety, creative energy and lingering conservatism are reflected in the work of the five artists featured in this display. The then radical

A NEW LOOK is seen at The Rug and Furniture Mart since January, when Gil Hancock took ownership. Related to the store's original owners, the Yards, Mr. Hancock will continue to build the fine reputation associated with Ivy Manor showrooms and feature a large selection of 18th century reproductions.

IT'S NEW To Us

CHANGES AT IVY MANOR

Under New Management. A new look for spring can be seen at the Rug and Furniture Mart in the Princeton Shopping Center. A knowledgeable manufacturer's representative in the business for many years, Gil Hancock has exciting plans for the Ivy Manor showrooms which he took over at the beginning of January. Related by marriage to the shop's original owner, Roger Yard, whose company began in Flemington 50 years ago and later moved to Princeton, Mr. Hancock intends to build on the store's fine reputation by featuring some of the finest 18th century reproduction furniture available.

Shoppers will note some attractive changes in the 10,000 square foot showroom. Nine-by-twelve sections of different styles of carpeting, chic new wallpaper, rooms painted in deep magenta offsetting art deco pieces, and vignettes of the popularized country furniture are now more easily viewed. By spring, Mr. Hancock hopes to refurbish the entire store.

Originally from West Trenton, Mr. Hancock spent several years in the furniture business in Seattle and New Orleans representing three different companies. When he decided to move back east, the Rug and Furniture Mart was a natural progression in his career. His cousin, Sylvia Nini Yard, also works with him.

"What I would most like to emphasize here is quality and value. I am dedicated to both," explains the new owner, who devotes 16 work hours a day to achieving that goal. Famous brand names in furniture such as Lane, Simmonds, and Stratton, Hickory Chair, and Kittinger are on display in attractive groupings in the shop. The fabric section will yield the latest and the traditional designs by Waverly, Norman's of Salisbury, Schumacher, Robert Allen, Stroheim, Roman and Westgate.

The Rug and Furniture Mart offers full decorating services to its customers in addition to carpet cleaning, reupholstery and drapery service. The two interior decorators on the staff will see to such small details as ashtrays and pictures on the wall if the client so desires. Lovely Stiffel lamps will complement any groupings.

It is evident, as one wanders through the showrooms, that Mr. Hancock knows the business well. The country look, "American Digest," by Hickory Chair Company includes a line of handsome walnut cabinets, dining tables, and chairs.

"There is an explosion in the country furniture area. It is one of our biggest sellers," exclaims Mr. Hancock. A select pine Shaker cabinet, dining table, and eight chairs, sophisticated yet simple, by Heywood-Wakefield is on sale for less than half the original price. A storewide sale of floor samples will continue through next month. Terrific values in upholstered sofas and loveseats, and bedroom and dining room furniture can be found here.

Of special note is Lane's "Lido" group inspired by the Milan art festival and the 18th-century reproductions. A handsome pencil four poster bed, chests, and night tables and mirrors are on display in the window of the shop.

"We are so close to Bucks County here, and we respect the tradition of Princeton, the taste of Princetonians, who prefer the more traditional lines. They will be the mainstay of our business," promises Mr. Hancock, who also reveals that his prices are more than competitive.

The spring season will bring a huge new stock of furniture and a fine collection of summer indoor and outdoor pieces including wrought iron furniture.

It will not be all that warm until May so think about investing in the energy-saving electric blankets on sale now. The purist may prefer Home Decor's cotton flannel sheets.

"Please bring your lamp along when you come in to choose a shade," urges Mr. Katen, who has one of the largest selections of lampshades in town.

Art in Princeton

geometry of Werner Drewes, one of the first Bauhaus artists to work in this country, is combined with the lyrical, sun washed desert colors of avant garde painter, Raymond Jonson and the simplified realism that marks the work of Milton Avery.

There are also paintings by Clarence Carter and Ralph Rosenborg and, in both cases, the art comes as a surprise. Carter's recent work, symbolic, often surrealistic, highly finished works contrast strongly with the more conventional, regionalist watercolor landscapes and the precisionist industrial study; "Coal Docks at Superior." Although Rosenborg ultimately became a painter of abstracted landscape, he was a most advanced painter by the standards of the 40's and his paintings in this collection seem to anticipate later styles.

Wilcox Paintings at Art Masters. Jarvis Wilcox's essentially traditional paintings are a happy mixture of color and surface. Using a palette knife rather than a brush, Wilcox lays pieces of rich, crisp color on his canvas, often using the knife to create heavy impasto effects. The eclectic combination of subject matter includes still life, interiors, landscape and figurative works. And, although they fall within the bounds of tradition, there is a sharpness of contrast and an intensity that makes them distinctive.

The artist is adept at capturing light and developing color gestures within the limitations of an essentially realistic palette. And, the subjects often exceed the bounds of convention. Along with zinnias and wineglasses there are glittering tin cans and other ordinary, everyday items. Toothbrushes, telephones, even a bathroom faucet take on a certain glamour in these well-conceived and well-executed paintings.

At Full House, Chinese Paintings. People who have travelled to China are especially fond of the paintings by Liu-Tse Ming that are the featured display. The earth-toned palette that dominates the collection of landscape and figurative works reflect the actual landscape of the artist's native terrain. Oils and brush drawings, combinations of the traditional Chinese idiom and a stronger primitive statement create interesting balances in renditions of such subjects as grave figures and more classical still life.

Anna Continos's watercolors -- nicely composed and expertly painted still lifes and landscapes -- are an especially fine example of the use of that medium. Controlled washes and eloquent linear effects are used to create romantic vignettes that are consistently and pleasingly developed.

—Helen Schwartz

Harvard Five Gets First Win Here in 25 Years; Tigers Hang On to One-Game Lead in Ivy Race

All the experts seemed to agree that the race for the Ivy League basketball title would be a wide-open affair this season, and just when Princeton had a chance to prove everyone wrong, it came up short.

After beating Penn at home last Tuesday, the Tigers seemed to have a clear road to the title, needing only to capture their four remaining home games. Since neither of the four teams, Dartmouth, Harvard, Brown and Yale, had ever won a game in Jadwin, and darn few in its predecessor, Dillon Gym, that did not seem to much to ask.

DRIVING FOR TWO: Kevin Mullin drives around Howie Levy for a basket in the second half against Harvard Saturday night, but his 22 points were not enough to prevent Princeton from being upset, 55-50 by the Crimson. (W.L. Bill Allen photo)

SPORTS

The Orange and Black kept the streak alive against Dartmouth last Friday night, winning 61-49, but the following evening, it was upset by Harvard, 55-50. That victory was the first by the Crimson here since a 59-54 triumph in 1958 against a Cappy Cappon team.

Had Princeton won, it would have had a hammerlock on first place, ahead by two games with just four to play. As it is, the Tigers are still ahead by one, because Brown could not beat Cornell at Ithaca, and Harvard lost to Penn Friday night.

Thus, Cornell, Brown and Harvard are all one game behind. Penn, which has had a similar streak against the four New England teams in the Palestra lost to Dartmouth Saturday for the first time in 24 years.

Next weekend will find the Orange and Black on its final road trip, playing Cornell Friday and Columbia Saturday. It will close out its season against Yale and Brown in Jadwin the first weekend in March.

Given their one game lead, the Tigers still remain the team to beat, and at least a split in their road games would make it very difficult for anyone to catch them. It's doubtful any of the other three will win all four.

The league is so balanced at the moment, that almost every Ivy game still to be played should be rated as a toss-up.

Cornell must play at Harvard, the Crimson must play at Brown, and the Bruins must play here. A tie is a possibility, and would be settled with a playoff after the season ended.

Princeton rolled over Cornell by 20 just 10 days ago, but don't look for anything like that in Ithaca. The Big Red won at home a year ago by 12, and lost here. The Lions are sure to engage in another slowdown battle, and could easily reverse their 34-28 defeat two weeks ago if they get ahead early.

Free Throws Aid Harvard. In its 49-47 triumph over Princeton in Cambridge last month, Harvard had a 20-2 edge in free throws. Last Saturday it sank 19 of 19 to seal this contest. Princeton made just four of eight.

The Tigers led early, a couple of times by as many as six points, but could not hit consistently enough to blow the Crimson away early. At the half, the visitors were behind by just two, 24-22.

For the second night, Kevin Mullin was the big point man, tallying 22 points on nine of 16 shooting from the field. John Smyth had 12, Isaac Carter and Billy Ryan, eight apiece, but Smyth and Carter both shot below 50 percent. And Howie Levy was held scoreless for the first time this season, missing all eight of his shots from the field.

Meanwhile, the Cantabs got 19 points and nine rebounds from Joe Carrabino, and 16 more from Bob Ferry, and took command right away in the second half. It led 32-26, with a 10-2 outburst early in the final 20 minutes, and only allowed the Tigers a brief 49-36 lead with 6:36 left, before pulling in front for good.

Harvard was guilty of 17 turnovers in the contest, but held on in spite of its poor ball handling.

Twice the Orange and Black pulled to within one as the final minutes ticked away, but Carrabino led a steady parade of Crimson players to the foul line to keep the lead intact. Never before in the history of the rivalry has Harvard won two games from Princeton in the same year, and if the Tigers are beaten out for this year's title, the Crimson would seem to have the best chance of pulling it off.

"Moon" Shines for Tigers. Mullin gave a stellar performance on Friday night against Dartmouth, scoring 29 points, two more than his career high set last Saturday against Cornell.

His 12 for 16 shooting from the floor, which produced 18 first-half points, was needed to offset some excellent shooting by the Big Green, which stayed with the Orange and Black until the game's final minutes.

The visitors hit 63 per cent of their shots in the first 20 minutes to 58 percent for the Tigers. Dartmouth started with a 6-0 lead, and stayed ahead until a jump shot by Smyth gave Princeton a 20-19 lead with 7:14 left.

The half ended with the Tigers on top, 30-27, thanks to a half court, last-second bomb by Mullin that banked off the glass and went in.

Princeton quickly expanded that advantage to seven points early in the second half, but Dartmouth made one more run before yielding. Sparked by the fine inside shooting of senior forward Brian Burke, who finished with 20 points, the Big Green rallied to tie the score at 37-37 with about nine minutes left.

From that point Mullin and Smyth combined on the next 10 Princeton points to hold off the Dartmouth charge, and give the Tigers a six-point lead, 47-41. Smyth, playing with a bruised left heel, that has bothered him for more than a month, hit three key shots during this stretch. He finished with 10 points.

When Levy hit a basket with less than four minutes remaining to make it 49-43, Carril ordered a slowdown, forcing Dartmouth to go after the ball. Thereafter, Princeton hit a couple of easy lay-ups, and eight of nine from the foul line, as the Big Green fouled repeatedly.

In addition to Mullin's career high, Carter had one of his own, a more modest 12 points, but still very significant. He still takes some shots that has Carril shaking his head, but the junior forward has become a consistent threat to score from the outside.

HOCKEY SPLITS A PAIR

Beats Colgate, Loses to Maine. Princeton's men's hockey team gave its supporters a rare treat last Wednesday night, dumping a high-riding Colgate team, 8-2.

Perhaps it was the knowledge that they were playing their final game of the season before the hometown fans that spurred the Tigers on. Possibly, they were out to atone for an earlier season loss to the Red Raiders in which they blew a 6-0 lead. Whatever the reason, the Orange and Black put on one of its best performances of the season.

Unfortunately, coach Jim Higgins' skaters left whatever momentum they had behind when they flew to Orono, Maine for a contest with the Black Bears Saturday night, losing 5-4 in overtime. The loss dropped the Tigers to 6-16-1 with two games left to play.

Those two will come on the road this weekend against Dartmouth on Friday night and Harvard the following evening. Considering their games here 10 days ago, the Tigers would have the best opportunity of picking up a second win against the Big Green, and a slimmer chance of defeating Harvard on its own ice.

Believe it or not, Princeton still retains a mathematical chance of winning the league, and gaining a spot in the ECAC playoffs, but the chance is purely mathematical, involving a total collapse by Harvard. More than likely, the season will end in Cambridge this Saturday.

Last Saturday, a letdown in the second period hurt Princeton's chances of gaining its seventh victory of the season, against an undistinguished (12-19) Maine sextet. Its coach, Jack Semler, who was Higgins' predecessor here, has already announced he will not return next season.

Sophomore forward Tim Oshier provided the only first period tally by either team when he scored his first of two goals at the 12:23 mark. The home team then held Princeton scoreless for the next 20 minutes, while taking a 3-1 lead.

Goals by Todd Ladda on a power play and freshman David Downing less than two minutes apart brought the Orange and Black even in the third. Maine took a brief 4-3 lead later on, but Oshier's second tally at 13:11 sent the contest into overtime. Only 63 seconds remained in that 10-minute session when the Black Bears got the winning score.

For a change Princeton outshot its opponents. Wally McDonough was in the nets all the way for the Tigers, and made 43 saves.

Fine Finale for Wally. He toiled in relative obscurity for three years, as the back-up goaltender to the incomparable Ron Dennis. As a starter in his senior year, his record to date is only 4-14-1, with a goals-against average approaching five per game.

But Wally McDonough will be missed next season. He was a much better goalie than the statistics will ever show, proving it again in the Tigers' final home game of the season last Wednesday.

Colgate came to Baker Rink with a 17-10-1 record, and a good shot at making the ECAC playoffs in March. One of those victories came against the Tigers in the consolation round of the Syracuse Tournament. The Red Raiders rallied from a 6-0 deficit to win, 7-6, in overtime.

It was a different story this time. The Orange and Black again got off to an early lead, scoring three times in the first period. The visitors tallied early in the second, but did not score again until Princeton had a 7-1 lead late in the third.

McDonough was the difference, stopping 30 of 31 shots, in the first two periods, and 43 for the game. Setting up well on power play opportunities, Colgate had several good chances, but McDonough would not be beaten, except once when a slapshot from just inside the blue line seemed to catch him by surprise.

He was almost perfect thereafter, allowing a final goal with less than four minutes left that he had absolutely no chance on. McDonough and the team's only other senior, defenseman Rick Valdarchi, were cited between periods, and the only disappointment of the night was that just 555 fans showed up to cheer.

Princeton's offense clicked also, led by freshman Tim Cole's hat trick, only the second one this season for the team, and a pair of goals by Oshier, one on a breakaway with the Tigers shorthanded. Todd Ladda, Allan Gray and Bill Brady also scored.

THIRD TITLE IN SIGHT

For Women's Hockey Team. Unlike the Princeton men's hockey team which is struggling through another mediocre season, the women's squad is on the verge of clinching its third straight Ivy title.

The women defeated Brown last Saturday, 10-4, to clinch at least a tie for first, and should be able to register another victory against second-place Dartmouth Friday night to clinch the top spot. The regular season ends Sunday afternoon against Harvard. Both games are in Baker Rink.

In addition to the Brown triumph, the Tigers also knocked off Northeastern, 4-3, on Sunday, for their first victory ever over the Huskies. All four goals came off power play opportunities. After a scoreless first period, junior Suzanne McGilvray got the Tigers on the board with a goal 42 seconds into the second period.

The visitors quickly countered with a pair less than a minute apart to take a 2-1 lead. However, later in the period, Princeton also scored twice in less than 60 seconds to go back in front, 3-2. Syrena Carlbom and Cynthia Griffin scored for the Orange and Black.

Northeastern tied the score at 3-3, midway through the third, but Laura Halldorson put in the winning tally at 14:49. Patti Kazmaier had three assists. Goalie Simone Feinhandler made 26 saves. Patti Hunt had 30 for the Huskies.

The pair of victories raised the team's record to 11-4 overall, 6-0 in Ivy play. Coach Bill Quackenbush has a 32-3 record in Ivy play the last three years.

Another first-place finish would put Princeton into the playoffs again, against the same three teams that played last year, Providence, New Hampshire and Northeastern. Princeton's four losses this season have come against Providence, three times, and New Hampshire.

PDS VS. PENNINGTON

In Prep 'B' Semifinals. The Princeton Day basketball team is two games away from proving it is the best among the Prep 'B' basketball teams in the state.

The Panthers will play Pennington this Wednesday in the semi-finals at Pennington to determine who will advance to the final round Saturday. Rutgers Prep and Dwight-Englewood are in the other bracket. If past performances are any indication, PDS has an edge; it defeated the Raiders, 72-58, last month.

PDS advanced with a 62-33 rout of Wardlaw on Saturday at PDS. The visitors actually led the Panthers, 12-10, in the first period, but it was all downhill from there.

The Blue and White outscored Wardlaw, 24-6 to take a 34-18 lead at halftime. In the third quarter, Wardlaw never got a single point, while PDS added 16 to lead 50-18 at the end of three.

Andy Bing's 14 points led the home team, Frank Little, Scott Roberts and Lynch Hunt contributed 10 apiece.

PDS warmed up for the contest with a 57-45 victory over Academy of New Church the day before. It trailed, 30-27, at halftime, but took a two-point lead at the end of three periods, and outscored ANC, 15-5, in the final quarter. Jon McConaughy and Bing shared scoring honors with 11 apiece.

PHS FIVE ENDS 6-12

Wait 'til Next Year. With a 52-46 loss to West Windsor last week, the Princeton High School basketball team ended its season with a 6-12 record. The .333 average was a disappointment to coach Marvin Trotman and to the players — but not wholly unexpected.

Before the start of the season, Trotman had commented, "When you look at the long range, I think we're a year away; I'm looking for big things next year. Right now we are a young team, short on experience. It will depend on how quickly we jell."

As a team, the Little Tigers never did coalesce. The natural floor leader that Trotman was searching for did not emerge; the injury in the fifth game to sophomore starter Marvin Trotman Jr., upon whom his father was depending to bolster the backcourt, hurt the team; the team had problems mastering the man-to-man defense that Trotman favors; there were constant changes in the starting lineup as Trotman sought to find a cohesive unit; all these factors worked against the Blue and White.

In the Colonial Valley Conference League, PHS finished in a three-way tie for fifth place with Hightstown and McCorristin. All compiled 4-6 league marks. Ewing, the pre-season favorite, led by standout Tom Berry, did not disappoint its followers. It finished on top with a 10-0 league record. Overall, the Blue Devils are 18-3.

Notre Dame finished a game behind in the league at 9-1, West Windsor was third at 7-3, while Hamilton and Steinert were tied for fourth at 6-4.

In regular season play, PHS defeated Lawrence and Hopewell Valley twice each. Both teams finished on the bottom in the league with 1-9 records. Its other two wins were back-to-back victories over Hightstown and McCorristin in midseason — the only time the Little Tigers were able to win two in a row.

In the Mercer County Tournament now in progress, Princeton High was eliminated in the preliminary round by Peddie, 55-54.

Green, Young Return. So it is on to next year with its high hopes for greater success. The 1984-85 team will be built around Keith Green and Freddie Young and Trotman. Green is one of the premier jumpers in the county and was this year's leading scorer for PHS with 256 points — a 14.2 average. One of Trotman's consistent complaints during the season was his team's inability to get Green the ball as often as he would have liked.

A deadly outside shooter, Young was second in scoring with 243 points and a 13.5 average. He reached 20 points or higher on three occasions — the team's season high was Green's 25 in a 10-point win over McCorristin — as he and Green were the heart and soul of the offense.

Trotman reached double figures in the first three games but was sidelined for the season with an ankle injury during a 52-23 win over Hopewell.

Two of four seniors on the team are hard-working Jon Lysaker and Jon Davidson. At 6-7, Davidson, a transfer from Pennington School, had the height but not the strength to be a factor under the boards. The other seniors are two husky former football players in the PHS backfield, Jason Petrone and Albino Nini. Both saw limited action, although Nini started to come on near the end of the season, hitting for 11 points against Lawrence and 10 in the finale with West Windsor.

Next year should be the year of the Little Tigers. The league is due to be expanded again into a two-tier system where the smaller schools such as PHS, Hopewell and Lawrence will have their own division and the larger schools will have theirs.

Final Period Decides. In the final game of the season Thursday against West Windsor, PHS exhibited its inclination to fade in the final period. PHS had fought back from a 33-24 halftime deficit by outscoring the Pirates 14-4 in the third period to take a 38-37 lead. In the final eight minutes, however, PHS could find the net for only eight points while WW was hitting for 15 for a 52-46 win and its fifth in a row. Green, Young and Nini all had 10 points to pace the Little Tiger offense.

Two days earlier, PHS picked on hapless Hopewell Valley (3-19) for a 48-33 win.

Led by Green's 17 points and Young's 13, PHS outscored the Bulldogs 31-13 in the second half. Chris Carlson and Bob Mikita combined for 29 points for Hopewell.

Region 5 matches rests in their two big men — 188-pounder Brett Van deBovenkamp and heavyweight Tamer El-Shakhs.

El-Shakhs has won 11 bouts, six by pins, and has lost five and tied one. Van deBovenkamp also has 11 wins, five by falls, and has lost six times.

Hun will compete in the state tournament for independent schools which will be held this weekend at Dwight-Englewood.

Todd Lipani will be a favorite to capture the 158-pound crown with his record of 17-2. Eleven of his victories ended in falls.

Two others that coach Dave Faus will be counting on for points are Rob Cobun, the Raiders' fine 141-pound wrestler who has a record of 12-7-2, including eight pins. Nick Wofsy has posted a 9-8-3 record in the 115-pound division.

PHS Routed in Finale. Princeton's final dual meet of the season last week against Lawrence was a barometer of the entire season. The Little Tigers were no match for the Cardinals, losing for the 14th time in 15 tries this year, 59-4. PHS failed to win a single bout but gained two draws for its four points. Marco Cucchi battled Lawrence's Scott Bard to an 8-8 standoff at 108 pounds and El-Shakhs and Cardinal heavyweight Bob Behremann wrestled to a 1-1 draw.

Of the remaining 10 bouts, Lawrence won six by pins and captured one more by forfeit and another by default. Senior Matt Cohen came closest to breaking the Cardinals' string when he lost a 5-4 decision at 170 pounds to Jason Brodowski.

In the Colonial Valley League, PHS finished second from the bottom above winless Hopewell Valley with a 1-7 mark. Hightstown won the CVC crown with a record of 8-1. Ewing, Hamilton and West Windsor were all tied for second place at 7-2.

Hun Wins Fourth Meet. Hun raised its record to 4-12-1 last week with a 33-24 victory over New Hope.

When New Hope scored consecutive pins at 170 and 188 pounds, it narrowed Hun's lead to 27-24, but it had no hope of winning when it forfeited at heavyweight. A 31-second pin by Cobun and Lipani's fall in 1:15 over Chris Anderson had staked Hun to a 227-12 lead.

Hun opened with a quick 12-0 lead when New Hope forfeited the first two bouts. Another winner for Hun was Steve Wolf who decisioned Tom Kroscavage, 7-1. Wofsy lost a free-wheeling 12-10 match to New Hope's Joe McKeever at 115 pounds.

Hun will end its regular season this Wednesday in a makeup match against Wardlaw.

HUN QUINTET UPSET

In Prep School Tournament. "We missed every chance to win the game," said Hun School basketball coach Bob Hendrickson Saturday, after his team had been upset, 59-58, by St. Benedict's of Newark in the semi-final round of the New Jersey Independent School Athletic Association A Division Tournament. Hun was the defending A Division champion.

The win sends the fourth-seeded St. Benedict's into the state championship game against Lawrenceville School this Wednesday. Lawrenceville, seeded second, defeated Peddie, 59-47, in the other semi-final battle.

Hun was scheduled to oppose Steinert in the quarter-final round of the Mercer County Tournament this week, but its ouster from the prep school tourney was a surprise.

Hun entered the contest with a 19-5 record. The visiting St. Benedict's squad had won only six of 18. But the Grey Bees took charge of the game, after falling behind, 15-8, in the first period, by outscoring Hun, 41-29, over the next two.

Normally a fine shooting team, Hun suddenly found a lid on the basket. Its shot from the field wouldn't drop. Even easy layups didn't go down. To add to the Raiders' woes, Hun also failed to score from the foul line.

Hun was barely over .500 from the charity stripe, converting 10 of 19. St. Benedict's in turn, won the game when it was able to sink 19 of 25 free throws.

HUN DRIVES FOR TWO: Hun's John Goeke (21) has position for a layup in Saturday's NJISAA Division A tournament game against St. Benedict's, despite the outstretched arms of Matt James, and as teammate John McDonough (20) looks on. The visiting Bees used superior foul shooting to shock first-seeded Hun, 59-58, and eliminated them from the tournament. Hun was the defending tournament champion.

Hendrickson observed that Hun had missed every chance to win the game. The last of these came with 12 seconds to play and Hun leading, 58-57. John Goeke went to the foul line to shoot a 1-and-1 but missed his first shot and a chance to seal the win.

St. Benedict's gained control of the ball and Sean McCray of the Grey Bees then sank two foul shots with five seconds left to give the visitors' their one-point margin.

Hun's three post-graduate students, who have led Hun all season, again paced the offense. Ted Bransfield from Pennsbury High connected for 15 points, Goeke from McCorristin added 14, while John McDonough from Christian Brothers Academy had 12.

Joe Dooley with a game-high 24 points, including 11 in the third period when St. Benedict's outscored Hun by eight, paced the victors.

LONG SEASON ENDS

For PHS Girls Quintet. A long season ended last week for the Princeton High School girls basketball team. Long only in terms of the number of wins; there were only three in 18 games.

In the Colonial Valley League, PHS finished second from the bottom with a 1-9 record, one game better than Lawrence which was 0-10 in league play. The League was won by Hightstown with a 9-1 record, edging three teams tied for second at 8-2: Ewing, McCorristin and Notre Dame.

In its season's finale, the Little Tigers dropped a 68-48 decision to West Windsor. The pivotal eight minutes of play came in the second period when the Pirates outscored the Little Tigers, 25-10.

Paige Walden, the most consistent scorer for coach Joyce Jones the past two seasons, paced PHS with 20. Monica Greenland added 11 and Tami Morton, 10.

Twenty-six points by Cindy Lombardo and 14 by Mary Ann Tagliaferri powered the 13-9 Pirates to their seventh consecutive win.

weighted in favor of industry, which provides most of the funding of the Institute, Dr. Sterzer points out that the committee that made up the RF guidelines was also composed of representatives from universities, consumer groups, insurance underwriters, and the federal government. "It was a major effort involving a large number of people," he says.

"It is impossible to mount such an effort in New Jersey, given the lack of funds and limited resources. We felt this was the best standard to have. It is not written in granite. Just as ANSI reviews its standards every five years, so will we."

Although the 1982 ANSI standard is lower than that of 1979 and is frequency-dependent, it is still not low enough to assuage the concerns of the Drumthwacket neighbors. According to Dr. Calvin Martin, the ANSI level is still "several thousand" microwatts higher than where many researchers are finding non-thermal, biological effects. Massachusetts has recently adopted guidelines half of that proposed by New Jersey, and the level expected to be adopted by Connecticut will also be lower, he thinks.

Dr. Martin and Mrs. Peggy Spanel and other residents argue that New Jersey should not adopt the ANSI standard and that it is "premature" to do so in the light of gathering evidence of health hazards.

"Industry is sneaking through an industry-devised standard."

No Consensus. "Among laboratory scientists there is no consensus as to what constitutes a safe threshhold," Dr. Martin asserts. "The jury is still out on the biological effects of low-level radiation. But if you are going to start somewhere (to set a standard), hold a real hearing and bring in the people who are doing the research."

Dr. Martin and Mrs. Spanel, both of whom attended one or the other of the public hearings held by the Commission, are critical of the make-up of the Commission and of the fact that the public was not properly notified of the hearings. Mrs. Spanel says she called every environmental and public interest group that she could think of, and not one had received notice of the two hearings, one held at Morris County College, the other at Gloucester County College.

She points out, as does Dr. Martin, that of the five public members of the Commission, two--the chairman and Dr. Sterzer--are with Bell Labs and RCA Labs, respectively, both companies with a stake in satellite communications, and a third--Dr. Powsner--is a radiologist experienced in ionizing but not in non-ionizing radiation.

"The people who are doing the work that contradicts the ANSI safety levels were not adequately represented on the Commission," Dr. Martin asserts. "Industry is sneaking through an industry-devised standard. Under this standard industry will continue to operate existing installations and install new ones. It will take the heart out of pending litigation."

Dr. Sterzer acknowledges that the public was not well notified about the hearings but says that was the responsibility of the DEP, not the Commission. Both he and Dr. Powsner disagree that the particular interests and vocations of the members limit their ability to deal intelligently with the issue at hand. "I believe the commission is made up of a number of individuals who are knowledgeable and who are going to be objective and work in the best interests of the public," Dr. Powsner says.

"We are currently with no radiation protection guide," he adds. "We need something now to protect people in industry who have no protection. We are better off having a guideline than none."

Action Is Needed. Both agree that the extent of the biological effects is not fully known and both are sympathetic to citizens' groups, such as the one in Vernon, N.J., which is alarmed about the high incidence of birth defects in their community. Many residents attribute the birth defects to the presence of clusters of satellite transmitting antennae.

"If you take the position you wait until you know everything," Dr. Sterzer remarks, "you won't do anything. 'The best is the enemy of the good'--that is the original prescription for inaction. "You do the best you can--you have to use common sense and try to find some balance."

Cancer Treatment. The Microwave Technology Center at RCA which Dr. Sterzer directs has been a pioneer in developing microwave applications for the successful treatment of breast cancer and brain tumors. Malignant tumors are often more sensitive to heat than normal tissues, and can be selectively heated to higher temperatures than surrounding tissue. It is therefore often possible to destroy cancers selectively, either by heat alone or by a combination of heat and radiation therapy.

Dr. Sterzer is concerned that the public not become fearful through media reports on the microwave controversy and brand all microwave applications as hazardous. He knows of instances in which cancer victims have refused localized hyperthemia which might have been life-saving because of pre-conceived fear of microwave.

Dr. Martin says that the issue of diathermy therapy should be separated from the question of setting standards for non-occupational ambient levels of radiofrequency and microwave. "People should be frightened," he says.

The Commission on Radiation Protection's Advisory Committee on Non-ionizing Radiation, of which Dr. Sterzer is chair, is currently in the process of sifting and weighing all the comments raised at the hearings and in writing by interested citizens. This committee will then make a report to the Commission which will either adopt or make some modification of the ANSI standard for New Jersey.

TO RENOVATE FRICK

With Foundation Grant. Princeton University has received a $300,000 grant from the W. M. Keck Foundation toward the renovation of The Henry C. Frick Chemical Laboratory.

The grant from the Los Angeles foundation will be used by the university for modernizing research and teaching spaces in the laboratory, which was constructed in 1929. Plans for the renovation include the expansion of the building's research laboratories and library, the improvement of existing teaching laboratories and the construction of a new teaching laboratory for introductory chemistry.

And My Microwave Oven?

The Bureau of Radiological Health of the Food and Drug Administration has regulated the manufacture of microwave ovens since 1971.

The Bureau has established a radiation safety standard that allows leakage up to 5 milliwatts per square centimeter at approximately two inches from the oven surface. The standard also requires ovens to have two independent interlock systems that prevent the oven from generating microwaves the moment the latch is released or the door of the oven is opened.

Lacking Sight but Not Vision, Gordon Gund Leads Quest for Eye Disease Research Funds

This is a portrait of a man of vision.

In the late 1960s Gordon Gund quit his job as a lending officer at Chase Manhattan Bank and plowed his money into real estate holdings and fledgling businesses — including such mundane ventures as candles, decorative prints, and pre-fabricated metal fireplaces. He prospered sufficiently to move his family to Griggstown and his business to Princeton (having the foresight, naturally, to purchase the building at 14 Nassau Street that houses his operation and to have a young architect named Michael Graves design the space and paint a mural on one spacious wall).

More recently he and his oldest brother, both sports enthusiasts, purchased the Minnesota North Stars of the National Hockey League. Just last year he turned his sights on the Cleveland Cavaliers, one of the most dismal teams in the National Basketball Association. The team was losing money, losing games, and had traded away its high draft choices — its only hope for the future. Gordon and George Gund, already owners of the arena in which the team played, had another vision. They would buy the team nobody else wanted if the NBA would restore its draft choices. The NBA agreed and the Gund brothers added another professional sports team to their collection.

This Saturday evening Gordon Gund will be on hand to help raise money for the New Jersey chapter of the Retinitis Pigmentosa Foundation, the national organization fighting blindness caused by a number of

Builder, Seeking to Erect 1,280 Homes on White Farm, Will Sue Township Unless Master Plan Is Amended

Princeton Township will be sued by a developer "without further notice" unless Township Committee introduces by March 22 an ordinance amending the Master Plan to provide for a planned unit development zone as described by the developer, and zoning the developer's own property for such a zone.

The property in question is a 128-acre parcel of land between Mercer and Stockton Streets known as the White Farm. Calton Homes, Inc., proposes to build 1,280 housing units on the property with "a substantial amount" of the units "affordable to families in the lower-income range."

In a February 23 letter to the Planning Board, Henry A. Hill, attorney for Calton, says an analysis by a team assembled by his law firm, shows the Township's Land Use ordinance to be "exclusionary," under the Mt. Laurel II housing decision.

The suit to be filed if Township Committee does not comply, will seek to have all Township land development ordinances declared invalid. In addition, Calton will ask the court to place the Township into "land use receivership to be administered by a court-appointed master" in accordance with Mt. Laurel.

The developer will also ask a "builder's remedy" allowing development of the property at a gross density of ten units per acre.

The letter bases the "exclusionary" charge on the fact that most of the Township is within a "growth area," as defined by the state, and is therefore required by Mt. Laurel to provide lower-income housing both for its own residents and a "fair share" of the prospactive need for this housing.

Most undeveloped Township land is zoned for single-family homes on large lots, and the cluster ordinance will not accommodate any lower-income housing, the letter continues.

The Township prohibits mobile homes, and has no mandatory set-asides (requiring developers to set aside a certain number of lower-income units) or density bonuses. The Land Use ordinance also has, Calton charges, "cost-generating provisions not related to public health and safety

Bomb Scare Hits PHS on Tuesday

Princeton High School was the scene of a bomb scare early Tuesday afternoon.

There was no actual bomb, but a beeping, electrical device was carried from the school shortly before 1 by a school official, placed on the front lawn, and covered with a plastic sheet. The school was not evacuated.

Police, meantime, had requested the aid of a bomb squad unit from Fort Dix. While waiting for the squad to arrive, they sealed off the entrance to the circular drive in front of the school. Vice-principal Norman Van Arsdalen patrolled the grounds out front, repeatedly warning gawking students to stay inside and away from the windows. Inside, Detectives James Agins and William Clark were conducting their investigation in the room where the device was uncovered.

Capt. John J. Bellow Jr., in charge of the police operation, remained outside, directing an occasional student or teacher leaving the school, and unaware of what was happening, away from the bomb site.

New Alignment for 92 Proposed by Princeton

The Department of Transportation has settled on five possible alternatives of Route 92 for further study, but still another method of moving traffic across the central part of the state has been proposed and is getting some attention.

Borough Mayor Barbara Sigmund spent much of the weekend talking to officials in Hightstown, East and West Windsor, Plainsboro, Cranbury and Princeton Township about a route suggested by Planning Board member Margen Penick. It is a route that combines the latest version of the CARS alternative, which runs east of Route 206 through Franklin Township, with the original preserved alignment from Route 1 to the Bomb experts from the 65th Explosive Ordinance Demolition unit at Fort Dix, escorted by police to the site, arrived around 1:50. They examined the bomb device. "Rather than take any chances," commented Capt. Bellow, "they placed a small explosive charge under the device and exploded it from a distance." The "bomb," he said, turned out to be railroad flares, surrounded by electrical wires, a dry cell battery and a beeping device. "It looked pretty authentic," commented Lt. Bellow, who had looked at the suspected bomb earlier.

Beeping Noise Heard. One of the students in the room where the bomb was first heard was junior Michelle Maryk.

She was sitting in the first-floor history class taught by Jeff Lucker, she said, when class members began to hear a beeping noise. "We thought at first it was some guy's watch, but it wasn't, she said. "We asked the teacher what it was and where it was coming from."

The class soon determined that the noise was coming from a corner of the room containing a bookshelf and boxes. "The teacher said that he didn't think he wanted to check, and we all began to laugh — nervously," continued Michelle.

"One guy decided to check it out," she said. "He stood on a little chair and found a red shoe box. He opened it up and there was a note inside."

The note, made up from letters cut from a magazine, read "You have five minutes to live." There was some kind of electrical apparatus inside the box.

"I strongly advise we get out of the room," Mr. Lucker told his class, when shown the box. He took it to the main office while the students stood outside in the hall.

"Someone — I think it was Vice-Principal Van Arsdalen — carried it out and placed it on the front lawn," said Michelle. The same classroom, she reported, has been plagued with fireworks going off. "It seems to be directed at the teacher which I can't understand because he is such a nice guy."

Capt. Bellow commented that the police investigation of the incident will continue.

SEWER BAN FAILS

In Township Vote. The proposed sewer connection ban, sought by the Environmental Commission and several residents concerned about the state of Princeton sewers, did not pass Township Committee Monday night.

In the absence of Committeewoman Gail Firestone, a resolution proposing to extend a no-connection zone to the entire Harry's Brook basin and to a design overflow manhole on Elm Road and Westerly Way resulted in a tie vote. Committeewoman Barbara Cantril and Committeeman William Cherry voted for the proposal, with Mayor Winthrop S. Pike and Committeeman Richard Schoch opposed.

Mayor Pike explained that he was not convinced of the necessity of such a ban at the present time, but he did not rule out the possibility if sufficient progress was not made in repairing the sewers and conditions should warrant establishing a no-connection zone at a later date. Township resident Dwight O. North, a retired engineer and longtime watchdog of Princeton's sewers, made the presentation on the need for the ban to Township Committee.

Mr. North reiterated his position that at the rate the municipalities have elected to repair the sewers it will take 20 years before the job is done. Meanwhile he strongly advocates that no additional sewage be permitted, particularly in areas in which conditions are particularly bad.

Builders Protest Ban. Earlier in the evening several builders came before Committee to protest the imposition of the ban. Among them was Benedict Yedlin, who noted that the 1973 sewer moratorium "did not noticeably improve the situation." The impact of a connection ban now would result in the loss of needed sewer tie-in fees for repair, he said, noting that in his particular project that came to $104,000. Mr. Yedlin said that 37 houses built and occupied over a three-year period would add less that one percent to sewer capacity.

Bond Ordinance Approved. As its main business of the evening, Township Committee approved a bond ordinance of $675,996 as the first installment of the five-year pay back of its share of the Stony Brook Regional Sewer Authority underbilling. It also approved a sewer user fee of $3.21 per 100 cubic feet of water for 1983 and adopted a 6.5 percent index rate CAP to the municipal budget.

Additionally, Township Committee approved a half-year tax abatement for Trinity Church for property it has purchased on Mountain Avenue for the assistant rector, and accepted a recently constructed part of Wendover Drive into the public road system.

After hearing a proposal by Hinda Winawer of the Coalition for Nuclear Disarmament, Committee approved a proposal that Princeton and the Soviet town of Shchekino be "paired" in a non-political gesture of peace. Ms. Winawer said that between 35 and 50 towns in New Jersey were taking part in this pairing project, including Lawrence Township and Newark. She said that correspondence would be established between the two towns and pamphlets about Princeton and examples of children's art work would be among the items that might be sent from here.

Committeeman Schoch moved the resolution pairing Princeton with Schchekino. Mayor Pike seconded his motion and it was carried unanimously.

In work session, Township Committee also voted itself an increase in salary. Although the formal resolution has yet to be drawn up and formally voted, Committee proposes that the mayor receive $5,000 and committee members $3,575. Mayor Pike, who said during budget deliberations that he was opposed to an increase, is currently receiving $3,500, committee members $2,500.

WERE METERS WORKING?

Borough Raises Questions. Arithmetic leading to underbilling Princeton for sewer use from 1980 to 1983 was based on an "extremely unreliable system," Borough Mayor Barbara Sigmund declared this week, releasing figures assembled by Borough engineer George Olexa and Borough attorney Walter Bliss.

In the infamous Meter Number Six, whose meter readings were multiplied by a factor of 100 instead of 1000, resulting in the underbilling, there are two meters. A low-flow meter measures flow when the rate is under 2.6 million gallons per day (mgd). A high meter is designed to take over automatically when the flow goes over 2.6 mgd.

The Olexa-Bliss investigations showed that the low meter sometimes registered totals over 2.6, and the automatic kick-over to the high meter never occurred. Also, although 1980 was a dry year, it was the only year when the high meter showed any measurement at all.

Because of that, none of the four muncipalities in the Stony Brook Regional Sewerage Authority should have paid as much as they did in 1980-81, Mayor Sigmund stated.

The Authority's revised figures raise both meters by a factor of 10, the Olexa-Bliss team found, but the high meter should have been multiplied by 1000, and no adjustment for this was made in the revised figures.

They also found that sometimes the low meter was multiplied by 1000, but often only by 100, and the multiplier varied even within the same column of figures.

Potential Controls. Mayor Sigmund met late Tuesday afternoon with mayors of the other three municipalities in the Authority — Winthrop Pike (Princeton Township); Stanley Perrine (West Windsor) and Howard Bellizio (South Brunswick).

She invited them to discuss two problems: cost of service and potential controls over the system. Most governing bodies have set up a system of review of authorities like the Sewerage Authority. Mayor Sigmund said, and she planned to ask the other mayors their opinions of possible methods of control.

She reported that ELSA — the Ewing Lawrence Sewerage Authority — with a 10 mgd plant, compared to Stony Brook's 7.5 mgd — has an average annual cost per collection unit (home or place of business) of $234. Borough users pay an average annual cost of $454.90, and that figure does not include the $250,000 set aside by the Borough for sewer repair.

Also, Ewing itself pays $13.80 per cubic foot and the Borough, $27. Lawrence users pay a flat rate.

John McGee, head of the Authority and the Township's representative, replied by letter this week to Mayor Sigmund's statements last week challenging Authority billing procedures. She asked why charges aren't made on the basis of actual flow, instead of on a percentage of flow assigned to a given municipality.

In his reply, Mr. McGee said the Authority expects a report in the next six weeks from CFM, Inc., retained to study meters. "Internal procedures have been and are being formulated in an attempt to assure that our flow-recording devices are as accurate as sound engineering practices can produce."

He outlined procedures for developing the 1984 budget, pointing out that a special budget workshop last October was held to solicit public comments, followed by budget adoption at a public meeting.

"Our only response to your notice that Princeton Borough will not pay its first quarter billing, is that the bill was due February 15 and should it remain unpaid for 30 days, the Borough will be in default, and interest will accrue at an annual rate of 10 percent."

The reply, Mayor Sigmund said, does not speak to her request for a zero-base budget, nor does it explain why the Borough's charges were almost three times as much as they were in 1978, before the Authority's new plant went on line.

She met with Mr. McGee; the Authority's lawyer, Allen Porter; the Borough representative, Robert Mills; Mr. Olexa and Mr. Bliss Monday to ask again for the reasons behind the costs.

The most helpful part of the meeting, she reported later, was a discussion about which parts should be fixed, and which should be flow-related.

For School Board

Contests developed at the last moment in both Borough and Township for the 1984 seats on the school board. Election is Tuesday, April 3.

In the Borough, Tatiana Ermolaev, 30 N. Stanworth Drive, has filed to oppose Corinne Kyle, 14 Hamilton. There is one seat available to a Borough representative this year. Allen ("Skip") Grossman is not running for a second term.

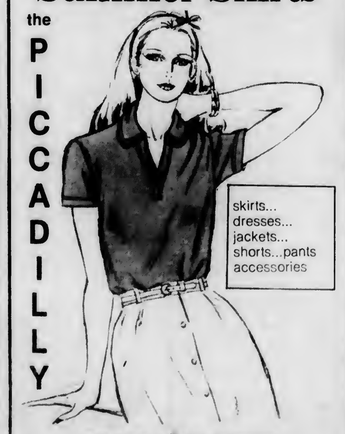
In the Township, Sharon Muzyk, 243 State Road; Hugh Brandt, 61 Bertrand Drive and Harry Levine, 147 Crestview, will run for the pair of Township seats available. Both Mr. Levine and Mr. Brandt are incumbents. Mr. Brandt was appointed to fill out the term of Dale Madden when Mr. Madden resigned.

FROM EDGERSTOUNE

Residents' Protests. Two key protests were expressed Sunday at the organization meeting of the Edgerstoune Area Association, formed in response to plans for the development of the former Russell estate off Edgerstoune Road. The meeting was held in the auditorium of the Hun School, which has joined the Association.

First, residents do not want a road leading from the development into Edgerstoune; second, they are "strongly opposed" to extending Edgerstoune so that it connects with Rosedale.

"If they pour traffic onto Edgerstoune, there will be lots of pressure to open it up to Rosedale," warns William McCleery, 317 Edgerstoune. He compared traffic pressures to "a boil with a hard time bursting."



"We're not asking the Planning Board to reject the development," explains Mrs. Harry Sayen, 167 Edgerstoune. "We know the property is going to be developed."

She pointed out that, so far as residents know, there is no Township specific ordinance dealing with what is essentially land-locked property. She said that, in her view, the burden should be on the developer to prove that the road is needed.

"The upper part of Edgerstoune is one of the loveliest streets in America, with rare lindens, hedges and evergreens," she continued. "It would be absolutely wrecked by traffic. Traffic is already dense, and we have 22 to 25 school buses gunning down here every morning — both for public schools and because the Hun School has about 350 day students."

Residents of four streets — Winant, Russell, Hun and Edgerstoune — were invited to join the Association. So far, Mrs. Sayen says, over 60 percent of the residents — about 60 households — have signed a protesting petition to the Planning Board. Approximately 75 people attended Sunday's meeting.

A steering committee will recommend a chair and officers, and a finance committee will raise money to hire an attorney.

The group expects to appear when the Environmental Design Review Committee hears the developer's plans Wednesday, March 14, and will also attend the April Planning Board meeting when the designs will be before the board.

PSYCHOLOGICAL TESTS?

No More, Says Board. A moratorium of indefinite length has been declared by the school board on psychological testing of students by outside organizations. The action follows four protests, by parents, of tests given to Middle School students by Educational Testing Service.

Superintendent Paul Houston said this week that all Middle School parents received two-page letters describing the tests and asking whether they wanted their children to participate. Only about 35 percent of the student body did so, he said.

Test questions included such items as "How often do you feel mixed-up about yourself?" or "Do girls like you?" Students were told they need not answer any question if they did not want to, Dr. Houston said.

The ETS study was discussed by the board and approved at a public meeting last fall following review by the board's program committee, the Superintendent said. Although the test was first given last November, he added, no complaints were received until January.

"We were interested because the ETS study was

Brooke in Triangle

Princeton freshman Brooke Shields is among the 65 students chosen to be in "Revel Without a Pause," the 1984 musical to be produced later this spring by Princeton University's Triangle Club.

The actress-model was one of about 150 who tried out, and one of the 85 who were called back for a second try. For her try-out, she sang "Cabaret." Students were asked to sing any song, and to do a brief routine from "Revel."

The 65 students were chosen by Miriam Fond, professional director for Triangle; choreographer Eddie Wright and three Triangle Club officers. So far, no parts have been assigned.

about the way kids make the transition into adolescence — do some make it easier than others? All we wanted was a profile of the kind of kid who has trouble. We would not have had the replies of individual students."

He said the schools look for two things when outsiders ask to give tests: is it the kind of test the school can benefit from, and will it take up too much time? The schools must also, of course, approve the kind of test.

If the schools ever again decide to allow outside testers, he said, the board may set up a commitee consisting of psychologists from, perhaps, ETS, Princeton University or Rutgers to review the material before it goes to the program committee and then to the board.

"Frankly," Dr. Houston said, "what we get out of these tests is marginal — it's somebody else's study, after all — and we just don't need the hassle."

NOW I'M AN AMERICAN: Korean-born Christian Goettinger, 7, seated left on the rim of a jury box, was sworn into American citizenship in ceremonies held February 21. His first-grade teacher at Riverside, Christa Rounds (standing) took the class to the U.S. District Courtroom in Trenton to watch the proceedings. They were ushered into the jury box, each holding flags distributed by the Daughters of the American Revolution. Chris is the adopted son of Ronald and Sandra Goettinger of Snowden Lane.

NASSAU INN BILKED

By Bogus Guest. The Nassau Inn was bilked of more than $400 in services last week by a smooth-talking guest who had identified himself as an employee of the Ford Motor Company.

Later arrested in Freehold on a warrant from Borough police, and charged with theft of services, is Jonathan Thornton, 52, whose last known address is Middletown, N.Y. He was later released in $500 bail and is scheduled to appear in court March 7.

According to police, Thornton registered at the hotel early last week as Jack Thornton. He listed his employee as Ford Motor Company and his address as Dearborn, Mich. He and a male companion were taken to their room, police said. They had dinner and drinks at the Inn, running up a $419 bill.

The next afternoon, one of the registration clerks received a call from the bar for verification of a bar bill from Mr. Thornton. Noting his bill was more than $400, the clerk called Ford Motor Company. A check revealed it had no information on a Mr. Thornton.

When the clerk called Mr. Thornton, he replied that there must be some mistake. He would get hold of his secretary at Ford who would straighten things out, he assured the clerk. A few minutes later someone noticed the two suspects get into a car and drive away.

A major break in Thornton's apprehension, Capt. John Bellow reported, was one of the hotel clerks obtaining the registration number of the suspects' car. A computer check revealed the car had been rented in Freehold by Thornton — who charged the bill to Ford Motor Company. The ability of Det. Randy Sutton to trace, and talk to the recipients of a number of telephone calls that Thornton had made from his hotel room was also instrumental in his apprehension, Capt. Bellow said.

His companion at the Inn was not charged. "He didn't know what was going on. He was just an invited guest of Thornton," Capt. Bellow added. "He thought he was a big time operator."

Police said at one time, Thornton held a Ford dealership in New York.

WHERE'S THE BEEF?

Market Flushes Shoplifter. Clerks at Davidson's Market on Nassau Street last week noticed that three packages of beef filets, valued at $35 to $40 each, had disappeared from the meat display counter but that none had been checked out at the register. A suspect had been observed in the store on three previous occasions, and when he came in the fourth time the manager was ready. He kept him under observation.

When the suspect left the store the manager followed him outside. He fled down an alley adjacent to the market toward the Park Place lot when he noticed the manager had followed him, dropping two packages of eye roasts as he ran, but managing to make good his escape.

He is described as a black male, 5-6 to 6-0 tall, 20 to 25, with close-cropped hair and a close-cropped goatee. He was wearing a maroon and purple ski-type jacket and dark brown trousers.

The market placed the value of the meat stolen at $173.

SUITE ENTERED

In Foulke Hall. An unlocked students' suite in Foulke Hall on the Princeton University campus was entered Thursday between noon and 3 when one of the victims returned. She discovered the door locked and noticed that desk drawers inside had been pulled out and rifled.

There were four victims. One lost $25 and a $20 calculator; a second two gold rings, a gold necklace, a jewelry box containing about 15 pairs of earrings, and two calculators with a combined value of $770; a third a 35 mm camera, two Walkman type radios, a gold necklace, silver bracelets and approximately 20 pairs of earrings worth a combined $525; while a fourth lost a $20 bill.

second-floor apartment on Birch Avenue was entered Monday between 8 a.m. and 10 in the evening. Township police report that the intruder climbed a fire escape on the side of the building to reach and break a kitchen window.

Stolen were two television sets and a portable stereo cassette and radio player valued at approximately $600. Police report that a neighbor had heard noises between 9 and 9:30 in the evening but did not call police.

ARREST FOLLOWS INSPECTION VIOLATION. A motor vehicle stop for an inspection violation led to the arrest last week of two Trenton residents who were later charged with possession of stolen property.

After Ptl. Ralph Terracciano made the stop on Nassau Street, he noticed a white sweater sticking out of a plastic bag on the rear seat, while waiting for the driver to produce his identification. The sweater still bore a price tag.

Ptl. Terracciano asked the driver if he had a sales slip for the sweater and when he was unable to produce one, he noticed two white knit sweaters on the rear seat. Both had come from a Tweeds store in Franklin Township. A check with the store revealed that the sweaters, valued at $79.80, had been stolen.

Ptl. Terracciano arrested Alan B. Hayes, 25, and Clifford Melvin, 27, both of Trenton. Melvin had been arrested two weeks ago and charged with the same offense after police located suits that had been stolen from Harry Ballot and Langrock in his car.

Both men were later released, pending their appearance March 7 in Borough court.

8 JUVENILES ARRESTED For Alcohol Violations. Eight juveniles were arrested during the weekend in four separate incidents involving the use and possession of alcoholic beverages.

In making the report, Capt. John J. Bellow said that all were later released to a parent or guardian after being charged with juvenile delinquency. Those arrested included three females and a 16-year-old Princeton University student. Their ages ranged from 13 to 18. One of those arrested was involved in a fight.

It is against the law in New Jersey, repeated Capt. Bellow, for anyone under 21 to possess or use alcohol.

SIX TIRES SLASHED On Patrol Cars. For the second time this month, patrol cars parked in the police lot next to Borough Hall were the target of vandals.

Six tires, with a replacement cost of $528, were slashed last Wednesday evening between 9:30 and 10. Earlier, 12 tires had been punctured causing more than $900 in damages.

"We're trying to do something in the way of security," commented Capt. John J. Bellow Jr.

THEFT REPORT Seven Bicycles Stolen. Seven bicyles, both locked and unlocked, were stolen last week in the Borough. Their values range from $450 to $40.

A grey, 18-speed Trek model, valued at $450, was stolen overnight from University Place where it had been locked to a car with a chain lock. The victim is a university student in Maryland.

A 12-speed blue Fuji bike worth $420 was taken Monday between 8:05 a.m. and 3 p.m. from the grounds of Princeton High School where it had been locked to a bike rack. The thief took the bike and the cable lock valued at $7.

A Wiggins Street resident reported the theft last week of her $250 Fuji bicycle which had been locked to a rack on the east side of the "Dinky" station on lower University Place, and a blue Schwinn worth $200 was taken from a rack in front of Erdman Hall on the Princeton Theological Seminary campus. The victim discovered both the bike and the wire cable lock securing it were missing.

An unlocked 3-speed Vista bicycle, valued at $40, was stolen during the weekend from in front of the Computer Center on Prospect Avenue and two bikes, both unlocked, were taken early last week from the front porch of a Park Place home. One was a 10-speed Armstrong model valued at $300; the second, a three-speed Ross with saddle bags was recovered the next morning in front of a driveway on Moore Street.

A hooded, green windbreaker valued at $125 was stolen Sunday morning between 1:45 and 2:05 from a coat room in the Tiger Inn on Prospect Avenue. Inside one of the pockets was the victim's tan, nylon wallet containing $5 and credit cards.

Between 9:15 Saturday night and 12:30 in the morning, while a Roosevelt resident was attending a dance at the YMCA building, someone stole her blue denim jacket from a front coat room. The jacket, valued at $40, had $5 in one of the pockets.

A student at the Theological Seminary lost $25 when her brown leather wallet was stolen from her coat at the campus center. The wallet is valued at $10.

A 40-channel CB radio valued at $140 was stolen last week from the car of an Englishtown resident while it was parked for an hour and 20 minutes in the evening on Witherspoon Street. From scratches on the door, it appeared as if the driver's side door had been forced open, police said. Wires leading to the radio had been cut.

School Board to N.J. "We must speak out, and constantly ..." said school board president Ann McGoldrick amplifying the resolution scheduled to be passed by the board this Tuesday. The resolution "urges" the state to provide full funding "for public education pursuant to law."

Cuts in transportation aid from 90 to 67 percent, and a 50 percent cut in bilingual education are particular concerns of the board, she said. A district with many children to transport gets big cuts, a district with few to transport almost no cuts. "It's disproportionate," she protested.

The bilingual cut is "ironic," she continued, in view of Governor Thomas Kean's pushing for more stringent graduation requirements for non-English-speaking students.

The board has also written to every member of the Legislature's Joint Appropriation Committee, Princeton's representatives in the Legislature and to Governor Kean.

A special concern is the timing. By law, boards must pass their budgets in March. Voters pass on them in April. But the State has until June 30, and can cut budgets already adopted.

In other action, the board will consider a proposal by Princeton High School psychologist Constance Vieland for a "North Mercer Family Consultation Center," located in a Princeton school, which would help parents of handicapped children with school problems.

The Center would be funded by a Federal grant — through the state — of $159,638, Dr. Vieland said and would serve East Windsor, Hopewell Valley, Lawrence and West Windsor-Plainsboro as well as Princeton.

Under New Jersey law, school Child Study teams work with parents of handicapped children to plan and then review a child's program. With a sense that "I wasn't as good as I should be" in dealing with parents, Dr. Vieland took a leave of absence and studied family therapy.

She now trains others on the school staff, and would continue that training through the Center, although the primary reason for the Center is to help parents.

The Center would deal only with school problems — a child who isn't coming to school or has difficulties in school.

"Families sometimes organize around a child's disability in ways that limit the child — too protective, for example," Dr. Vieland has found. "We can work with the family to extricate the child from that, and get the child to function better in school."

Princeton has 185 children classified as "handicapped." There are 1,721 in the five proposed districts.

FURTIVE LOOKS

Lead to Marijuana Bust. Det. Randy Sutton of the Borough police whose record of arrests reveals an uncanny knack of flushing suspected marijuana users, scored again last week.

Det. Sutton was in an unmarked car eating lunch in Marquand Park when he observed two men in a parked car a short distance away doing something in the front seat. They looked around furtively and when they noticed Det. Sutton's car they drove off.

He stopped their car on Mercer Street, identified himself as a police officer, and saw what appeared to be a marijuana cigarette. He asked the two occupants to step out of the car.

In his investigation, Det. Sutton found a brown paper bag containing 10 plastic baggies of marijuana and another plastic bag containing loose marijuana under the seat of the car. The two occupants, Edwin J. Rothmaller, 25, of Morrisville, Pa. and George A. Falkler, 41, of Ewing Township, were also in possession of a scale.

Rothmaller was charged with possession of over 25 grams of marijuana and possession of marijuana with intent to sell. He was later released in $250 bail for a court appearance here March 7.

Falkler was charged with possession of under 25 grams of marijuana and later released. Police said Det. Sutton's investigation revealed that Rothmaller was selling some marijuana to Falkler.

Trenton Man Charged. A Trenton resident, Lee Davis Jr., 37, has been charged with Borough police with possession of less than 25 grams of marijuana.

He was stopped last week in his car by Ptl. Michael Taylor for an overdue inspection violation. As Davis reached in his glove compartment to produce the credentials Ptl. Taylor had requested, the officer observed a couple of marijuana cigarettes in the glove compartment. He also noticed some marijuana seeds on the driver's seat and car floor.

In a subsequent search, police found a white medicine bottle containing marijuana on the floor of the car and removed a folding knife from Davis's pocket.

He was charged with possession of a controlled dangerous substance and issued two motor vehicle summonses for uninsured vehicle and overdue inspection. Davis was later released in $50 bail.

DRUNK DRIVER FINED

For Second Offense. A second offense of driving while intoxicated brought Robert F. Swanson of Scotch Road, Titusville, a $515 fine, two-year revocation of his license and 30 days community service. The fine and revocation were levied Monday in Borough traffic court by Judge Russell W. Annich Jr.

Fined for speeding were Mary J. Descy, 15 Maple Street, $50; Frederick Crispin III, 3 Cedarbrook Terrace, $70; Eileen Coleman, 4 Monroe Avenue, Lawrenceville, $60; Sherry Brosof, 26-14 Pheasant Hollow Road, Plainsboro, $80, and John G. Forman, 9 Jeffers Road, Plainsboro, $60.

Fined $60 each for red light violations were Marlene Rathmum, 1312 Bradley Court; Michael A. Blaxill, 270 Lambert Drive; George W. Eischen, 7 Rydal Drive, Lawrenceville, and Paul Gatterdam, 15 Pin Oak Drive, Lawrenceville. Anne McElearney, 200 Dod Hall, Princeton University, paid two fines of $25 each for no lights and no audible signal on her bicycle.

Others: Eileen Guggenheim, 76 Library Place, $20, unregistered vehicle; Bradley Hoppe, 16 Model Avenue, Hopewell, $20, no name on commercial vehicle; and Tracy D. Moore, 19 Burd Street, Pennington, $20, failure to make repairs.

Township, Too. In Township court last week, Michael C. Schlicting, Princeton Junction, was fined $115 and lost his license for six months for no insurance. Fined $65 each by Judge Sydney Souter were Martha L. Heywood, 37 Mulberry Row, improper passing; Victor W. Laurie, 109 Kingsway Commons, improper entering or leaving a highway; and Sandra I. Van Dyke, 34 Ontario Way, Lawrenceville, speeding.

Donald Tadlock, 29 Green Street, was fined $10 for parking in a handicapped zone, $10 for contempt of court and ordered to pay $275 in accumulated back fines.

In criminal court, James T. Tkacs, 252 N. Harrison Street, was sentenced to 60 days in the Mercer County Correctional Center, to run consecutively with his present term, for eluding a police officer. He was also fined $25 contempt of court and ordered to pay $25 to the Violent Crime Compensation Board. A second charge of possession of stolen credit cards was dismissed.

Marry Harris of Trenton was fined $150 for shoplifting and $25 for contempt of court. She, too, had to pay $25 to the VCCB.

NEW EXHIBIT OPENS

At Children's Museum. The last day of Black History month, February 29, marks the opening day of the new Children's Museum Exhibit.

The subject for the exhibit grew out of Superintendent Paul Houston's suggestion for a unit on Princeton biography for school study. The museum exhibit, therefore, is intended to augment study already in progress, as well as to stimulate new endeavors in the field on the elementary, and middle school level.

In November the Children's Museum was awarded its sixth grant from the Mercer County Cultural and Heritage Commission for publication of its fourth written and illustrated museum guide, a free souvenir to each child. This year's guide, which will include short biographical sketches of these four stars, will extend the museum experience.

The four "Stars" chosen from a virtual constellation of Princeton notables are: Annis Boudinot Stockton (1736-1801), researched by Dorothy Plohn; Paul Robeson (1898-1976), researched by Jane Alexander and Peg Lutz; Albert Einstein (1879-1955) researched by Madeline Blinder; Betsey Stockton (1798-1865), researched by Children's Museum director Connie Escher. Wanda Gunning, the Historical Society's Vice President, contributed research help to the Children's Museum team of teaching docents.

Each of the stars will be introduced by an identification card, which will include such information as Princeton dwellings, nicknames, life stories, portraits and newspaper articles.

The exhibit will feature a tape of Paul Robeson singing "Ole Man River" and speaking lines from Shakespeare's "Othello". Annis Stockton will introduce us to her inner circle of friends at Morven through period portraits; Albert Einstein, standing six feet tall, will explain E equals mc squared; and youngsters may peek into Betsey Stockton's Hawaiian-bound missionary trunk and ring her Princeton school bell.

First-hand recollections of Paul Robeson in Princeton are provided in a conversation between Sarah Harris and Peg Lutz. Mrs. Harris and her mother, who taught Paul Robeson, were organists at the Witherspoon Street Presbyterian Church, an institution which played an important part in the lives of both Betsey Stockton and Paul Robeson. Mrs. Harris shares her thoughts on the history of Princeton's Black community as well as personal photographs and records.

Evelyn Hackley and Jane Detwiler will outfit four newly purchased mannequins with examples of children's clothing from the Society's costume collection. Young museum-goers will be able to experience the textures and textiles of the past.

Three centuries of Princeton notables will be represented in the exhibit and will suggest other subjects for classroom study. Services which the Children's Museum has offered in the past include bus trips of the town, in-school slide-tape presentations, exhibit and preparation for the "hands-on" visit to Bainbridge House, as well as special assemblies in the schools.

CHILDREN INVITED

To Mardi Gras Event. Children and their parents are invited to come in costume to a Mardi Gras Folk Dance party that will be held Tuesday evening at Riverside School.

From 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. the program of international folk dances will be geared especially toward school age youngsters. Later in the evening there will be request dancing for all ages. This event is sponsored by the Princeton Folk Dance Group. For more information call 921-1462 or 924-7350.

SERIES PLANNED

On Hearing Sounds. Princeton Creative Center will present a series of lectures titled "The Sounds of Your World" on three Wednesday evenings, March 14, 21, and 28 from 8 to 10 at Morven, 55 Stockton Street.

Peter B. Putnam, blind for many years, will discuss spoken sounds, while Dolly Minis, a recordist for the Library of Natural Sounds at Cornell University, will explain animal communication and play her recordings of bird songs and calls. Mrs. Minis' field equipment will be available for examination.

Tickets are $12 for the series. No tickets are available for single evenings. To order, send check or money order to Princeton Creative Center, 24 Woodside Lane. Include your name, telephone number, and the name of the series. Seating is limited, so early registration is suggested.

For further information, call the center at 924-3669.

CALLER IS PLANNED

By Country Dancers. The Princeton Country Dancers will sponsor a dance Thursday at 8 at St. Paul's School on Nassau Street.

Guest caller Bridget Edwards from Washington, D.C., will lead couple dances, New England Contra dances and some southern square dances to the music of "Hold the Mustard," an area contra dance band.

No experience is necessary to participate in the dance, and everyone is welcome with or without a partner. There is a $2 fee at the door and free refreshments are available at the break.

CLASSES AVAILABLE

At Arts Center. Among the activities available at the Art People Place, home of the Arts Council at 102 Witherspoon Street, is a Polynesian dance class for children.

Charlene Gregory is offering an eight-week session of Polynesian dance classes for children ages 5-12, beginning Thursday, March 1, from 5:30 to 6:15. For information call 924-8777 or 443-3582.

Kenneth Moss Remembered.
To the Editor of Town Topics:

The Art Expressions Group of the Princeton Senior Resource Center wishes to express its deepest sympathy over the recent loss of a very valued member, Kenneth Moss. In his memory we plan to rename the group "The Ken Moss Art Expressions Group."

His courage and spirit remain within the hearts of all he touched. The group will continue to explore different art media and perhaps reach new heights of creativity because we have had the pleasure of knowing a man who was personally coping with his many losses creatively.

Institute Has Rights.
To the Editor of Town Topics:

The efforts of the Open Space Committee to find reasonable alternatives to the Institute's plan for a sizable housing development are commendable.

However, I am disturbed by the attitude expressed by the Sierra Club's spokesman. The Institute has every right to reasonable compensation in return for giving up development of a major asset. Asking the Institute to unequivocably abandon their plans is unrealistic and perilously close to a confiscatory attitude.

REGISTRATION DUE

For YMCA Spring Session. Registration has begun for the YMCA's spring session, and this season's courses offer incentive to children and adults to develop new skills, sharpen some old ones, shape up for summer and join in the YMCA tradition.

The Children's Center is continuing its successful toddler and preschool programs for children from 18 months through school age. Under the direction of Jan Gill, a teacher and administrator with 11 years' experience in the preschool education field, the center is open from 7:30 to 5:30 Monday through Friday, and several scheduling options are available. Preschool children ages 3 to 7 are ushered into the computer world in a course taught by Eva Kaplan, a consultant and author of computer programs and workbooks designed for youngsters.

Parents are welcome to participate in Preschool Swim Instruction, for children 3 to 5 years, and in the Parent-Tot Swim Class for children 6 through 36 months, taught by YMCA aquatic coordinator Cathy Cook. Progressive Aquatics is being offered to 5 to 15 year olds for more advanced development of swimming skills at all levels of ability.

Spring training for Midget League and "T" Ball baseball begins March 31 for boys and girls ages 6 to 13 in a five-week series of baseball instruction clinics taught by area coaches and high school players. These Saturday morning clinics cover the fundamentals of sportsmanship as well as baseball, and lead into league play, which begins April 30. For children who enjoy the martial arts, Ike Ballard's Youth Karate classes, which include a half hour gymnastic warm-up, are offered at beginner, intermediate and advanced levels.

Several new adult courses have been added this season, including Nutrition as Part of a Wholesome Life, led by Susan Wachtel, a practicing nutritional consultant. "Divorcing Fathers: Toward an Optimum Relationship with Your Children," will be taught by Dorcas Johnson, a graduate student of clinical psychology at the Fielding Institute. The course will address the shift in family relationships caused by divorce in eight Tuesday night sessions that will focus on the father's and the child's needs, setting up the co-parenting

Fitness Director John Matune, certified by the National YMCA Health Enhancement Program, will teach the "Y's Way to a Healthy Back," a successful program of exercise, stretching and strengthening techniques designed to relieve back discomfort.

Adult fitness programs include Karate, Aikido, and a daily exercise program taught by John Matune. The coed Volleyball League continues on Tuesday nights at the YMCA gym.

The fine arts are covered in three painting courses: Art with Eli, Oil Painting, taught by Constance Bonotto, and Outdoor Landscaping, led by Alan Taback. Duplicate Bridge is offered once again on Tuesdays and Thursdays. For more information about times and fees, call the YMCA at 924-4497.

WIN BY A WHISKER

Only Two Weeks to Grow. The contest has been going on for six weeks — it takes a long time to get a good full growth — so if you want to enter the Alchemist and Barrister's annual St. Patrick's Day Longbeard Contest, you better hurry up and grow.

It's the fifth year for the contest, whose beneficiary is always a local charity — this year, Eden Institute for autistic children.

Everyone who enters pays a $10 entry fee. Donations are matched by the A. and B. restaurant and money given to Eden. Winner is whoever has the longest beard by St. Patrick's Day, March 17, and the prize is a free dinner at the A. and B.

If you support the cause but are, perhaps, female, you're invited to sign up and pay the $10 fee anyway.

John and Thomas Schmierer, owners of the A. and B., invite your registration at the restaurant, 28 Witherspoon.

THREE TALKS PLANNED

With Antiques Show. A silver expert from the Yale University Art Gallery will give a lecture as part of the Princeton Antique Show's 25th annual display.

Gerald W. R. Ward, a member of the Yale gallery's staff since 1976, will give a talk titled "Some Thoughts on the Role of Silver in American Life," Saturday, March 17, at 10 a.m., at Princeton Day School.

DRESS UP: Melanie Usas, age 3, shows off a party dress to point up what might be found at the University League's Used Toy, Clothing and Book Sale to be held Saturday from 10 to 2 at the school, 171 Broadmead. Lunch will be available, and proceeds will support the school's scholarship fund.

Mr. Ward is one of three speakers scheduled for the lecture series, held each day before the show's opening at the school. The first lecturer will be Alice C. Frelinghuysen, assistant curator in the Department of American Decorative Arts at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, who will speak on "American Glass fom Wistar to Tiffany" on Friday, March 16, at 10.

George O'Bannon, a dealer and lecturer from Pittsburgh, will give the final lecture on the "The World of Oriental Rugs" at 11 Sunday, March 18.

The show itself, featuring the wares of a wide variety of antique dealers, is being held earier than usual this year. It will be open from 11 to 9 Friday, March 16; 11 to 7 Saturday, March 17, and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday, March 18. Meals and refreshments will be available during show hours.

A single ticket to all three show days will cost $4 at the door. Pre-show tickets may be purchased for $3 from the Wellesley - Mount Holyoke Clubs, 338 The Great Road. The event is co-sponsored by the Wellesley Club of Central New Jersey and the Mount Holyoke Club of Princeton, for the benefit of the scholarship program at both colleges.

FOUR ARE CHOSEN

For Alcoholism Council. Four residents of the Princeton area have been elected to the board of trustees of the Mercer Council on Alcoholism, a non-profit agency whose primary mission is the prevention of alcoholism and alcohol abuse in Mercer County.

Those chosen are Kingsley Gallup, who has done research on alcohol and drug programs for Stuart School and has been active in hospital fund-raising projects; Edgar Gemmell, formerly administrative vice-president of Princeton University; Jamieson McKenzie, assistant superintendent of Princeton's schools and Howard McCallen, district manager of customer services for Public Service.

REGISTRATION SET

For Classes in Rocky Hill. The Rocky Hill Community Group is holding registration for spring classes.

Robert Latham will repeat his Model Railroad Workshop on Saturday mornings. A new printmaking class is being introduced by Susan Kiley. The Wednesday afternoon class is for young people ages 7 years to 12 years.

Pat Kraus will teach a quilting and piecing class on Tuesday mornings. Virginia Miller calls her class "For the Love of Flowers." It will include classes on growing and arranging flowers, as well as visits to Duke Gardens and Longwood Gardens.

Gordon Gund

The RP foundation is yet another product of Mr. Gund's vision. He co-founded the group in 1972 and has overseen its growth into an international organization, raising nearly $3 million a year for research into the causes and possible cures of RP. Mr. Gund, 44, avoids publicity (particularly about his role in the sports world), but he becomes voluble on the subject of RP and for good reason: he himself is affected (he would never use the word "suffer") by RP and has been sightless since he started the foundation.

Sowing the Seeds. The RP Foundation bears the unmistakable stamp of a venture capitalist's business acumen.

"We provide seed capital with the expectation that as research efforts develop and make progress they will be recognized by the public sector and gain government funding," says Mr. Gund.

The RP research efforts, which now are being carried out at a dozen laboratories in the United States and England, are supervised by a science advisory board. "They give us the assurance that the quality of research and the direction are consistent with our objectives," says Mr. Gund. "Isolated centers often don't share their successes and failures. If you don't have that you get a lot of duplication."

Mr. Gund insists that the foundation take the long view: "One of the pitfalls a lot of health agencies run into is the frustration of research not solving the problem right away. Then there's the temptation to shift funds into human services, since people understandably want something done right now." The RP Foundation diverts about 15 percent of its funds to human services, including a referral service for visual aids that will improve eyesight in some cases, and it sponsors rap sessions and other programs to help the estimated 500,000 Americans who have RP. But the main emphasis remains research. "We have had to reinforce our goals on several occasions," says Mr. Gund. "We are steadfast in our ultimate objectives."

As a businessman Mr. Gund knows the difficulty of raising money. "We're competing in a tough environment and we're darn well going to get the most for our money," he says. Fifty-five to sixty percent of everything raised, he points out, goes directly to research efforts. Human services and public awareness consume another 25 percent. Only 17 or 18 percent is spent on administration. "We'd like it to be lower than that but it's hard to do," Mr. Gund says. "Most organizations are well above that."

"The best way I'd describe our foundation," he continues, "is a group of dedicated people who believe that we can get out of this business — that we can determine the causes and develop treatment and cures and then shut the doors."

Does he expect to see again some day? No. "For someone like myself the chance of research causing a change in vision is very low." But for those in whom the disease lies dormant, Mr. Gund has higher hopes. "I'm a layman, but people on the science board believe it is only a matter of time — not much time," he says.

The Fast Track. Mr. Gund has not always been so hopeful. A grandson of a Cleveland brewery owner (Gund's Lager), and one of six children of the chairman of the Cleveland Trust Company, Gordon Gund cruised through his early years on the fast track: Groton, Harvard, where he was an intermittent varsity hockey player, four years as an officer in the Navy, and then on to the Chase and marriage to Llura, mother of their two sons.

The cloud passed over first in 1966, when he began having problems with night vision. "I had tests at Columbia-Presbyterian and the doctor who wrote up the report said that I would have progressive loss of sight but that I would still have vision until I was in my 60s or so. At the age of 26 I didn't get overly excited."

But by 1970 his day vision also was failing. "I always refused to acknowledge that it was getting worse. I drove until it was really dangerous. I almost killed someone coming home from the Princeton train station. I just missed someone crossing the street. Then I found out that the fellow who diagnosed me in New York said that I had a severe case and that I would lose my vision completely within 10 years."

Would the truth have made a difference? "Not a whole lot," says Mr. Gund. "I just would have found out a little sooner that there was nothing I could do about it."

MATCH POINT: Gordon and Llura Gund have never been lacking in ideas for events to benefit the Retinitis Pigmentosa Foundation. Here they take a break during last year's national college tennis tournament that was co-sponsored by the Prince tennis company. Other benefits have included the world premieres of "Jaws" and "Island," movies based on the novels of Princeton resident Peter Benchley, Mr. Gund's classmate at Harvard.

Trip to Russia. As his vision diminished his frustration increased. "During this time my wife and I spent a lot of time trying to find a way to fight the onset of the disease. We became frustrated not only with the condition but also with the lack of treatment." At one point he and Llura traveled to Russia to investigate the claims of successful treatments taking place there. The Russian treatments proved worthless for Mr. Gund. Years later the RP Foundation funded a trip by five American scientists to investigate the Russian work. The Americans found their Soviet counterparts friendly and cooperative, but no closer than anyone else to a cure.

Mr. Gund today voices his thanks that neither of his sons has the disease (though each is likely to be a carrier) and gives no hint of any bitterness toward his state of health. "This is not something I wanted nor is it the end of the world," he says. "I think I'd be doing a lot of the things I'm doing today whether I lost my sight or not."

His condition does not prevent him from traveling extensively in pursuit of his various business projects (he had to spend the night at the Cleveland Coliseum earlier this week when he got snowed in). He's able to stay in shape by swimming, jumping rope, and skiing (a guide follows him down the hill and offers guidance on navigation, a feat that ought to amaze some new acquaintances who insist on placing him in a chair as soon as he enters a room, apparently to keep him from falling down. "Other people," he adds, "think they have to talk especially loud for my benefit. Through the foundation we're trying to expose people to the idea that blind people are otherwise the same as other people and to bring people who are blind out of a sheltered existence."

Through all this Mr. Gund and his brother remain one of the stabilizing influences in the tumultuous world of professional sports. "We enjoy sports but we've brought in strong, able people to manage the teams. We don't feel qualified to do it ourselves. We set long-term policies and a budget and then turn over the decision-making and the coaching to qualified people. It's much easier to hold them accountable when you don't confuse the issue by trying to over-ride them and mix in the management."

A visitor cannot help but compare the Gunds' style with that of George Steinbrenner, owner of the New York Yankees. Gordon Gund smiles at the comparison but declines to comment. He doesn't have to say a word: Mr. Steinbrenner, obviously, does not have the same vision.

THE WAY TO BETTER HEALTH CARE

THE PENICK-SIGMUND, CARS-PRIDE ALTERNATIVE: The heavy lines — Route 206, Cherry Valley Road, Route 27 from 518 through Princeton — would be two-lane county highways. Relocated Route 206, the Somerset Expressway at the top of the map, and Route 27 to New Brunswick in the middle would be four-lane dualized highways. East of Route 1 (the diagonal straight line from lower left to upper right), this proposed highway would follow the original or preserved S-92 alignment to Route 130 and the Hightstown bypass, not shown at lower right for lack of space. Margen Penick dreamed it up, Barbara Sigmund has talked it up among DOT and other municipal officials; it follows the CARS route favored by Montgomery and would be sensitive to the desires of the PRIDE citizens' group in Kingston and South Brunswick. The question is, Will the DOT agree to put it on the drawing board?

Route 92

Hightstown bypass and Route 33.

The CARS alternative was rejected for further study by the DOT as not serving east-west traffic desires. The Hightstown bypass is the one segment of Route 92 upon which every municipality is in agreement.

Mrs. Penick proposes a limited access, high speed highway that would connect the Somerset Expressway in the north to Route 27 in the vicinity of Route 518 and The Marketplace, north of Kingston, before continuing on across Route 1 in the preserved 92 alignment. Under her proposal the present Route 206 would remain a two-lane county highway, as would Route 27 south through Princeton and a connector road in the vicinity of Blue Spring Road north of the Princeton-Montgomery border.

She points out that townships on the east side of Route 1 have always had a clear idea of the function of Route 92 as a means of moving traffic quickly out of their area. Route 92 as proposed by the DOT fills that function suitably, in her view, until it arrives at the Princeton-Montgomery border when it is expected to handle local traffic.

Problem in the Middle. Everyone expects the Somerset Expressway to be built, Mrs. Penick says, and she believes that some of the de-designated funds have been set aside for this purpose. If that road has its western terminus at Belle Mead, and Route 92 as proposed by the DOT dumps traffic onto Route 206 near residential areas, there will be what she calls "a terrible problem" in the middle on Route 206.

She also points out that the Princeton-Montgomery border is not suitable for a 300-foot highway. "It will be like looking across the DMZ zone, a major, noise-polluted concrete barrier." What is needed, she decided, is a roadway that is as suitably matched to its function as the portion planned to the east of Route 1. "A road to serve local traffic should be the size of Carter Road," she says.

Thus in the Princeton-Montgomery residential area Mrs. Penick would substitute two-lane county roads where the state has proposed four-lane alignments of Route 92. She would de-designate present Route 206 and call it County Route 100, in concept serving local purposes. She would terminate Route 27 as a four-lane highway at its juncture with her proposed relocated Route 206, continuing it on into Princeton as a two-lane road.

She believes these proposals would protect Kingston and Montgomery as well as Princeton, Lawrenceville and even Trenton. She hopes the towns east of Route 1 who are so anxious to have S-92 and the Hightstown bypass will agree to these local roads for local situations so "we would all progress more quickly."

Mrs. Penick's plan has been endorsed by Borough Mayor Sigmund and Borough Council, although Council also voted to support the preserved alignment. The proposal has been discussed with the DOT and with mayors of most of the municipalities affected by S-92.

Money Could Be Found. According to Mrs. Penick, the DOT is concerned about the additional money and environmental studies that would be involved in relocating Route 206. But she suggests that money saved from not blasting a 300-foot highway through the Princeton-Montgomery ridge, in not extending the Somerset Expressway all the way to Belle Mead, and in not doing such an expensive job of improvements to Route 206 would add up to "quite a little package." In addition, she says, there is $200,000 that Montgomery has officially set aside to sue the state in its effort to prevent the dualization of Route 206.

DOT officials also say that their studies have already been completed, but Mrs. Penick believes they have only been contracted out. She does not accept DOT statistics pointing to a large volume of traffic generated in the west — 17,600 vehicles per day — and says these numbers are not in agreement with projections of low growth in the Hopewell area made by the Mercer County Planning Board and the Delaware Valley Regional Planning Council. She asserts that the DOT's way is to "design a major highway and make the statistics fit."

Mayor Sigmund has said she would press for Mrs. Penick's proposal, but she does not want to jeopardize the construction of Route 92 in the preserved alignment. For the purposes of realizing the dedesignated funds for 92, Mayor Sigmund said she would "go along" with compromises at the Montgomery-Princeton border and some adjustments at the 206-92 juncture so that intersection does not become too crowded and clogged.

Clamor for Bypass. Meanwhile, at Monday's public meeting on Route 92, there was a well-orchestrated clamor for immediate construction of the Hightstown bypass and the preserved S-92 alignment from residents of that beleaguered municipality. Past and present Hightstown mayors, school board officials and residents all spoke their frustration that the road they requested 30 years ago, when the New Jersey Turnpike was constructed and exit 8 began to dump traffic through the town, had not yet become a reality.

Plainsboro and Cranbury officials spoke equally fervently, although in fewer numbers, of the need to preserve some 5,000 acres of farmland which the original alignment would bisect. These two municipalities favor a more northerly alignment, either parallel to Dey Road or connecting with Route 32. East Windsor residents urge reconsideration of their proposal along the Millstone River, rejected because of cost and environmental considerations which those residents say could be surmounted.

Robert Hoedemaker of the Citizens for Alternative Roadway Systems, the CARS group in Montgomery, gave a slide presentation showing the emp-

H. GROSS IS READY

For Outfitters' Opening. With an employee training schedule including briefings by Borough police, a tour of McCarter Theatre and a talk by Princeton University's director of sports information, H. Gross & Co., Outfitters, is ready to open the door.

The door, of course, is at One Palmer Square, facing Nassau and the fountain. Inside will be spring warmup jackets (private label), Shetland sweaters, Rugby shirts, boatshoes, mud-shoes, club ties, cotton chinos, bathing suits, cotton sweaters ...

And umbrellas with hand-carved handles, English picnic baskets described as "elegant" and fitted with plates and flatware (bring your own croissants) ...

In "Tigertown," says the Gross publicity release, "the store departs from its dignified country casual tones of camel and hunter's green for a more siss-boom-ba look in orange and black."

No extra charge, in Tigertown, for tickets to all Princeton sporting events (that's why the staff heard a talk by Nick Donatello, who handles sports information) and other special activities, as well as tickets to McCarter's production (hence the theatre tour). Why the police? Well, sometimes there is crime on the streets, or even in stores.

Clothing, home furnishings and accessories will reflect "the casual elegance Princetonians have adopted as their style." There will be a full-time tailor, free home delivery when items are out of stock and must be ordered and, "everywhere 'the Sign of the Goose.' "

Owner of H. Gross & Co., Outfitters, is Henry Gross II, 38-year-old Bloomingdale's vice-president who tired of the 18 years he'd spent commuting and decided he wanted something that would keep him home — Princeton, where he's lived for four years.

He's chosen the Canada goose as his logo, pointing out that the goose no longer migrates. But he expects his store to take off, and his staff is asking "will there be migrations to other college towns?"

But first, Princeton.

"WHAT'S YOURS?"

Bartender's School Tells How. If you've always wanted to know the difference between a White Russian and a Black Russian or just what does go into a Singapore Sling, then The Social Chemist School of Bartending is for you.

Two longtime Princetonians, Ray Pettus and Bill MacLean, both with years of experience in tending a bar, would like to show you how. Their "classroom" is a fully equipped bar located in the lower level of the Italian-American Sportsmen Club, 454 Terhune Road.

The 36-hour, two-week course, which costs $275, is open to anyone 18 and older who wants to become a professional bartender and has been approved by the state Department of Education.

Classes are held in the morning from 9 to 12:30, in the afternoon from 1:30 to 5, or in the evening from 6 to 9:30. Included in the course are such areas as fruit handling, glassware, bar etiquette, ABC and state health regulations, eight hours of practical application and 12 devoted to recipes. Class size is limited to 15.

The Social Chemist is the only bartending school located in this area. The closest one north of Princeton, according to Mr. Pettus, is in Piscataway; the closest one south of here in Cherry Hill.

Mr. Pettus, a graduate of Princeton High, where he at one time was a part-time teacher and a member of the football coaching staff, learned his bartending in a number of bars — The Glendale and Campo's in Trenton, Ivy Inn, County Line Inn, and the Hudibras in Princeton. More recently, he was a bartender at Scanticon where he met Mr. MacLean, the bar manager. It was while they were at Scanticon that they came to the conclusion that "we were tired of working for everybody else," Mr. Pettus said.

Courses at the Social Chemist run every two weeks consecutively and while the class size is limited to 15, "if we have one student, we'll take one student," Mr. Pettus said.

OPENS OFFICE HERE

For Auto Buying Service. William and Frieda Flax have opened a Princeton branch of their company, Mid-Atlantic Buying Service, Inc., at 183 South Harrison Street. The firm was established in 1981 in Baltimore, Md., where Mr. Flax had his own automobile dealership for 15 years.

Mr. and Mrs. Flax are professional purchasing agents specializing in all makes and models of automobiles and trucks. They point out that large corporations and government agencies use purchasing agents to bid, buy and manage automobile fleets because it is cost effective to do so, and they propose to offer the same type of service for the individual.

Mid-Atlantic Buying Service proposes to give facts and figures abut all makes and models, conduct a purchasing program that achieves the lowest capitalized cost for the vehicle, and monitor factory invoices to verify that the correct vehicle is being delivered at the agreed upon price. It will also assist the individual in realizing the maximum resale price for his or her current car.

ty agricultural areas the CARS proposal would traverse in Franklin Township. James Gaffney of thge Stony Brook-Millstone Watersheds Association called for the creation of a technical advisory committee, similar to that which monitored the environmental impact studies for Route 95, to study the favored alignments.

After completing its in-depth studies of the several alternatives to Route 92, the DOT will hold what it calls a public impact meeting, scheduled for the fall of 1984. By summer of 1985 it expects to have approval of a draft environmental impact statement by the Federal Highway Administration, followed by circulation of that statement and a public hearing in the fall of 1985.

Selection of the preferred alternative by the DOT, with concurrence of the FAA, is scheduled for the winter of 1985, and approval of the final environmental impact statement is expected in the summer of 1986. Final design work and land acquisition is scheduled for that fall, and construction will begin in 1988, under this timetable.

According to John Mycoff, DOT area coordinator for community involvement, preliminary engineering for the road must be well along by September, 1986, in order to meet the deadline for federal funds. He feels the department will be able to meet that deadline, although many of the residents and municipal officials along the route of proposed S-92 may wonder just what makes him so confident.

On Ash Wednesday, March 7, there will be spoken communion with imposition of ashes, and the focus will be on the word "forgiveness." The Rev. John D. Goerss is pastor and the associate pastor is the Rev. Harry H. Haysbert.

The Ash Wednesday liturgy with imposition of ashes for those who desire it and Holy Eucharist will be held at Trinity Episcopal Church, 33 Mercer Street, at 7 a.m., 12:10 p.m., 5:30 p.m. and 8 p.m.

SUFFERING IS TOPIC

Of Lecture Series. The mid-winter lecture series at Nassau Presbyterian Church will focus on the topic of "Suffering."

Dr. Dorothee Soelle, visiting professor of systematic theology at Union Theological Seminary in New York City, and Dr. J. Christiaan Beker, professor of Biblical theology at Princeton Theological Seminary, will give two guest lectures each between Sunday and Tuesday. The Nassau Church newsletter describes Dr. Soelle and Dr. Beker as two people "who have addressed themselves to the questions of suffering not only academically but personally."

Dr. Soelle, who is the author of a book entitled "Suffering," will preach Sunday at the 10 a.m. worship service and speak again at 11:15 a.m. in the assembly room. She will also lecture Sunday night at 7:30.

Dr. Beker will give a lecture Monday at 7:30 and on Tuesday at 7:30. His major work is "Paul the Apostle, the Triumph of God in Life and Thought."

BULLETIN NOTES

Dr. Hans H. Schmid, professor theology at the University of Zurich, will speak at Princeton Theological Seminary on Thursday, March 8, at 1 p.m. in the Main Lounge of the Campus Center. His topic will be "Old Testament and Near Eastern Preconditions of New Testament Christology."

Prof. Schmid was professor at the University of Bielefeld-Bethel before joining the faculty at Zurich. His fields are Biblical theology, Old Testament studies and the history of religion.

The lecture is open to the public and free of charge.

The topic of her lecture will be "Hagar: The Desolation of Rejection." It is open to the public free of charge.

Lawsuit

standards," which make it almost impossible to build lower-cost housing.

Although the letter is not specific, such requirements as landscaping, walks or certain materials are often cited as "cost-generating."

Carrot and Stick. Mr. Hill's letter "sincerely hopes" the Planning Board "will not choose to test our client's resolve, and will amend the Master Plan as we have requested."

"We hope the tone of this letter," he concludes, "will not obscure the fact that Calton Homes is offering two real benefits to the Township." These are defined as willingness to provide a specific planned unit development which would "assist" the Township in its obligations under Mt. Laurel, and a willingness to work with the Planning Board.

Mr. Hill adds the hope that "you will not choose to spend public monies on litigation which you cannot win."

Preliminary Report Ready. In reply, Mayor Winthrop Pike pointed out that Township consultants Alan Malloch and John Nolan have already submitted their preliminary report on the Township's proposed conditional high density ordinance. The mayor said they are scheduled to meet either this Wednesday or sometime next week with the Housing Subcommittee of the Planning Board to go over the preliminary report.

A final report will then go to the full Planning Board. If they approve the report, Mayor Pike said, they will recommend the ordinances necessary to adopt it.

"We've had a draft conditional high density ordinance for a long time," the mayor said. "We paid $18,000 to work the bugs out of it, and we've been working since January, 1983 — the month Mt. Laurel II was handed down.

"We hope we can make the ordinance work without mandatory set-asides. That's the easy way out. It lets Township Committee off the hook, but we lose control because a builder could put the lower-income units anywhere he wanted — in some undesirable corner of the property."

Consultants have proposed increasing the number of areas where lower-income housing might be built, Mayor Pike said, adding "There are a lot of little sites scattered around." He said the cluster zoning ordinance needs to be changed because it isn't working: "It meets the math., but developers only provide small lots with theoretical open space."

Housing Trust Considered. Also, the Township is considering a Housing Trust. Developers could either build "as of right" — according to the zoning ordinance — and make a dollar contribution, or build a percentage of lower-income houses and in return, be allowed to put up more units.

"We must rig it so the developer doesn't lose money — that's the big 'if' " Mayor Pike said. "And in re-sale, how do you make sure a house stays affordable?"

Mt. Laurel defines "low" income as 50 percent or less, of the median income in Mercer County. That figure is $28,000, so "low" is $14,000 or under. "Moderate" is 80 percent, or $22,400. He said he questioned whether houses could be built in Princeton cheap enough for these families. "This means you need a Housing Trust."

"It took the State Supreme Court seven or eight years to reach Mt. Laurel II. To impose a 30-day deadline on us is not a responsible action," says Edwin Schmierer, Township attorney, who is drafting a reply to Mr. Hill.

"Mt. Laurel II is not easy to respond to," he continued. "The Township is one of the few municipalities in the state that has responded responsibly. It spent $18,000 on a study, now almost in final form, which will be the basis for a conditional density ordinance that will encourage builders to construct lower-cost housing.

"Their demands are unrealistic, and the density is way out of line. If they want to work with us, we'd welcome them and would be delighted to have their cooperation."

RP WEEK DECLARED

By Governor Kean. Mrs. Gordon Gund, president of the New Jersey chapter, and Edward Gollob, president of the Northern New Jersey chapter of the RP Foundation Fighting Blindness, have announced that Governor Thomas H. Kean has proclaimed the week of March 3-10, 1984 "RP Awareness Week in New Jersey."

Weichert

EXCLUSIVE MEMBERSHIP: Three sales associates in the Princeton office of Weichert Realtors have been named to the Million Dollar Club for having sold or listed real estate in excess of a million dollars. From left are Peggy Siebens, Joan Grander, office manager, and Norma Greaves.

RP stands for "retinitis pigmentosa," an hereditary eye disease which affects more than 10,000 people in New Jersey and an estimated 500,000 in the United States. Currently, there is no treatment, prevention or cure for the RP family of diseases, although research funded by the RP Foundation Fighting Blindness is being done at 12 multi-discipline research centers in this country and England.

The declaration of RP Awareness Week in New Jersey coincides with the RP Kick-Off Dinner, Cabaret and Dance at the Nassau Inn this Saturday night. H. Gross & Company - Outfitters, which is sponsoring a cocktail party in its new store at One Palmer Square, is being joined as a major lead corporate sponsor of this benefit by the Golden Nugget, Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, and Prudential-Bache. Lead corporate sponsors contributing to the evening are Fidelity Bank and MAC Products. In addition, major financial support has been given by Automatic Catering, N.T. Callaway Real Estate, Collins Development Corporation, Nationwide Advertising Service, New Jersey National Bank, Prince Manufacturing, Princeton Microfilm Corporation and E.R. Squibb & Sons.

During the week of RP Awareness, events relating to RP will take place all over the state. These will involve high school essay contests on RP, musical programs in the Princeton schools, and activities on a daily basis in the H. Gross & Company - Outfitters store.

The Kick-Off Dinner and Cabaret will feature talent from Broadway — Karen Mason of "Torch Song Trilogy" and the American Ballet Comedy, an hilarious ballet spoof torupe. After the cabaret, there will be dancing to the music of Albert Oehrle's Jazz Band.

Tickets at $100 per person, or $150 per patron, are still available at the New Jersey chapter of the RP Foundation Fighting Blindness, P.O. Box 449, Princeton, N.J. 08542, or by telephone at 609-924-8034.

Kingston Acres II

$128,900 & up

Yes, after five years of planning and developing KINGSTON ACRES II has arrived. And it was worth the wait.

A limited edition of just fourteen outstanding colonial houses, KINGSTON ACRES II has begun construction and two models have been completed for your inspection.

Basically, the houses are expanded, oversized models with proven floor plans to delight the most discerning family. Large entry foyers are just the beginning with tremendous living rooms and formal dining rooms. Enormous eat-in kitchens are standard, too. The family room is available with brick fireplace and wooden panelling if desired. Large 2-car garage, of course. And don't forget the tiled powder room.

Upstairs you'll find four super bedrooms and two full baths. The master suite is especially oversized with many extras.

Please make it a point to visit KINGSTON ACRES II. We're open for inspection from 10:30 to 6:00 on weekdays and 11:00 to 4:00 on weekends. Closed Tuesday.

924-6739

DIRECTIONS: From Princeton take Nassau Street through the Village of Kingston. (Route 27.) Turn right on Fairfield Drive. Follow Fairfield to Schuh Drive and the models. See you there.

SPRAY OILS ARE BACK -

Woodwinds Associates

Oil sprays for the control of insects are back in the limelight. They are one of the oldest insecticides. Mixtures containing coal oil were used as far back as the 1860's. Oil based sprays were in common use in the 20's but with not always predictable results. Modern chemistry, plus research, has overcome the old hazards and improved effectiveness of today's refined oils. Oil sprays, both summer and winter, kill the eggs of mites, aphids, cankerworms, webworms and leaf hopper and control some adults, too. Kill is accomplished by the deposit of a minute amount of paraffin that interferes with the breathing or gas exchange of the egg or insect. Spray oils have advantages over some of the chemical insecticides. They are non-poisonous to people, pets and birds. They are rapidly biodegradable, nearly odorless and have no lasting effect on the environment. As with all sprays, though, there are limitations. Plants suffering from drought may be sensitive and a few varieties should be avoided. Call WOODWINDS (924-3500) for your Dormant Oil Spray in March.

Don't forget the Philadelphia Flower Show begins March 11 thru 18 at the Civic Center.

Most Princeton Architects Are Descendants Of Mentors Jean Labatut or Kenneth Kassler

Princeton is full of architects. All of them seem prosperous and happy — one said "fat and happy" — and most of them seem to get along well with one another.

A significant number are the descendants, linear or collateral, of either Jean Labatut, former director of graduate architectural studies at Princeton University, or the late Kenneth Kassler — himself a student of Labatut's — or possibly of both men.

It's risky to name them because somebody might be left out, but — J. Robert Hillier, William H. Walker II, Jeremiah Ford, William Short, Raymond A. Bowers, Philip Collins, Archibald Kerr, Hans K. Sander, A. Perry Morgan, Harrison Fraker, Philip Holt, Charles Agle, Burton Weisbecker.

Cousins from another branch of the tree trace their ancestory to the offices of the late John Diehl: Jerry Uhl, Richard Hoisington, Leo Mahoney, John Zvosek, and in a double-cousin relationship, Jeremiah Ford.

And the grafting and pruning, joining and twining, intertwining and splitting among Princeton's architecture firms makes it seem as though most of the architects named above have, at one time or another, been each other's partners.

Hero Worship. "So many of us just worship this guy," says Jeremiah Ford.

Every architect who studied under him speaks of Professor Labatut not only worshipfully but with deepest affection (see box). Now a frail 85 and still living in Princeton, he retired from the University in 1967, having come to Princeton in 1928 as "chief critic" for graduate students in architecture.

One of those students was Ken Kassler, who received his Master of Fine Arts in architecture under Labatut in 1930.

"Ken was the first architect to practice in Princeton who wasn't a member of the faculty," says Mr. Walker.

Working with the late Sherley Morgan, dean of the school of architecture, Mr. Kassler designed Westminster Choir College (1938). Later, in the 1950s, he was asked by Mr. Morgan to work with him on the original YM-YWCA building at Avalon (now Paul Robeson) Place.

He had become a partner of Ray Bowers when that architect established his pioneering firm in 1938, pioneering because it combined architecture and construction divisions within the same firm.

Until Mr. Kassler began to practice, people went elsewhere for architects, usually to New York or Philadelphia. Mr. Walker remembers that architects used to grumble about members of the University faculty who practiced their craft on the side: they had free office space, free drafting and secretarial services, no overhead ...

"Invited Critic." Mr. Kassler was an instructor at the University from 1930 to 1933, and served as "invited critic" of graduate students' designs from time to time. He was also head of the advisory council of the school of architecture.

After World War II, he left Ray Bowers to practice by himself, and in 1946, rented office space at 18 Nassau. It's an address that Mr. Ford believes has sheltered almost as many architects as the legendary 101 Park Avenue in New York, where the Big Names of the 1930s had their drafting tables.

"I began with Ken 38 years ago, in February of 1946," Mr. Walker recalls.

Later, Mr. Ford, Mr. Kerr, Mr. Weisbecker and Mr. Diehl all made the steep climb up the stairs to those 18 Nassau offices to work with Mr. Kassler.

By the time of his death in 1964 at the age of 59, Mr. Kassler had designed not only the original Y, but buildings at the Tenacre Foundation and a large number of houses. His residences were described by one critic as "concise, imaginative structures, characterized by the subtle development of space and sympathetic relationship of building to site."

In 1962, when office space was tight, Mr. Kassler offered desk room to Mr. Sander.

"Ken always had good advice to give and he was very supportive — a respected elder statesman," Mr. Sander remembers.

Four Partners. In late 1964, following Mr. Kassler's death, Walker, Sander, Ford and Kerr decided to form a partnership — still at 18 Nassau. The partnership was dissolved in 1972, but Walker and Sander still practice, not in partnership, in offices at head of the steep flight of stairs. Mr. Kerr has retired.

Mr. Ford joined Mr. Short. He had also studied at Princeton with Professor Labatut, and had apprenticed with Frank Lloyd Wright on the Guggenheim Museum in New York.

Meanwhile, J. Robert Hillier had had Mr. Kassler as an instructor at Princeton, and after receiving his MFA, joined Ray Bowers' firm.

One of his assignments was to work with Professor Labatut — everyone calls him "Labby" — on designing and building Stuart Country Day School of the Sacred Heart.

"Through a Canadian architect I know," Mr. Hillier relates, "I heard, in the early 1970s, that the American Institute of Architects had decided to set up a teaching prize. Well, I organized a sponsoring kind of thing, and Labby got the AIA's first award for architectural education. He was a great inspiration to

Those Who Were Criticized by Jean Labatut React with Gratitude for Great Opportunity

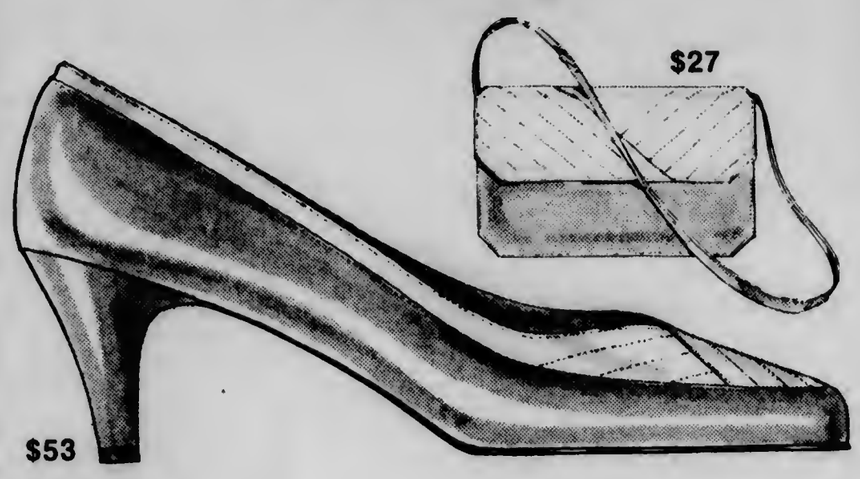
Reverence for Jean Labatut is total and complete among Princeton architects who studied under him.

Hans K. Sander: Labby was terrific. His criticisms were never turned toward his own preferences, but he built on what you had and he might say "you need to re-examine this because it may be leading you into what you don't expect."

A. Perry Morgan: He was fantastic — one of the great architecture teachers of all times. He got down to the fundamentals of design, and he developed the individual, so that you could achieve on your own basis.

Raymond A. Bowers: He was so kind, but he kept pushing you and prodding you to do something better, and he was the kind of teacher from whom you could learn HOW to do it better.

J. Robert Hillier: Labby would say about one of your designs, "Give me 10 good reasons why this should be designed this way, and one reason CANNOT be because you like it that way." He demanded the most out of his people, and you could use him — can use him — as a measure.



William H. Walker II: He would say "study the past, build on the past, but do not copy the past."

Jeremiah Ford: So many of us just worship this guy.

"Pippin" Is Lively, Funny, Full of Surprises In Delightful Production by Theatre Intime

"Pippin," the Roger Hirson - Stephen Schwartz musical, is a smash hit at Theatre Intime. With eight sold-out houses behind it, the run of the play has been extended another week. There will be performances on March 1, 2 and 3 — Thursday through Saturday — at 8:30 p.m.

The reasons for this success are not hard to find. To begin with, it is a funny show, which critics and public loved in New York. It has delightful songs. It moves constantly, a choreographer's dream. It is full of pleasant surprises. And Intime does it full justice.

For this one must thank the director-choreographer, Mark Melodia. A 20-year-old junior at Princeton, he has been a member of Actor's Equity for the past eight years. His exposure to professional theater is evident in the pace and precision he has imparted to this show. The dancing is marvelous. The costuming and lighting are varied and eye-catching. The women are beautiful. The singing, though not operatic, is good and the four-piece orchestra excellent. (Thanks here to musical director Michael Rosenfeld.) The stage is awash with enjoyment. No wonder audiences love it.

The story is pretty well known by now. Son of the emperor Charlemagne, Pippin longs to fulfill himself. Though disapproving the way his father governs, he tries warfare, he tries women, he tries governing (after killing his father), but he is not very good at any of them. Finally he tries love.

A freshman named Carol Dunne, billed as "Leading Player," sets the tone for the whole production. A student who knows her told me, "She is not really a dancer." If this is true, she disguises the fact admirably. She sings five songs, exudes energy and charm, and never lets the show lose its sense of excitement.

Hans Kriefall is an engaging Pippin. His open, honest face and boyish manner make it quite plausible that he would abolish taxes simply because some of his subjects tell him they're too heavy, they can't pay them. His long legs have plenty of agility when it comes to dancing.

Elisabeth Rodgers as Pippin's stepmother and Kay Gayner as his grandmother (may all grandmas have her vivacity!) have a blockbuster of a song each (I just stopped myself from saying "a pippin of a song"). Christina Dockstader, as a widow, is a perfect reason for Pippin to turn domestic, and her son Theo, a lad with a sick duck and an enchanting smile, is played by eight-year-old Mark Wartenburg.

I was sorry to see Charles, Pippin's father, killed in Act One. Douglas Alexander Clark makes him a charmingly insouciant sovereign, who ruffles his son's hair amiably instead of listening to what he says. And Charley Sullivan, as Pippin's half-brother Lewis, is vigor and virility personified.

Among the dancers, Jason P. Jones and Philip M. Ricks stand out by virtue of their grace and power. Three young women who make it impossible to look at anything but them when they dance are — unless I have mis-sorted names in the program — Sarah E. Landolt, Holland Cole, and Antonia Chiodo.

Quite possibly the three remaining performances of "Pippin" may approach sell-out status by the time this review appears in print. Don't let that deter you, however. Note that the Murray Theatre box office has a new telephone number: 452-4950.

TO READ NEW PLAY

At Princeton Inn College. "Leon Spurgeon and the Coke Machine Kids," a new play by Kenneth Robbins, will be given a reading Monday at 7:30 p.m. at Princeton Inn College as the next event in the Playwrights at McCarter series.

The reading will be followed by discussion among audience, playwright and actors. "Leon" is about a man waging war on kids who vandalize the Coke machine outside his truck stop. The play begins as a game, but ends in violence.

...UPON A MATTRESS

At PDS. That updated version of the old Princess and the Pea tale, the musical called "Once Upon a Mattress," is the spring musical for the Drama Club at Princeton Day School to be given this Friday and Saturday at 8 and Sunday at 2:30. Director Don Gilpin has announced that the Sunday performance will feature understudies in major roles.

Cast members are Jamison Suter as Prince Dauntless — who must find a wife before anyone else in the kingdom can marry — Debbie Stachel as the ingenious Princess Winnifred whose gentility is tested by her ability to detect a pea under a pile of mattresses, Sally Snedeker as the abusive Queen Aggravin and Will Blechman as King Sextimus.

Supporting cast members are Tresa McBee, Michael Blaxill, Marty Scasserra, Amber Watson and Jonathan Leaf. They play minstrels, jesters, wizards and ladies of the court.

Understudies for Sunday's performance are Adrienne Spiegel, Stacy Travers and Tory Chen.

Princeton's in Love with John Watson Stewart After Manic Performance in 'Where's Charley?'

his name is John Watson Stewart. Three. Separate. Names. No hyphen.

If you saw P.J. & B.'s "Where's Charley?" you don't have to ask "Who's John?" because John was Charley.

"Absolutely superb, wild performance as Charley's Aunt," Town Topics' critic wrote. And indeed the performance and the exuberant 28-year-old who performed have, as the saying goes, the whole town talking.

"It seems like it, doesn't it?" was John's response when a reporter asked whether he's headed for a career in theatre. "I guess I'm going from an avocation to a vocation."

THE NAME OF CHARLEY'S AUNT IS JOHN WATSON STEWART. And here he is. Bedecked, at the moment. But he is equally at ease suited up for hockey and soccer, or in a dancer's leotard. Writes, too. See below for more. (Cliff Moore Photo)

Although he might seem to be following dancer Ray Bolger, who originated the part in "Where's Charley?", John didn't start out on the yellow brick road toward a singing and dancing career. Sports came first and are still very important. At Beloit College (class of '78) he was big in ice hockey and soccer: captain, "most valuable player," All-Conference. But he was majoring in English and wanted — wants — to be a writer.

Slight, sinewy and lithe with the thick shock of black hair you see on the Irish and electric-blue Irish eyes, John is tumbling into all of it at once, studying singing with Milt Lyon, acting with McCarter's Penelope Reed, dancing at the Princeton Ballet Society, tap at Ellen McDonald's Body Center.

Bitten by the Bug. He'd lived in Princeton until he was nine, and returned because sister Sally and brother-in-law Steve Gilbert live in Pennington and he had friends here, and there were the Princeton Soccer Club and the Princeton Hockey Club to lure him east.

Then, three years ago, his friend Roxanne Sly suggested he audition for P.J. & B.'s "Kiss Me Kate".

"I remember Joan Lucas — she was the choreographer — asked if I could tell one foot from another...

"...and the bug bit me.".

The following summer, he was in "Carousel" and "Brigadoon" at Washington Crossing, and there he met Mary Pat Robertson.

"She asked me if I'd be in her modern dance concert that fall. I didn't even know what modern dance was!"

They presented Robertson's "Field and Stream" at 185 Nassau Street and later in New York.

Teamwork Dance, the Robertson group, now has seven other members besides John, and just "grew of its own," he says. Teamwork will appear the first weekend in April at the Art People Place in Princeton.

Meanwhile, John began coaching junior varsity ice hockey at Princeton Day School in the '81-'82 season and won the part of Will Parker in a Bernardsville production of "Oklahoma!".

Until this year, when he began at the Princeton Ballet Society, he'd had no formal dance training. But gradually he came to see that all those years of sports had given him skill and experience in the movement of the body.

Electric Experience. This January, Teamwork performed for 3000 kids in the Bethlehem-Allentown area and the electricity of that experience is still flowing: "they expected a lecture-demo, and we gave 'em fantasy, dance, a dance-story. I love the whole performing and creative side — seeing all those kids respond! They knew what dance and performance were about by the time we were finished."

The chronology stumbles over itself: John understudied Nanki Poo in P. J. & B.'s "Mikado;" played a minor speaking role in "Camelot;" founded Backstage Breaks with Richard Niedt presenting "West Side Story" ('82) and "Kiss Me Kate" ('83) at Washington Crossing; appeared in "Guys and Dolls" and "Oklahoma!" also on the Crossing stage; played Mill Hill Playhouse in Trenton; outdoor performances at Cape May; the Festival at Liberty State Park; Mercer County Community College; Princeton Inn College ...

And in 1981, he began singing lessons with Milton Lyon, director of P.J. & B. musicals.

"Yes, I was someone he had in mind for the part in 'Where's Charley?' but if somebody came along who was better ...

"Milt has savvy and a good theatre eye. He knew I could do it better than I knew myself. Charley is kind of a part of me: that bumbling, lovesick, gosh-golly kind of fellow is in me somewhere.

"Knowing that Ray Bolger had played the part helped a lot. I have a great affinity for his character."

John had a good time, but it was his first leading role, so there was pressure and responsibility.

"Suddenly, I'd think — I'm going to be performing in two weeks; I can't just mush like this! and I'd tell myself to knuckle down.

" 'Charley' was entertaining, and everyone had a good time, and that's so valuable because there's so much that just isn't entertaining."

Balks at Labels. He shakes his head vigorously: "I balk at the label of 'dancer' or 'actor' or 'singer.' I have so much to learn! I feel like a novice.

"I'm more comfortable writing than doing anything else. I used to write short stories, but now I'm doing more theatre-dance pieces, trying to bring the different arts together."

He has found that if the dialogue is timed properly, it's possible for a dancer to dance and speak at the same time. Using this device, he once wrote a detective story in dance.

To support his avocations, John works in the Sword and Company research library, originally full-time but now part-time so he can take his voice lessons.

The hockey season is now over. He played with the Princeton Hockey Club and was captain of the Princeton Soccer Club until last spring, "but there isn't time for sports, although I keep up with all my athletic friends."

Next?

Might be an indoor musical for Backstage Breaks (the weather at Washington Crossing can be a dampener). John would like dance leads with singing, like "Pal Joey," "Barnum," or "anything Danny Kaye, Bolger or Dick Van Dyke have done."

There's even another project besides Backstage Breaks ...

"I'm really 'going to school' in theatre and dance, and I like to think 'Charley' was my senior thesis. Now it's time to think about graduate school."

'THE DINING ROOM'

Features McCarter Regulars. It is essentially the same dining room throughout. But the people who move through it — more than 50 in all, in 18 sharply observed vignettes — are constantly changing. Some love the room, some hate it some ignore it.

The play is "The Dining Room" by A. R. Gurney, Jr. Directed by Nagle Jackson, it comes to McCarter Theatre this Wednesday and will stay through March 18. The 50-odd characters are acted by three men and three women. These six are the strength and charm of the production.

Five of the six are old McCarter hands. They have become masters of ensemble acting. You saw them all in "Hamlet" in the fall of '82 and again in "The Three Sisters" a year ago. All but one were in "Saint Joan" this fall. And the only newcomer fits into the group as if they had never been apart. She is Mary Martello, a Princeton resident, fresh from playing half a dozen different characters in "Judevine," and about to appear on McCarter's main stage for the first time.

Here are the others. Penelope Reed has a well earned reputation for versatility over three seasons at McCarter. Nothing, however, has prepared us for her extraordinary portrayal of a nonagenarian grandmother who can't recognize her children or her home at a Thanksgiving dinner.

And Jay Doyle. The former Polonius of "Hamlet" becomes (among other roles) a boisterous brat at a children's birthday party, an uncomfortable philanderer with his best friend's wife, and a precise business man explaining to his son how every detail of his funeral is to be handled.

One of Stacy Ray's roles is that of a rebellious daughter who hates dancing school and wants her mother to let her go to a play with her aunt. (Mother: "It's a very talky play called 'Saint Joan' " Daugher: "I bet Saint Joan

Roo Brown in NYC

"Delightful new musical revue," is the way New York Times critic Frank Rich describes "My Name Is Alice" ("less-than-inspiring title," he notes), in which Princeton performer Roo Brown plays a leading part.

Roo was most recently seen in Princeton last month at the Inn Cabaret benefit for the Princeton High School choir and orchestra.

Describing her as "a find," critic Rich writes of "the matronly Roo Brown, who brings both wry humor and emotional candor to a gallery of middle-aged survivors." The revue consists of 20 songs and sketches about women, "but the show's feminism is worn lightly."

"Alice" is at the American Place Theatre, 111 West 46th Street.

MUSIC

QUARTET IN DEBUT

At Choir College. The newly formed Westminster Faculty Quartet will give its first recital on Sunday at 4 in Bristol Chapel on the campus of Westminster Choir College.

Under the musical direction of Glenn Parker, the group will sing quartets and duets of Franz Schubert, Joseph Haydn, Gabriel Faure, Gioacchino Rossini, and Johannes Brahms. They will also sing a selection of early American songs including pieces by Stephen Foster and Henry C. Work. Mr. Parker will accompany on the piano.

The four members of the group are on the voice faculty of Westminster Choir College. They include Anne Ackley, Lindsey Peters Christiansen, Frederick Urrey, and Daniel Pratt.

Anne Ackley, soprano, holds a bachelor of arts degree from Sarah Lawrence and a Master of Music degree from the New England Conservatory. She has been soloist with the New York Schola Cantorum, the Springfield Symphony Orchestra, the San Francisco Symphony, and here at All Saints' Episcopal Church and with Princeton Pro Musica.

Lindsey Peters Christiansen, mezzo-soprano, joined the faculty of Westminster Choir College in 1977, after seven years on the voice faculty of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Frederick Urrey, tenor, joined the Westminster faculty last fall. He maintains an active performing career as soloist with major choral organizations, orchestras, and early music ensembles in United States and Europe.

Daniel Pratt, baritone, is Associate Dean of the College and head of the voice department at Westminster. He holds degrees in music from Baylor University and George Peabody College, and as a Fulbright Scholar, he did post-graduate work in Cologne, Germany.

The recital is free and the public is invited. For more information call 921-3202.

STRINGS ARE FOCUS

Not Keyboard. Music for bowed piano will be presented by the Colorado College New Music Ensemble on Thursday, March 1 at 8:30 p.m. in the McAlpin Rehearsal Room at Woolworth Center, on the university campus. Sponsored by the Friends of Music, the concert is free.

Founded in 1972 by Stephen Scott, a professor of music at Colorado College, the ensemble of ten players offer a new concept in piano sound with the players manipulating the strings of the piano with flexible and rigid bows and other implements. Prof. Scott has composed five two-handed bowed piano works, and the ensemble has performed throughout the United States on 12 concert tours and numerous national broadcasts.

The Ensemble will present four pieces, one of which, "Arcs," won the New England Conservatory-Rockefeller Foundation competition for American chamber music in 1980. It was premiered by the Conservatory's Contemporary Ensemble at Jordan Hall (Boston) and at Carnegie Recital Hall in December, 1980. Another piece, "Rainbows," was premiered by the Colorado College New Music Ensemble at Soundscape (New York) in 1981 and has since been performed live and in broadcast across the country.

The Ensemble's recording of "Rainbows" served as the theme music for the National Public Radio Broadcasts of the New Music America Festivals from San Francisco in 1981 and Chicago in 1982.

VIOLINIST TO PLAY

With N.J. Symphony. Aaron Rosand, violinist, will join the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra under the young American conductor Gerhardt Zimmermann for a concert Saturday, March 10, at 8:30 at the Trenton War Memorial.

Mr. Rosand will perform Saint-Saens' Concerto No. 3. Mozart's Overture to The Magic Flute will open the program, which also includes Berlioz Symphonie fantastique.

Tickets are available at $16.50, $13.50, $11.50 and $9.50 with student and senior rush tickets available one hour before performance at $6.50. Tickets may be purchased at the door, or in advance from the New Jersey Symphony box office, (201) 624-8203, or toll-free in New Jersey: (800) 631-3407. Charge orders will be accepted by phone and group discounts are available.

CIVIL DEFENSE SPOOFED. An evening of one-man shows by political comedians Paul Zaloom, above, and Paul Zimet will be performed Thursday at 8 at Princeton Inn College Theater. Admission is $3. Mr. Zaloom's performances, which use visual effects to communicate political satire, have been seen by audiences throughout the northeast. Mr. Zimet teaches in the Princeton University's Theater and Dance Department. Both are members of Performing Artists for Nuclear Disarmament (PAND) and have toured with the Bread and Puppet Theater.

wouldn't go to dancing school in a million years." Mother: "Yes, and look what happened to her!") Stacy also plays a mother, a dinner hostess and a cook.

Greg Thornton is a hard-sell architect eager to cut up the dining room into a doctor's suite; and also a man whose old-fashioned sense of honor about following up an insult to his brother gives rise to a particularly amusing yet touching scene.

And Rob Lanchester leaps the generation gap (as indeed do most of the others) as a father unsympathetic to his daughter's marital troubles and as several young boys unable to persuade their elders to take their desires seriously.

These are but samples. With uncannily good dialogue, and offering the pleasure of showing favorite actors in a variety of roles, "The Dining Room" bids fair to be an unusual sort of hit.

WE'RE AT HOME

Ballet II. Two performances of works new to the company's repertoire will be danced this Sunday at 1 and 3:30 by Princeton Ballet II, the non-professional apprentice wing of the Princeton Ballet Company. Performances will be at the 262 Alexander Street studios.

"Arcadian Revels," by Mary Pat Robertson, co-founder of the Princeton group, Teamwork Dance, Inc., will be given Sunday for the first time in Princeton. Four short ballets done for the company by Sherry Alban will also be performed: "Back to Bach," "Hats," "Moog Suite" and "Pastiche."

TRY ON A NEW SCENT or look for spring at Impressions of Palmer Square where the latest fashion colors in make-up by Lancaster, Germaine Monteil, and Borghese are in ample supply. Perfumes, colognes, talcs, and gifts imported from France and England can be found here. Sandy Jackson, manager, says that "Le Glow" - a new blush and beauty bar - will soon arrive.

IT'S NEW To Us

SPRING SCENTS

From Impressions. Celebrate spring (or cure mid-winter blues) with an exotic new scent from Impressions of Nassau Street where the selection for men and women alike will please the senses. A tranquil alluring environment has been created by owner Dorothy Briggs since she opened the shop over a year ago. Its ideal location gives the shopper the opportunity to take some time in selecting an unusual gift, the latest in cosmetics with plenty of expert advice on how to use them, and view a vast variety of perfumes and colognes.

Break the pattern and choose something different this spring. Try on a new look, be adventurous, is the advice of the shop's able staff. Three excellent lines of cosmetics are attractively displayed: Lancaster, Germaine Monteil, and Borghese. The newest colors for spring and summer, soft corals, bronzes and the earthy tones to accompany the fashion designers' mandates can be sampled at leisure with the assistance of experienced make-up professionals. Sandy Jackson, who has previously worked at Saks Fifth Avenue and run a boutique in South Hampton, is currently managing the store.

Of course, while learning how to make oneself up effectively is important, the first priority is a comprehensive skin care program. Germaine Monteil's Acti Vita day and night creams and lotions, and Lancaster's Suractif will protect and moisturize the skin properly before make-up is applied. Long-term use will show remarkable results according to Impressions.

Delightful scents and handsome presentation attract the shopper to Floris of London, which markets talcum, bath essence, room perfumes, toilet water, colognes, and perfumes from England. The fragrances are available for men and women and a country potpourri in china pomanders from London will please as a gift.

Several interesting gifts will catch the eye at Impressions this month. Delicate bud vases, romantic atomizers for dressing tables, cosmetic cases, a set of make-up brushes for expert application (a travel one for $22.50 and a luxurious set of sable ones in a wooden pot for $68), and travel razor cases are among the selection. The earthy, spiced smell of Rigaud candles, housed in a handsome glass and silver jar have become favorites in Princeton and make nice house gifts.

Impressions tries to select perfumes and colognes which are not easily found in the larger stores. Audace, First, Ose, Valentino, and Nina Ricci will give a new feeling of chic. Others might include: Bal a Versailles, Ecusson, Chole, Balenciaga, Prelude, Ombre Rose, or the popular Caleche by Hermes. If the shopper is into status symbols, purchase a bright orange windbreaker with Hermes printed on it!

Men are by no means forgotten here. Floris, Captain Molyneaux, Marbert, Man, Alain Dellon, Versailles and Adolfo are only a few of the many scents on display for that special man.

The shop's hours Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday are from 10 to 6, on Thursdays and Fridays, 10 to 8:30 and Sunday from 12 to 4.

DISCOUNTED HANDBAGS

At Susan Greene. Chic is not complete without a handsome handbag to complement whatever a woman wears. Flashes of color, texture, and the muted tones highlight the stunning collection of handbags found at Susan Greene in the Marketplace on Route 27. The good news is that the shop, which also features luggage, is full of bags of all prices, from $6.99 leather-like ones to beautiful handmade Carlo Fiori designs, all discounted by at least 20 percent. Some bags seen on sale are marked down as much as 50 percent off retail prices. The shop, one of three in New Jersey, is owned by Mark Greenfield.

Susan Greene Handbags specializes in a selection of designer bags which is bound to please the discriminating Princeton shopper. Morris Moscowitz, Meyers, Fiori and the lovely Bagheera Italian handbags are nicely displayed in the shop. New trends seem to be a combination of textured skins in an array of colors with the traditional leathers, very effective and new.

While fashion seems to be tempering down, back to classic narrow lines and simple colors, the handbags follow suit. A large collection of greys, beiges, even the traditional black bag, can be seen here.

Now is the time to find a wide selection of spring and summer bags, before they disappear, because the prices are so reasonable at Susan Greene! Classic white leather clutches, satchels, pouches and the popular feedbag shape will carry a woman's gear around for the next several months. Soft pastels such as yellow, pink, blue, and lavendar will accent a pretty silk dress for evening.

Leather and Straw Bags. If all-leather is not your bag, take a look at the leather and straw combinations which are ideal for everyday wear. Several choices of Dooney and Bourke all-weather leather shoulder strap bags begin at $69.99. Genuine cork bags with leather trim are unusual and durable choices.

Accents for evening dress might be one of the reptile clutches, the soft gold ones, or a stunning mother-of-pearl purse. A copy of a Whiting and Davis evening bag is only $24.99.

The coveted Bagheera handbags are found in chic vertical striped leather in an elegant grey and beige combination. Black patent leathers will accent that new wool suit for spring, which may be early this year according to some weathermen.

The sportier look is also available here. Stone Mountain washable sport cloth, a vinylized cotton, and natural leather bags are good buys. A large leather tote comes in several colors and will carry all of those odds and ends on the train for a day in New York for only $17.99.

Planning a trip south? Take advantage of the terrific savings on sets of luggage or individual pieces on display at Susan Greene. A five-piece set of Venturi luggage, regularly $295, is only $135 in brown, navy, black and maroon. Suitcases and garment bags by Lark, Wings, Venturi's Presidential collection, and the favorite standby, molded American Touristers and Samsonite, are all available here.

A special gift for a busy professional is a finished leather or a belting leather Lion's attache case, exquisitely crafted and discounted by 20 percent. Repairs on all items purchased at the store are offered.

"We try to stock something to please everyone here. I think our selection is amazing," says manager Mollie Pistilli, who runs the shop with Pat Wagonblast who formerly worked at a cosmetic shop in Princeton.

Looking ahead to graduation, and spring holiday gifts, Bosca for men and women, Anne Klein by St. Thomas, and several others by that company for men are good ideas for gifts. Soft leather wallets and tiny purses in shocking pink, purple and grey are thoughtful gifts any time of year.

—Susan Trowbridge

BAGS GALORE: Mollie Pistilli, manager of Susan Greene handbags in the Marketplace, displays one of the hundreds of designer bags which are sold there at discounted prices. Luggage, attache cases, and a fine selection of leather wallets are also a feature of the shop.

Playoff May Be Needed to Decide 3-Team Ivy Title Race; Tigers Need to Beat Both Yale, Brown Here This Weekend

With but one weekend of play remaining in the wildest Ivy League basketball race in decades, the possibilities have been narrowed somewhat, and the best appears to favor a playoff.

Princeton, Cornell and Harvard are tied for first, and although either one could win the title outright, the expectation here is that Harvard and Princeton will finish in a tie, and meet in a one-game playoff Tuesday.

SPORTS

The three-team deadlock was brought about last weekend, when Princeton bowed to Cornell, 33-31, at Ithaca Friday night, losing its one-game lead. It rebounded the following evening to whip Columbia 75-51.

The Big Red followed that victory with a 49-46 overtime triumph over Penn, while Harvard won twice on the road, beating Yale, and then knocking Brown out of contention.

ONE OF A DOZEN: Billy Ryan dished out 12 assists, including a perfect pass to Isaac Carter here, in Princeton's 75-51 rout of Columbia in New York Saturday night. The Tiger captain also scored 15 points. (W.L. Bill Allen, Jr. photo)

The schedule favors the Tigers and the Crimson, who will play twice at home; while Cornell will be on the road for its final two contests. Harvard will definitely be favored to beat the Big Red on Friday, and Columbia the following evening.

Cornell squeezed out a two-point victory when the two met in Ithaca, but it has done poorly on the road, winning only once in five tries. Dartmouth is a solid threat to knock off the Ithacans on Saturday

The Tigers will be in the friendly confines of Jadwin Gym, against Yale Friday night and Brown Saturday. Both games start at 8 p.m. A three-way tie is possible, but highly unlikely.

After the rout of Columbia, Pete Carril was ecstatic about the victory over the Lions.

"I was hoping to win at Cornell," Carril said. "That way, it would have ensured us of the split. But they came back tonight and played very intense, very smart, ran the right stuff, made the shots and played very well.

"We're going home tonight in first place. The rest of our games are at home. If we don't win our home games, we don't deserve to be in any kind of playoff. I never thought we'd get this far. But now that we have, we can't accept anything other than victory."

Can Tigers Stay Hot? Carril has his finger on it, when he says the Tigers don't deserve to win if they can't win at home. The question is, which Princeton team will be playing this Friday and Saturday.

The past two weekends, the Orange and Black has managed to play only one good game out of two. It looked fine against Dartmouth at home two Fridays ago, then fell apart against Harvard the following night.

Last Friday, it threw away a 10-point lead in the second half against Cornell, scoring just four points in the final 16 minutes. With their backs to the wall Saturday night, Carril's players responded with a superlative effort against Columbia. This time around it will need to play well both nights.

The Tigers took the measure of both Yale and Brown on their home courts earlier this month, and should do so again However, it may not mean much to say that neither has won here in more than 20 years (Brown never). That was also the case with Harvard until its latest visit.

Light Blue Trampled. If Columbia coach Buddy Mahar had hoped for another slowdown contest with a chance to win at the end, his dreams were quickly shattered by an aggressive Tiger quintet.

Putting on one of their best offensive displays of the season, the Tigers were not afraid to go to the basket against the Lions' man-to-man defense.

Following several ties and lead changes in the opening minutes, Princeton took a five-point lead against the Light Blue, late in the first half. The home team rallied to take a 23-21 lead a short time later, but John Smyth immediately hit on a three-point play to give Princeton a lead it never lost again.

By the intermission, it was 30-25, and when the Lions tried to press in the second half the roof fell in. Billy Ryan hit his teammates with one fine pass after another, including three to Kevin Mullin on fast breaks, to help break the game open.

Held to just a basket and on the bench with three fouls for a good part of the first 20 minutes, Mullin poured in 19 points in the second half. All the Tiger starters joined in the fun, with Smyth having his best game in quite a while.

Here's an amazing fact about a current big league baseball player, third baseman Wade Boggs of the Boston Red Sox ... Boggs batted .349 in his rookie year of 1982 and then hit .361 in 1983, giving him a 2-year combined batting average of .357 — and that's a better start than almost any batter in major league history ... For instance, the greatest hitter of all time — Ty Cobb — batted just .293 his first 2 seasons.

scoring 16. A more aggressive Howie Levy had 15, and Isaac Carter, eight. Ryan had 15 to go with a dozen assists, only two less than the entire Columbia team.

Columbia pulled to within four, 35-31, at one point, but the Orange and Black ran off six straight points to lead by 10 with 14:55 to go. Ten minutes later, a dunk shot by Levy put Princeton up by 20, 61-41. Carril cleared his bench and the memories of the previous night faded away.

Cornell Conquers Tigers. Everybody knew that Princeton's 20-point victory over the Big Red in Jadwin just two weeks ago would mean nothing in Ithaca, where the Big Red has been undefeated in Ivy Play since last year.

However, the Tigers had a golden chance to break that streak, leading by as many as 10, 27-17, with 16:26 remaining in the game. Who would have guessed they would score just four more points after that?

Cheered on by a capacity crowd of almost 5,000, the home team rallied to score 12 straight points, led by the outside shooting of freshman guard John Bajusz. He finished with a game high 14.

A shot by center Ken Bantum gave the Big Red a 29-27 lead with 7:55 to play. Levy finally broke the Tigers' cold streak, connecting from inside to tie the score.

Princeton had a chance to go in front after a turnover, but Ryan missed an open Carter with a poor pass. Another Bajusz jumper put Cornell back on top with 2:54 to play, but Levy again brought his team even a few seconds later.

Cornell then played for the last shot, working the final 2:20 off the clock. It came, easier than expected when Drew Martin found an opening and drove in for the game-winning shot with two seconds left.

The loss wiped out a fine first-half effort by the Tigers, who built a 22-15 lead, after trailing at the start. The Orange and Black shot 58 percent from the field to just 38 for Cornell, as every starter, except Carter, hit at least two baskets. Mullin led with eight points. When Bantum picked up his third foul near the intermission, the Tigers looked to be in command.

But the second half was a nightmare of missed opportunities, producing a grand total of just nine points, six by Levy and three by Ryan, including one of two foul shots on a technical foul called against Cornell's coach. Princeton shot 15 for 29, the Big Red, 16 of 31. The final score was more indicative of each team's inability to score, rather than the slowdown tactics in the Columbia game.

The Tigers looked like two different teams on successive nights, and only if they play the way they did against Columbia will the Ivy title come their way.

—Jeb Stuart

SAD FINISH RECORDED

By Princeton Hockey Team. The once-bright hopes for a young team that supposedly would get better as the season wore on were finally and unequivocally put to rest last weekend by the Princeton hockey team.

The Tigers dropped both of their final games in New England, beaten 4-3 Friday night by Dartmouth, and 6-0 Saturday evening by Harvard. The losses closed out coach Jim Higgins' seventh season here at 6-18-1, the poorest finish since the 1978-79 mark of 5-17-4. They ended 4-6 in the league in fifth place.

Plagued by a rash of injuries to several of the top players, and the loss of high scorer Ed Lee, the Orange and Black slid steadily downhill after the first few games. As in past years, the failure to do well on the road and against non-Ivy teams hurt most. Princeton won only once away from Baker Rink, and beat only one Divison I, non-league opponent.

The opportunity to pick up a second road victory seemed good against Dartmouth, a team that had won just twice in 23 contests, and lost 5-2 here two weeks ago. After a goal by Pat Brodeur gave Princeton a 1-1 tie in the first period, tallies by Tim Oshier and Cliff Abrecht overcame a 2-1 deficit in the second.

However, that 3-2 advantage disappeared early in the third, when the home team scored twice in 10 seconds. Princeton was never heard from again. Wally McDonough faced 35 shots, while the Big Green's goalie, Mark Hoppe, had just 25 come his way.

The following night, the Orange and Black directed only 22 at Harvard goalie Grant Blair (Harvard had 38), and none got by him, as he recorded his sixth shutout of his collegiate career.

Princeton stayed with the Cantabs through a scoreless first period, but the winners roughed up McDonough for four goals in the second. His collegiate career ended at that point, as Dave Shea replaced him in the nets for the final 20 minutes. He allowed two more goals.

Will next year be any better? Only McDonough and defenseman Rick Valdarchi will graduate in June. That leaves the team almost intact, with either Dave Marotta or Shea expected to take over in goal. If players like Rob Scheuer and Steve MacDonald stay healthy, there is hope for improvement.

And hope, as any Princeton hockey fan knows, is all there is to live on from year to year in this sport.

—Jeb Stuart

PROVIDENCE IS NEXT

For Women's Hockey Team. It's still a small, small world as far as the top teams in women's hockey are concerned, too small for the likes of Princeton's squad.

The Tigers, who won their final two league games last weekend over Dartmouth and Harvard, will play their first round in the NCAA tournament this Friday afternoon.

Their opponent, in this four-team event, will be top-ranked Providence, which has already beaten the Orange and Black three times this season. And guess where the game will be: the Friar's rink.

Number two ranked New Hampshire, which handed Princeton its only other loss, will face third-seeded Northeastern in the other pairing. Finals and consolation will be played Saturday.

Win or lose, Princeton can still look back on another satisfying season in Ivy League play. It won its third consecutive title with a perfect 10-0 record; its overall mark is 13-4. Dartmouth and Harvard became the latest victims last Friday and Sunday, losing 6-3 and 5-1.

Against the Big Green, the Tigers had a close first period, leading by just 3-2, but then tallied three unanswered goals in the second to put the game away. Six different players scored for the Orange and Black, Patti Kazmaier, Syrena Carlbom, Kelly O'Dell, Molly Kellogg, Suzanne McGilvray and Cindy Griffin.

Credited with a pair, Carlbom set a new Princeton record for assists, while O'Dell broke her own school mark for most points in a season, with three assists, plus her one goal.

On Sunday, goals by O'Dell and Laura Halldorson got the Orange and Black off to a 2-0 lead against the Crimson

This Week's Games

Tuesday, February 28

Brown at Harvard

If There's a Playoff . . .

If Princeton finishes the Ivy basketball season tied with either Cornell or Harvard, a one-game playoff would be held Tuesday night.

If the opponent is Harvard, the playoff would be at Yale, where Princeton beat Dartmouth, 77-67, to win the title in 1959. A site for a Princeton-Cornell game has not been determined, but might be Lehigh, Lafayette, or possibly the Palestra.

Princeton won its last league playoff, beating Penn, 54-40, at Lafayette in 1981. The previous year it lost to the Quakers there by a point, 50-49.

The Ivy League winner will enter the NCAA preliminary round Tuesday, March 13 — opponent and site not yet known.

skaters. The visitors opened the second period with a goal, but three straight power play goals, two in the second and one in the third sealed Princeton's victory. Goalie Sue Gouchoe faced just 16 shots.

PDS TITLE HOPES ENDED

By Pennington. The season offically ended last Thursday for the Princeton Day basketball team when it walloped a weak Atlantic City Friends team, 72-48, on the road.

But in reality, it was all over 24 hours earlier, when Pennington nipped the Panthers, 63-59, in overtime, ending their chances of winning the Prep B title. It was a tough defeat for PDS, which had beaten the Raiders earlier in the season, but the fine accomplishments of first-year coach Frank Konstantynowicz are not diminished.

The Blue and White ended with its best record, 15-10, in several seasons, as Frankie "K" breathed new life into the program. He'll lose four seniors from this team, Andy Bing, Scott Roberts, Jamie Zahner, and Frank Little, but count on PDS to be competitive next winter.

Had it not been for the super performance of Pennington senior Jay Bailey, PDS might well have made the finals against Rutgers Prep, which Pennington won, 58-57, on Saturday with some more last second heroics. Bailey scored six points in the last three minutes of regulation time, and 10 of the winners' 11 in overtime for a game high 27.

Bing was almost as spectacular for the Panthers, scoring 24, including 11 in the first period. His hot hand enabled PDS to build a 15-12 lead at that point, and expand it to 29-20 at the half.

PDS came out cold after the intermission, not scoring until 3:06 remained in the quarter. Pennington managed to tie the contest during this dry spell, but PDS built the margin back up to seven, 40-33, at period's end.

Pennington rallied again in the fourth period and tied the score at 46 apiece, but the Blue and White seemed secure with a three-point lead, 50-47, with less than a minute and a half to play. Bailey then hit the next five points, the last three with just five seconds left to give his team a 52-50 lead.

Roberts staved off defeat with a last-second 15-foot jump shot to tie the score, but there was no stopping Bailey in the five-minute extra session. He hit a lay-up and then sank eight of eight free throw attempts to seal the victory.

To the Panthers' credit, they shelved their disappointment, and blew out AC Friends quickly the next day, taking a 23-12 lead in the first period. Little and Tim Howard shared scoring honors with 14 points apiece, Bing had 13, and Zahner, 11.

FOURTH AND LAST TIME

PDS Loses to L'ville. Until the Princeton Day hockey team figures out a way to beat Lawrenceville again, it may have a difficult time achieving a winning record.

The Panthers lost to their nearby rivals for the fourth time in four games this season, and finished with a 6-12-1 mark. The two schools always schedule a home-and-home series, and usually end up meeting each other in other tournaments during the season.

This latest time found the two on the ice together Saturday afternoon in the finals of PDS's traditional season-ending tournament. The result was the same as the other three, with the Larries winning, 5-2.

They never trailed, taking a 2-0 first period lead, and added two more in the second and one in the third, as five different players scored. Chris McCabe got both of the Panther goals; Chris Hayes had two assists, Eric Bylin one. PDS goalie Brad Smith turned away 32 shots.

McCabe was the hero in the Blue and White's overtime victory against Brunswick School (Conn.) in the semi-finals Friday. McCabe also assisted on Hayes' first period goal, which held up until the final stanza, when the visitors tied the score.

Lawrenceville needed a goal with 1:06 remaining in regulation time to give it a 7-6 triumph over Williston-Northampton in the other semi-final game.

HUNTERDONS DOMINATE

In District Mat Matches. It should come as no surprise to wrestling followers that Princeton High School, struggling all season long, did not do well in the NJSIAA District 17 matches held last weekend at Hunterdon Central High School.

The District 17 matches have long been dominated by Hunterdon Central, North Hunterdon and Voorhees and this year was no exception. Host Hunterdon Central, with five individual champions, won the team standings with 160 points; North Hunterdon, four champions, was second with 129, and Voorhees captured the three remaining individual crowns in finishing third in the team standings with 117½ points.

Ewing was the most successful school from Mercer County. The Blue Devils finished fourth with 32 points and just missed winning the area's only individual title when Monti Robinson lost a 9-7 match to Hunterdon Central's Bill Rehl in the final round in the 108-pound division, after leading 5-0 early in the match. West Windsor, 29½ points, and Lawrence (29) followed Ewing in the standings. PHS finished second from the bottom with 6½ points

Princeton's only seeded wrestler in the tournament, Brett Van deBovenkamp, seeded fourth in the 188-pound division with an 11-6 record, did not compete. PHS coach Lee Merrill reported that Van deBovenkamp suffered a recurrence of a pinched nerve in his neck and his doctor ordered him not to wrestle.

PHS managed to place one in the consolation round, where heavyweight Tamer El-Shakhs was pinned by third-seeded Jim Lenz of Hunterdon Central in 3:07. The match very easily could have gone the other way, according to Merrill.

"Tamer had Lenz flat on his back," recalled Merrill, but the Little Tiger heavyweight lost his imminent pin when the referee ruled they had gone off the mat. "I bit my tongue and didn't say anything. It's not very often that I question a referee," commented Merrill.

As the match continued, El-Shakhs's shoulder popped out and he was granted a two-minute rest period. He came back and "got stacked up" said Merrill. Tamer, added Merrill, had performed very well against the number one seed and eventual champion, Thor Beveridge of Voorhees, before being pinned by Beveridge in the semi-finals in 4:14. "He gave a very creditable performace in the tournament," said Merrill.

PHS picked up a half point when junior John Blankstein, who had entered the tournament with an 0-7 mark, won his first match of his career, decisioning Mike Sharp of South Hunterdon, 18-9, in the preliminaries. Blankstein was eliminated in the quarter-finals. "He did very well," commented Merrill, who said he saw "modest progress all down the line."

Teammates of Blankstein who were pin victims in the opening round included Paul Crystal, Jeff Robinson, Gabby Ondetti, Evan Cohn, Jonathan Harwood, Guillermo Orlanski and Paul Johnson.

Merrill loses only two from his team this year which won only one dual meet — Evan Cohn and Matt Cohen. With a year's experience under their belts, the Little Tigers should improve on this year's record, but Merrill was cautious.

"We should have a comparable season next year," he said. "I wouldn't want to predict anything outstanding but we should have modest improvement all down the line."

Merrill reported that he plans to run a wrestling clinic this summer in conjunction with the Princeton Recreation Department to try to offset the crucial loss of the middle school feeder system.

HUN'S LIPANI REPEATS

As Prep Mat Champion. Hun School's Todd Lipani, the defending 158-pound NJISAA state wrestling champion, successfully defended his crown when he defeated Greg Kelly of Lawrenceville School, 3-1, in the annual prep school state tournament held during the weekend at Dwight-Englewood.

Todd wrestled pretty conservatively," commented Hun coach Dave Faus, "but he did what he had to do." Lipani ended with a sparkling 23-2 record, including 15 pins.

One of his two losses was a lopsided decision to Kelly in the Mercer County tournament when Lipani was weakened by a bout with the flu. Sophomore Rob Cohun finished fourth as Hun ended tenth in the team standings with 35 points.

Peddie school won the team title with 146½ points, dethroning perennial prep school power, Blair Academy, the 12-time defending champion. Faus noted that Blair had left three of its best wrestlers home. Blair would have ended with six individual winners to Peddie's three, claimed Faus. "They would have won hands down. There's no doubt in my mind they will win the National Prep School championship next week at Lehigh."

Lipani, who will probably continue his career at the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, and Cobun will join Faus in the trip next week to the prep school nationals at Lehigh. Some 600 of the top prep wrestlers from across the nation converge on Lehigh for what Faus said was the biggest such mat tournament in the country.

Faus predicted that Lipani, who won two and lost twice in the same tournament last year, had a good chance to finish among the top four. "There are about 50 kids competing in each weight class," he pointed out, "and if you hit the number one guy early, you're out. It all depends on the luck of the draw.

I think Todd is much improved over last year," continued Faus, who drew attention to Lipani's 16-4 victory over Hamilton's Steve Pfann in a dual meet recently. Pfann distinguished himself during the same weekend by capturing the public school District 24 158-pound championship. His loss to Lipani was his only defeat this season.

Wins Final Dual Meet. Hun won its final dual meet of the regular season last week when it overcame an early 16-0 deficit to defeat Wardlaw-Hartridge, 33-27. The final record for the year is 5-12-1.

After falling behind, Hun took command with four straight falls, starting with Cobun's pin in 3:53 at 141.

Lipani followed with a fall over Dan Welker in 1:43, John Selasko flattened Doug Mrak in 1:30 and Seth Wheaton pinned Keith Hancox in 2:19. Hun also received a pin from Steve Wolf at 135 pounds and a superior, 18-7 decision from Mike Sophocles at 129 pounds.

The win was still another indication that the Raiders had turned their season around after going 0-8 before the Christmas tournament.

Calling All Sailors

The Carnegie Sailing Club annual meeting and pot luck supper is scheduled for Sunday, March 10 at 6:30.

The Carnegie Sailing Club hosts races on Lake Carnegie on Sundays throughout the spring and fall. Most club members race Sunfish or Lasers although the club welcomes all skippers of small sailboats to join.

The annual meeting and pot luck supper is open to anyone interested in learning more about the Carnegie Sailing Club. Call Chris Bethune, 737-9687, for details and to say what you plan to bring (a casserole, salad or dessert for six people). If you cannot attend the meeting on March 10, call Chris Bethune for Carnegie Sailing Club membership information.

"We're looking better," agreed Faus, who completed his third year at the helm.

Faus loses only Lipani and Selasko from his squad through graduation. "I have to be optimistic about the next two years," Faus observed. "Our middle school program has helped us out a lot and I think we ended up on the right note with our win over Wardlaw."

NUGGETS SEEDED FIRST

In Dillon Tourney. In the Junior Division in Dillon Gym basketball last week, the Nuggets defeated the Blue Demons, 62-53, to capture the top position for the Princeton Recreation Department Tournament starting Saturday. The victory avenged an earlier loss to the Blue Demons and set the stage for a possible championship confrontation in three weeks.

Both teams took to the run-and-gun as the 4-2 Blue Demons jumped out to an early 12-4 lead on the shooting of Barry Phox. The Nuggets (5-1) found their shooting touch by the second quarter, but, midway through the third quarter, Phox (20 points) fouled out. His absence put too much scoring burden on the Demons' other scoring standout, Anthony White, who finished with 22 points.

John Burnett, having the best day of his career, scored 24 points for the Nuggets, while Roland Glover added 22 and Mitch Jensen chipped in 15.

In other Junior Division action, the winless Hawks came within four seconds of their first victory before losing to the Blue Crew, 39-38. Jay Jackson's jump shot with four ticks left put the Blue Crew on top. Rydell Thomas's lay-up with ten seconds left in the game had given the Hawks a short-lived lead.

Jackson finished with 26 points, while Blue Crew guard, Jason Plaks tallied 12. The Hawks received a more balanced scoring attack from their players as Shawn Miller, Rydell Thomas and Barnard Simpson scored 18, 11 and 10 points.

Senior Division. The Senior Division regular season standings ended in a first-place tie, as both the Fellas and Houston won decisive victories on their way to a play-off confrontation before the elimination tournament. Houston (4-2) earned its way to the play-off game by defeating the Kumquats, 51-42, behind a fine 30-point performance by John Thompson.

The Kumquats, also 4-2, playing without their scoring leader Pat McKellar, kept the game close throughout the first half, but Thompson's scoring and a tight zone defense denied the Kumquats their inside game. Steve Sigmund added 10 points for Houston.

The Fellas, in one of their best efforts of the season defeated Phi Slamma Jamma Club, 71-32. The victors used a balanced scoring attack as Tim Rumer scored 21 points, David Gross 19, Brian Trelstad 17 and Bill Byrne 10. Darious Young led the Jammers with 20.

HUN GUNNED DOWN

In County Tournament. Hun School was outgunned and outrun by Ewing Saturday in the championship game of the Mercer County Tournament, bowing to the streaking Blue Devils, 82-43. It marked the second year in a row that Hun has fallen to Ewing in the tournament's final round.

There wasn't much left for Hun coach Bob Hendrickson to say after the rout except to salute the victors. "Ewing is a very, very strong team," he said.

"I can't say we didn't play well. We just couldn't stop them. Tom Berry is the best player by far in the county," he added unhesitatingly.

Berry, who is indeed one of the premier players in the area, was the chief architect in the Blue Devils' win, scoring 31 points in shooting 14-for-17 from the floor and pulling down nine rebounds. Ewing was able to force Hun into a running game — the one thing the Raiders did not want to be a part of — and Hun could not stay with the Blue Devils.

From a 10-8 margin in the first period, Ewing scored the next 10 points. It continued to connect on more than 60 percent of its shots (34-of-54) and combined its torrid shooting with a solid defense, holding Hun to its lowest output of the season, to whipsaw Hun into submission.

For Ewing, it was their 21st win in 24 games and the impressive win primed the Blue Devils for their first game in defense of their NJSIAA Group 3 title when they play Wall Township on Friday night.

For Hun, it was the end of its season, one which saw the Raiders win 21 and lose seven. The past two seasons Hun has compiled a 43-11 record.

While the won-lost record was pleasing, Hendrickson commented that the only disappointment was in not winning the state prep school tournament. Hun, the defending state Division A champion and seeded first again this year, was upended in the final game by rival Lawrenceville. Hun gained some measure of revenge for that loss when it defeated Lawrenceville Thursday in the semi-final round of the County Tournament.

"It was nice to come back and beat Lawrenceville," confirmed Hendrickson. "Certainly, it was one of our most gratifying games. Probably the best game we played all year was against Trenton."

Out of his first seven players, Hendrickson will lose six. The lone exception is junior point guard and co-captain Terry Dearden. who averaged nine points a game. Heading the list of those departing are the three post graduate players who carried Hun to its success this year.

They are John McDonough from Christian Brothers Academy who scored 454 points and had a 16.2 average; Ted Bransfield of Pennsbury High in Pennsylvania who tossed in 447 points for a 15.9 average and John Goeke of McCorristin who contributed 265 points and a 9.4 average. Other starters gone are Andrew Marlatt, the 6-6, 228-pound center who had a 5.6 average and Joe Mackin, 4.4 average.

McDonough with 13 and Bransfield with 11 were the top scorers for Hun in the title game with Ewing. Hun had been seeded second behind Ewing and although the seedings held up, Hendrickson, along with other coaches, has expressed a concern that the prestige of the tournament has been diminished by a refusal of all area teams to participate.

The most notable is Trenton High, considered to be the top scholastic team in the County. Attendance at the tourament games, held at the Mercer County Community College gym, was only fair at best; a confrontation between Trenton and Ewing would have filled the stands.

Strategy Clicks. Hun's strategy against Lawrenceville in the semi-finals, was to score early. Hendrickson said later that he felt if Hun could take an early lead against the Larries, who were playing their third game in three days, it could control the game. Hun did.

It outscored Lawrenceville 9-2 in the first eight minutes, increased its lead to 31-19 at intermission, was outscored by nine in the third period, but hung on in the fourth to seal a 69-60 victory. Lawrenceville's run in the third period had sapped the strength of the sluggish Larries, allowing Hun to stick to its game plan: play good defense and work patiently for the best shot.

Hun placed four in double figures: Mc Donough, 18; Bransfield, 14; Dearden, 15, and Mackin, 10.

Lawrenceville (17-6) has three post graduate students of its own on its starting five — David Mitchell, Gig Long and Guy Vise. Mitchell and Vise combined for 28 points against Hun while Long added six.

As it was, Hun had to struggle past Steinert in the opening round to get into the semis.

A dramatic, fade-away, off-balance jumper by Bransfield, from 18 feet out with one second to play, gave Hun a 45-43 win and kept the game from going into overtime. Bransfield scored all eight of Hun's points in the final period.

everyone. Ken himself was a sensitive practitioner who would guide you to make a design both 'good' and 'real'."

Kassler and Weisbecker was formed after Burt Weisbecker had left Dallas — in 1956 — to work for Mr. Kassler. He'd been project manager on the YM-YW building, and the two became partners in 1960.

"Ken was the most talented man in the area at the time," Mr. Weisbecker says.

The partnership lasted until 1962, when Mr. Weisbecker decided to go it alone. As an individual practitioner, he hired both Mr. Ford and Mr. Collins.

But Phil Collins had worked for Mr. Kassler also, for about a year in the early 1960s. Like the others, he had studied with Labby at Princeton.

When he went out on his own, Phil Collins joined with Mr. Uhl and Mr. Hoisington, who is an engineer. Their partnership was the nucleus of the present CUH2A firm.

It was in 1955 that Phil Holt came to Princeton from New York to join Charles Agle. Perry Morgan came along the following year. Both Holt and Morgan had studied with Labatut, each receiving the MFA in 1952.

Architects will often join temporarily in a joint venture for one or more specific projects. "Marriages of convenience," is the way one architect describes them.

Joint Ventures. For the design and construction of Princeton Community Village, a joint venture was formed consisting of two independent architects — Charles Agle and William Short — and the partnership of Holt and Morgan. It was sometimes called "Agle and Short and Holt and Morgan," without commas in between.

Later, the firm of Short and Ford joined with Mr. Fraker on Princeton Professional Park.

Architects make these marriages to draw on each other's skills. Mr. Fraker is a solar expert, for example. Short and Ford are known for restorations and historical projects.

John Diehl started up in 1959, and launched many Princeton architects. It was in the Diehl office that John Zvosek and his present partner, Leo Mahoney, first met. Ford, Uhl and Hoisington also worked with John Diehl at various times.

Mr. Zvosek, with a masters in city planning, had come from Ohio to join John Diehl, and met Mr. Mahoney, who was from Long Island and had gone to school with Mrs. Zvosek.

Each went out on his own, after leaving the Diehl firm — by then, Diehl and Stein — but they joined 16 years ago to form Mahoney and Zvosek.

"A very friendly bunch," is the way Mr. Ford regards Princeton architects.

"It's a nice fraternity," in Mr. Zvosek's view, "When we compete, we COMPETE, but if I have to lose and I lose to one of them, it's not bad. They all do good work."

Asked why architects move in and out of offices so frequently, Mr. Ford says the pay of apprentices isn't very good, and besides you get a different kind of experience in somebody else's office.

Outside Competition. Today, the competition among these various and fluid firms occurs mostly outside Princeton. Nobody practices exclusively in town. Everybody searches out new projects all around the country and there seems to be enough for everyone.

When Mr. Zvosek remarks, " ... they all do good work," there is some proof of this. Last year, Princeton architects won 12 of the 16 awards given by the New Jersey Society of Architects. There were 50 entries.

Not every architect agrees that it's "a very friendly bunch" and some partings have been sorrowful.

"The hardest thing about a partnership is splitting up," Mr. Ford concedes. "It's emotional. And it's worse with architects than with lawyers, who usually take their own clients with them."

There seems to be more than enough work to go around, however.

"Princeton is now a center in the architectural profession, and the name recognition is fantastic!" Mr. Ford has found.

He remembers that Robert W. McLaughlin, then dean of Princeton's school of architecture once advised him, "Don't work in Princeton — it's a terrible place!"

But not many seem to have taken Dean McLaughlin's advice. They remembered, instead, their respect and love for Jean Labatut, and they came back to — or stayed in — Princeton, perhaps lucky enough to have worked with Ken Kassler as well.

Police Arrest 13 In Princeton Area For Drug Dealing

Saying that he hoped it had made a significant dent in the sale of drugs in Princeton and Mercer County, Prosecutor Philip S. Carchman announced at a press conference Friday in Borough Hall the arrest of 13 alleged drug dealers in this area.

"When you have 13 to 15 dealers knocked off at a clip, drugs are not going to be available in Princeton," commented Mr. Carchman. "Dealers should know Princeton is not the place to be." He added that the arrests marked the end of phase one of a three-month investigation which he termed "Suburban Offensive," and emphasized the investigation would continue.

The arrests are the culmination of an investigation which involved more than 20 transactions by undercover agents of the Mercer County Prosecutor's Special Investigations Unit. "That's an extremely short period of time to complete such an investigation," Mr. Carchman added.

Substantial amounts of cocaine and marijuana were involved, and a substantial amount of money, but Mr. Carchman declined to reveal amounts or figures. "The operation, in our view, has been successful," he said.

The suspects were arrested in raids that began at 4:30 Friday morning. Thirteen of the fifteen that police had warrants for were nabbed in the sweep. Another, John Duncan, 32, of Leigh Avenue, turned himself in to Borough police Monday morning. Still at large is Keith Smith, age unknown, of John Street.

Suspected dealers arrested Friday and charged with possession of cocaine, possession of cocaine with intent to distribute and distribution of cocaine are

Commercial Real Estate Market Is Booming along Nassau Street

Substantial demand and limited available product drive the market price up--particularly in real estate.

Along with a flourishing residential market, Princeton is experiencing a boom in commercial real estate. Transactions have been taking place in Nassau Street and just off Nassau Street properties in six and seven figure amounts.

At the top of the scale is the five-story brick office building at 22 Chambers Street which was sold recently for $4,060,000. The building was owned by Dr. Donald Pickering, who built it in 1965 and maintains his dental practice on the top floor. The new owners are the trustees of the Commonwealth Realty Trust, said to be a group of British investors. N.T. Callaway was the realtor in the transaction.

Although Dr. Pickering was out of town and not available for comment, it is understood that he no longer wishes to continue to manage the 26,800 square-foot building as he has ever since it was built. He will, however, continue to practice dentistry on the top floor.

An early tenant at 22 Chambers Street was IBM, which occupied space presently occupied by William Sword and Company. An addition to the building was made in 1970.

A Nassau Street building with a price tag in excess of $1 million is the building occupied until last Saturday by Bellows apparel shop at 210 Nassau Street. Rumors abound that the building has

Irv Urken Ruled Eligible to Vote On Appeals against Collins' Plans

"I haven't yet made up my mind how I'll vote on any of the four appeals," said Borough Council member Irv Urken this week.

He spoke after receiving a five-page explanatory letter from municipal attorney Walter Bliss stating his opinion that Mr. Urken is not disqualified and may vote along with the rest when Council hears the four appeals from Planning Board decisions favoring Collins Development.

A member of the Planning Board before his election to Council last fall, Mr. Urken removed himself from all Planning Board considerations of Collins because of the Witherspoon Street location of his hardware store.

Edwin Schmierer, municipal attorney at that time, advised Mr. Urken that the store was within the 200-foot limit of the Collins property, and that he would be in a conflict-of-interest situation if he joined Planning Board discussions.

But Mr. Bliss says the Borough engineer has found the store to be more than 200 feet from the site of Hulfish North, the Phase III of Collins' plans and object of the four appeals. Mr. Schmierer, says Mr. Bliss, was referring only to the "Collins property" generally.

The ruling is important because Mr. Urken's vote on any of the appeals could be the swing vote that results in a tie and allows Mayor Barbara Sigmund to cast a tie-breaking vote. From her previous statements and actions, it is assumed that Mayor Sigmund favors all of the appeals and would vote against Collins.

When a previous Council was voting on granting air-rights to Collins, present member Peter Bearse voted against Collins and presumably will do so again. He was joined by Robert McChesney and Joseph Blanc, both no longer on Council.

Barbara Hill, Richard Macgill and Richard Woodbridge, all still on Council, voted in Collins' favor. Robert W. Cawley, mayor at the time, broke the tie in Collins' favor..

But there are two new Council members — Mr. Urken and John Huntoon. Although Mr. Huntoon has not expressed his views, he is expected to join Mr. Bearse, and vote for the appellants and against Collins. If Mr. Urken joins them, there will be a three-three tie for Mayor Sigmund to break.

If Mr. Bliss had advised that Mr. Urken was still in conflict-of-interest and could not vote, Collins might

Another Error Found By Sewerage Authority

Angry Princeton mayors announced last week that still another underbilling error had been discovered by the Stony Brook Regional Sewerage Authority.

For the Borough, the amount is $37,768; for the Township, $35,042. West Windsor was also underbilled, for $32,440. The error means that South Brunswick benefits — $105,250.

"It is kind of intolerable," said Township Mayor Winthrop S. Pike at a press conference Thursday.

'It is intolerable," said Borough Mayor Barbara Sigmund.

Requested by Borough, Township and West Windsor — and even by South Brunswick which, in fact, broached the idea first — the state will now audit the books of the Authority.

Mayors would like an engineering performance audit as well, but Barry Skokowski of the Division of Local Government Services

Drug Arrests

Anthony Bailey, 28, of Route 27, Kendall Park; James Green, 36, of Leigh Avenue; Edward Beagles, 28, 98 Birch Avenue; Gerald Hall, 27, no known address; Earl Claitt, 22, of Trenton, and Duncan.

Arrested on charges of selling marijuana were William "Billy" Starks, 26, 15 Juniper Row; Gregory Bullock, 33, of Leigh Avenue; Paris Daniels, 19, address unknown; Joe Stevenson, 31, of Princeton Community Village; and Karen Brooks, 28, address unknown.

Balfour Merill, 34, of Greenbriar Row, and Robin Everett, 27, of Leigh Avenue, were charged with conspiring to sell cocaine with two of the suspected dealers.

Bailey was also charged with four counts of possession of stolen property, and Bullock with receiving stolen property. Borough Chief Michael Carnevale noted at the press conference that a television set found in Bailey's apartment had been stolen two days earlier from a home on Greenholm.

Chief Carnevale remarked that "other crime goes hand in hand" with drug traffic. "As a result of this drug arrest, stolen property was recovered. The distribution of drugs also involves stolen property ... the need to generate funds to run a successful drug operation."

The suspects were characterized by Mr. Carchman as mid-level street dealers who acted independently, although they generally operated out of common areas. Most of the transactions of those arrested took place in two Borough taverns.

Mr. Carchman declined to say where the dealers obtained their supply of drugs. Cocaine, he said, is generally the biggest problem in Mercer County. "We're talking about substantial crime," he said, noting that the maximum charge for selling cocaine is 12 years in jail, a $25,000 fine, or both.

Warning to Dealers. Cocaine, "speed," heroin — frankly, there is everything to be found," continued Mr. Carchman. "I don't think the drug problem is unique to Princeton. We're trying to attack the problem.

"There is no area in the county that is not involved with the distribution of drugs," he continued. "Dealers should know that we are everywhere. There is not a sale or purchase made that some undercover operative may not be involved," he warned.

Last June, when alleged drug dealers were arrested in East Windsor Township and in Hightstown, Mr. Carchman observed, "things went dry. We hope the same holds true for this area."

Assisting the County's Special Investigations Unit here were the Borough and Township police departments, plus South Brunswick and Plainsboro police. The initial investigation was begun by Borough police, who turned to the Prosecutor's Office for help, Chief Carnevale said, when they realized the scope of the operation.

The suspects were arraigned Friday morning before Superior Court Judge A. Jerome Moore in Trenton and held in the Mercer County Detention Center in lieu of bail. Bail ranged from $15,000 for Bailey down to $2,500.

Borough Council and Local Residents Ponder Suggestions for a Mount Laurel Ordinance

So far as Mount Laurel is concerned, the audience gathered in Borough Hall last Wednesday seemed to be on the other side of the mountain.

Borough attorney Walter Bliss presented a nine-page list of what he called "sample" components for a possible Mount Laurel ordinance designed to provide more low-moderate housing for the Borough.

But Mayor and Council soon discovered that some residents fear the Borough will exercise eminent domain — like Branchburg and New Brunswick, it was said — and simply confiscate properties for such housing. (Not so, assured Mayor Barbara Sigmund.)

And Thomas C. Jamieson, attorney for Collins Development, flatly told Council that Collins cannot include lower-cost housing in its 140 Hulfish North plan.

"You're changing public policy after the fact (of Planning Board approval)," he stated and told Council this was not legal.

What Is 'Fair Share'? This week, at Monday night's work session of the Borough's Affordable Housing Committee, it was pointed out that Borough and Township still do not know what the courts regard as their "fair share" of lower-income housing.

A mid-March decision in Ocean County could result in a definition of "region" and possibly a number applicable to Princeton, the committee learned.

Rod Fisk of the Local Ordinance Revision subcommittee of the Affordable Housing Committee, gave a progress report.

Highlights:

• Increased density, but no more than 20 percent increase in Borough population (currently 12,000).

• Incentives preferred over mandatory provisions; mandatory contributions to a fund preferred over mandatory set-asides of lower-income housing.

• Could housing be built on under-utilized parking lots or Borough-owned properties?

• Can apartments be converted to lower-cost cooperatives, rather than more expensive condominiums?

• Would "least-cost" housing be appropriate?

Walton Johnson, former Planning Board member now a principal in the Witherspoon Jackson Corporation, advised the committee to find out whether the trend to homogenous, upper-class white transients is continuing.

A Princeton University graduate student joined committee member Fred Travisano in a plea to involve Princeton University. If the University provided more housing for graduate students, they suggested, 200 lower-income housing units might be freed for residents.

TOPICS Of The Town

Co-chair John Huntoon, who emphasized that "everybody in town is a member of this committee," had invited Collins vice-president Gary Green to attend committee meetings and he has been present ever since the invitation.

Three Suggestions. In his list of sample items, Mr. Bliss has three major suggestions: mandatory set-asides of a certain percentage of units for lower-cost housing, a density bonus for developers if they provide such units and a fund.

Benetton in Town

"The hottest store in the U.S.," is the way Collins Development talks about Benetton, outlet for the line of Italian sweaters, sportswear and accessories. A Benetton shop will open next month in the 7 Palmer Square premises vacated by Varga Designs. Robert Varga last year filed under Chapter 11 of the bankruptcy law.

Described by owner Jay Goldfarb as based on classic designs but contemporary in fashion, the sweaters are characterized by bright colors and simple lines. Prices are "$29 to $31" for a design like the sleeveless V-neck that has become a Benetton classic.

Collins thinks the line will appeal to women "from junior high on up" and to a cross-section of fashion taste. In addition to sweaters, Benetton will carry Rugby shirts, sweat clothes, pants, jeans, skirts, blouses, gloves, scarves and related accessories.

Laughter greeted his comment that the suggestions do not say where money for the fund would come from and Mr. Bliss said this was premature. The suggestions were only an outline for discussion, he explained.

The samples, clearly aimed at Collins, included a retroactivity provision applying to all new development, "regardless of the stage of the approval process and the applicability of protection period."

But Thomas Fasanella, who plans townhouses on Humbert Street, also found retroactivity "very threatening." He added a warning that low-income housing on expensive land inevitably meant a subsidy.

Condemnation Worries. Harry and Myra Mernagh, 18 Humbert, worried that a phrase "other mechanisms" for obtaining low-income housing, might mean condemnation. Mr. Mernagh said an Affordable Housing Committee member had gone to the area and suggested a vacant warehouse there as "possibly for condemnation."

He added his concern that "high-density slum apartments, cheaply built, will scatter poor housing throughout the Borough."

Mr. Huntoon conceded that he had said "no idea is impossible or unthinkable," but added that nobody had condemnation in mind, and Mayor Sigmund said "There is no idea of confiscating private property."

Mr. Jamieson, in his presentation, commented on the way the ordinance would focus on Collins by remarking, "You say 'developers' as though there were hundreds of us."

The Mt. Laurel decision didn't talk about the obligation of a developer, but of the community, to meet housing needs, he continued, stating that Collins is "a corporate citizen, part of the community, and it's our obligation as well as yours. We'll pay our fair share like everyone else.

"We're responsible and willing to cooperate," he concluded, "but we won't be discriminated against; we won't be the solution to a municipal problem."

"If we find these ideas are impractical because of the late stage of a development," Mayor Sigmund said, "we can develop a mechanism that WILL work."

YOUTH IS KILLED

In Car Crash Friday. Funeral services were held Monday in Our Lady of Princeton for Joseph P. Leddy Jr., 17, of The Great Road, who was killed early Friday afternoon in a single-car accident on Province Line Road. He was a junior at Lawrenceville School and had attended grade school at Princeton Day.

For some unkown reason, Mr. Leddy lost control of his father's 1978 Porsche when he crested a hill on Province Line. The black sports car crossed over the center line and smashed into a utility pole at 1:24, some three-quarters of a mile north of the intersection of Cherry Hill Road.

Mr. Leddy was thrown from the car by the impact, according to Patrolman Ken Allen of the Hopewell Township police department. He suffered massive head and internal injuries and was pronounced dead at 2:40 at the Princeton Medical Center where he had been taken by the Hopewell Rescue Squad. Police report that he was the only occupant in the car which was totally destroyed.

Born in New York City, Mr. Leddy had lived in Princeton for the past eleven years. He is the son of Dr. Joseph P. Leddy and Mary Jo Fagan Leddy. His father is an orthopedic surgeon who specialized in hand surgery and maintains an office with three other orthopedic surgeons in New Brunswick.

At Lawrenceville, Mr. Leddy was active in athletics, participating in football, hockey and track. In addition to his parents, he is survived by three brothers, Timothy P., Terrence R. and Christopher J., all at home, and his paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Leddy of Westfield.

Following Mass of Christian Burial services held Monday, Mr. Leddy was buried in Princeton Cemetery. Arrangements were under the direction of the Kimble Funeral Home on Hamilton Avenue.

Contributions in his memory may be made to the Lawrenceville School or to Our Lady of Princeton on the Great Road.

Deer-Car Collisions Rise

There were 177 deer hit by cars on Township Roads in 1983, an increase of 23 percent over the 144 deer-car collisions reported in 1982.

Patrolman William Potts of the Princeton Township Police Department has kept track of deer carnage by auto in the Township over the past several years. His total includes deer that are "dead-on-arrival" by the time a police officer is called to the scene and those that are "gone-on-arrival" but are presumed to have staggered off to the woods to die of their wounds or be put out of their misery by a hunter or resident.

Thomas M. Poole, chairman of the Township's Ad Hoc Deer Committee, calls the increase "quite significant." Mr. Poole compares these figures to those in neighboring Townships, which do not have the ban on discharge of firearms which Princeton imposed 10 years ago. He finds that in Lawrence Township the number of deer-car collisions has remained stable, 49 in 1982, 48 in 1983. In West Windsor, the number is up from 25 to 32.

"We're still pretty high and getting worse," Mr. Poole notes. In one instance, two cars hit the same deer during rush hour on Route 206. In another, on December 26 on Cherry Valley Road, one car hit two deer at the same time. Mr. Poole says that Cherry Valley Road is "the worst" in terms of car accidents involving deer.

One car turned over as its driver sought in vain to avoid hitting a deer.

The survey of Township households on the deer problem that was suggested by the Ad Hoc Deer Committee and endorsed by Township Committee has been completed, Mr. Poole reports. Some 230 households were polled by Rutgers graduate students, and the process of compiling the data and putting it on computer is underway. The committee hopes to formulate a recommendation within a month to six weeks.

16-YEAR OLD KILLED

By Amtrak Train. Mark C. Fallon, a junior at West Windsor-Plainsboro High School and a Princeton Junction resident, was killed last Saturday by an Amtrak train traveling from Savannah, Ga., to New York City.

Mark was an accomplished diver and member of the high school swim team. His death has stunned many members of the swimming community who describe him as a hard-working, dedicated diver.

The accident is still under investigation by the Plainsboro Police Department, and little is known as to exactly how and why it occurred. Amtrak police discovered Fallon's body by the train tracks under a bridge at Scudders Mill Road at 10:15 p.m. Saturday. Police were unable to confirm his identity until Sunday when they matched fingerprints taken from his Berkshire Drive Home with the body's finger prints.

An autopsy conducted Tuesday indicated that the youth died of massive trauma. The county prosecutor's office is investigating the accident, as it does all suspicious deaths, and would not say if foul play is suspected. There do not seem to have been any witnesses to the accident, and as far as anyone presently knows Mark was alone at the time.

Son of Henry and Noreen Fallon of Berkshire Drive, Mark was born in Elizabeth and had lived in Princeton Junction for 11 years. In addition to his activities as a diver on the high school swimming team, he had also been involved in the school radio station as an announcer and had been a member of the lighting crew for student productions. He had been active in the Boy Scouts and had been selected for Order of the Arrow.

In addition to his parents, he is survived by two sisters, Marie, a senior at Villanova University, and Siobhan Fallon, at home; a brother, David, also at home; and his paternal grandmother, Teresa Fallon of Liberty, Mo.

Mass of Christian Burial was scheduled to be celebrated this Wednesday at 9:30 a.m. at St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church. Burial will be in the parish cemetery. Ar-

THREE ENTRIES MADE

In Campbell Hall. Three separate entries into rooms or suites at Campbell Hall on the Princeton University campus were reported by Borough police.

Between 8:30 Sunday evening and 9:30 the next morning, someone entered a student's room and removed a typewriter valued at $400. Police said the victim was not certain whether the room was locked or not.

Sunday afternoon between 1:10 and 1:25 jewelry, including a string of pearls, a gold bracelet and gold necklace, and some earrings, with a combined value of $330, plus $7 cash were stolen from a room in an unlocked suite.

A witness in an adjoining bedroom, police said, heard some noise and, thinking it was her roommate, entered the room. She was confronted by a black male who told her he was looking for his girlfriend and left. The witness told police that she noticed he had items stuffed in his pockets.

The suspect is further described as 5-11 with a small moustache, wearing a black jacket and plaid hat.

In a theft discovered February 21, but not reported to police until Monday, a $60 pearl necklace was taken overnight from an unlocked student's room.

Stolen from the car of a Glenrock resident while it was parked for two hours Thursday night in the Park & Shop lot off Witherspoon Street, were a $500 calculator, a $100 radar detector, an ultra-violet eraser valued at $150, and stationery items worth $86.43. The victim reported the car was locked but police found no signs of a forced entry.

While a Greenholm resident was having dinner in another room, someone last week entered the home's unlocked front door and took a color television set valued at $481 from the living room. Chief Michael Carnevale commented that the set was recovered two days later in the Route 27 apartment of Anthony Bailey who was arrested early Friday morning during a raid on 13 suspected drug dealers. (See page 1.)

Township police report an attempted entry last week into a Birch Avenue home.

The screen on a window next to a rear door had been torn off in an apparent attempt but no entry was gained.

CIGARETTES STOLEN

From Davidson's Market. Cardboard boxes containing cartons of cigarettes valued at $523.65 were stolen last week from Davidson's Market on Nassau Street.

Two suspects, police said, had entered the store early in the morning and asked a clerk for some empty boxes. When he returned from a storage

NEW TOWNSHIP PROBATIONARY PATROLMEN: Named Probationary Patrolmen for a year on the Township police force are Stephen Hogancamp, 28, of Trenton (left); James Delaney, 25, of South River, and David Glocken, 35, of Yardville. Glocken and Delaney are former South River Patrolmen, Glocken from 1972-75 and Delaney from 1980-83. Hogancamp was a member of the security department at Rider College. They were selected over other candidates on the basis of written and physical examinations and oral interviews. They will fill vacancies created by the retirement this week of Sgt. Robert W. Heacock, the resignation last month of Ptl. Virgil Angelini and the forthcoming retirement at the end of this year of Lt. Norman Servis.

Major Crime Dropped 16% in Borough in 1983

There was good and bad news in the 1983 crime statistics, released last week by Chief Michael Carnevale.

There was a 15.9 percent decrease in overall major crime, but an increase in violent crime. Of the 3,669 investigations conducted by Borough police in 1983 — 102 fewer than a year ago — 692 were in the major crime category, a decrease of 131.

Burglary and thefts were down 16 percent, 260 from 311; larcenies and thefts dropped 21 percent, 337 from 437; car thefts had dropped to 12 from 18, the theft of mopeds to 2 from 9. However, there was a five-fold increase in atrocious assaults to 15 from 3, simple assaults were up from 48 to 50. Armed robberies rose to five from three, and robberies (no weapon) to eight from five.

There was one rape in February compared to none the year before. Chief Carnevale commented that the crime was reported to the police as a rape but because of the condition of the victim and as a result of the subsequent investigation, police were not able to determine whether it was unfounded.

In his report, Chief Carnevale attributed the overall decrease in crime for the year to increased patrol activity and intensified investigatory procedures by the detective bureau.

"Not to paraphase Mayor Koch, but when the crime rate goes down, maybe we ought to take some credit for it," commented Chief Carnevale. "Because when it goes up, we certainly take the heat."

As for the increase in violent crime in the Borough, Chief Carnevale said that he really didn't know the reason. "Like any crime," he said, "it does fluctuate. Crime is here to stay and we have to deal with it as effectively as we can and this year we have dealt with it effectively."

Continued Chief Carnevale: "One of the reasons we have been very successful in apprehensions is that we immediately put a detective on the case for follow-up. While the patrolman is the backbone of any police department, if you don't have a detective who will immediately investigate the crime, you won't have the success we've had. The trail will get cold. Absolutely."

Borough police have five detectives in the department. When investigations reveal certain things happening in a certain area or when police pick up talk about something going on in an area, then "we key in on what our intelligence tells us," Chief Carnevale stated.

"Unfortunately, the nature of the beast is that something has to happen before you can intensify police activity," observed Chief Carnevale. "It's most frustrating. We can't evaluate how successful we are in an area of crime prevention overall, because there are no statistics to bear out what you've prevented. It's an unknown.

"No one is going to come forth and say, 'My house was not burglarized because of some intensified police effort.' But if you look at the overall figures and burglary and thefts have decreased, then you can say that our crime prevention may have contributed to the decrease."

In 1983, police responded to 7,834 requests of all kinds for police aid. The value of stolen property amounted to $449,669, up from $378,410 the previous year while the total value of recovered property was about the same — $66,541 compared to $65,662.

338 Car Accidents. There were 338 motor vehicle accidents in '83, an increase of 12, but injuries were down to 68 from 126. Eleven accidents involved bicycles, five pedestrians. Police issued 292 summonses for accidents, an increase of 43. There were no fatal accidents in 1983 or 1982.

They answered 386 fewer alarms, or 1566, checked 45 annoying calls — up 10 — arrested 375 adults, a decrease of 23, but 39 more juveniles (128). They issued seven snow removal summonses compared to none the year before.

Police last year investigated 80 Borough fires, one more than the previous year, and extinguished nine—two more. The Borough jail housed 152 during 1983, an increase of 12; 33 prisoners were taken to Mercer County Jail and 11 to the County Workhouse.

There were two more liquor law cases than 1982's 18, and seven more missing persons—21. Drunk driving accidents totalled 12, one less than in '82. There were no suicide deaths in the Borough in 1983 compared to two the year before, but suicide attempts rose sharply to seven from one.

Contrary to what one might expect from the weekly reports in the papers, there were 51, or 28 fewer, bicycles stolen last year compared to the year before, and nine — five fewer — were recovered. There were 38 adult narcotic investigations, up two, but similiar investigations involving juveniles doubled to 15 from 7. Adults arrested for narcotic violations numbered 38, a decrease of six, while 13 juveniles were arrested, an increase of three.

Parking Violations Down. There was a decrease down the line in parking violations in 1983. Overtime parking dipped to 43,636 from 45,977; all night parking to 6,225 from 6,834; no parking anytime zone to 459 from 1,801 and parking where prohibited to 747 from 917. One increase was in meter feeding where 91 were caught — 33 more than the year before.

Total parking violations dropped to 54,628 from 59,382 (meter officer Robert Anderson issued 33,532 parking tickets while patroling Borough streets on his Cushman scooter, while foot officer Mary Copper handed out 12,723 tickets). Total moving violations were up, however, to 4,370 from 3,647, as were those driving while intoxicated, 76 from 57.

Other motor vehicle violations with the figure for 1982 in parentheses are red light 390 (351), careless driving 131 (127), speeding 1,357 (1,600), improper turn 145 (71), leaving the scene of an accident 57 (15), stop sign 51 (61), and inspection violations 524 (368). Thirty-seven drivers were charged with having no insurance and 12 with refusing to take a Breathalyzer test.

Busy Traffic Officer. Ptl. Victor Fasanella, the Borough's Traffic Safety Officer, had a busy year, handing out 1,076 summonses, including 620 to speeders tripped up by radar. Streets where the largest number of speeders were caught were Hamilton Avenue 100, University Place 95, Jefferson Road 88, Mercer Street 83 and Alexander Road 61.

Ptl. Fasanella also handed out 201 summonses for other motor vehicle violations, 117 for parking infractions and assisted in 24 arrests.

Of 79 fires reported to police in 1983, two required a general alarm. Forty-seven were determined to be accidental.

There were a total of 151 juvenile investigations in the Borough last year, down from 1982's 190. Of these, 111 were referred to a juvenile court, up sharply from 46 the year before.

Finally, Borough patrolmen logged 3,044 foot patrol hours in 1983, 570 hours or 23.7 days more than the year before.

Police Revenue Exceeds Police Budget

Borough Chief Michael Carnevale likes to point out in his annual year-end report that no other municipal department can recoup such a large amount of its budget as the police department does because of its work productivity. In 1983, the police generated more income than ever before.

The gross total income of $939,310 from criminal and motor vehicle fines and police revenue in the Borough last year exceeded the 1983 police budget of $865,060 — the first time this has happened, noted Chief Carnevale. The comparable figure for 1982 was $647,232 or almost $300,000 less.

The largest contributor is $410,434 from parking meter revenue. Income from parking fines for 1983 totaled $340,936, $170,225 from moving motor vehicle fines and $7,960 from criminal fines.

Borough police generated revenue by collecting $5,017 in fees for meter bags, $3,607 for accident reports, $669 for photos and prints and raised an additional $463 from a bicycle auction of unclaimed bicycles.

Not all the monies go to the Borough. The County first gets a percentage, the Borough an equal amount and the remainder is split 50-50.

SGT. HEACOCK RETIRES From Township Force. Sgt. Robert W. Heacock will retire this week from the Township Police Department, ending a 25-year career. Because of accumulated vacation time and terminal leave, his "official" retirement will not come until June 1.

Born in Princeton and a graduate of Princeton High School, the 49-year-old Heacock was appointed a probationary patrol officer May 1, 1959, and was made a permanent officer the following year. He was promoted to Sergeant ten years later in July, 1970.

During his career as an officer, Sgt. Heacock attended 21 courses related to various phases of police work and received three awards and commendations.

At its meeting Tuesday night, Township Committee passed a resolution expressing its deep appreciation to Sgt. Heacock for his "professionalism, courteousness and dedication to service" and wished him a "long, happy and prosperous retirement."

Before joining the police, he was a communications expert in the U.S. Navy from 1952-55. He lives with his wife, Mary Ann, and five children at 41 Brearley Avenue in Lawrence Township.

ATTEMPT FAILS To Steal Truck Mirror. A pickup truck parked on Nassau Street near Witherspoon Street early Thursday evening was the target of vandals.

Police said that someone had tried to pull off the truck's side view mirror. The attempt failed but not before a portion of the door panel was pulled away from the frame. The owner, a Princeton resident, told police the truck had been parked at the location from 5:55 to 6:20 p.m.

Another Princeton resident told police that the emblem from his 1962 Mercedes Benz had been broken off from his car while it had been parked from 8 Friday evening to 1:15 in the morning in a Palmer Square lot.

In the Township, a Mulberry Row resident awoke at 1:50 Saturday morning after hearing a loud crash. Five minutes later, the victim discovered a kitchen window broken.

Police said that the window had been shattered by two objects which also punctured an outside screen and caused $150 in damage. The objects, which police said may have measured one and a half inches in diameter, were not recovered.

SALARY MATTERS VOTED By Township Committee. By disposing of a number of routine items in short order last Monday night, Township Committee was able to adjourn the meeting at an unusual 9:30 p.m.

An ordinance raising salaries of mayor and committee members was introduced and the public hearing scheduled for Monday, March 26. The measure raises the annual compensation of a committee member from $2,500 to $3,750, and that of the mayor from $3,500 to $5,000. The salary of the Township Attorney was increased from $35,400 to $51,000 and includes general legal service as well as prosecution in municipal court.

A resolution permitting disbursement of $27,968 for the Princeton First Aid and Rescue Squad for the weekday services of its two paid paramedics was approved unanimously. State laws do not permit more than $25,000 to be paid to a rescue squad without a special resolution.

In other business, Dogwood Hill was accepted into the public road system. As Mayor Winthrop S. Pike explained, this is another instance of a roadway constructed by a developer for the purposes of a development that is later turned over to the municipality as its responsibility for maintenance, but not unless it is found to have been built in accordance with Township standards.

In a work session, Committee members perused a list of properties upon which back taxes are owing and accepted the recommendations of Township Treasurer John S. Clawson Jr. for how each should be handled. Committee agreed to proceed with an auction sale of the assignment of tax lien on one property on Oakland Street. Some $16,500 is owed in back taxes, and the property (actually two lots) is assessed at $70,000.

In the matter of the dredging of the turning basin to the east of Turning Basin Park, the Township has learned that the state "will look favorably" on an application for Green Acres funds for 50 percent of the work. The total cost is estimated to be $10,000–$80,000 for the actual dredging and $20,000 for clearing the site and transforming it into a park similar to the main park directly across Alexander Street.

If the application is successful, $50,000 would be needed from the municipality for N.J. BIKE GUIDE SET By Princeton Man. Dan Rappoport of Holly House is a bicycling enthusiast who has designed a guide of bicycle routes through New Jersey.

The guide consists of a set of strip maps, 9 by 3½-inches, designed to fit in the isinglass compartment on the top of a handlebar bag. The maps give detailed information on four bicycle routes throughout the state. From George Washington Bridge on the Hudson to Dingman's Ferry Bridge on the Delaware, from the Tacony Palmyra Bridge to Ocean City, from Washington's Crossing to Island Beach State Park, and from High Point State Park to Cape May, the cyclist can travel from one border of New Jersey to another.

HAVE BIKE, WILL TRAVEL: Dan Rappoport holds up the "Bicycling Through New Jersey" guide which he designed and is marketing. The guide lists four routes by which a cycling enthusiast can cover the state from top to bottom and across the middle. Mr. Rappoport has biked each one himself in addition to participating on rides in Vermont, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts with the Princeton FreeWheelers.

In choosing his routes, Mr. Rappoport has included a minimum of traffic hazards and as much scenery "as practical." On the reverse side of each map he lists information on bicyle stores, campgrounds, food stores, motels, inexpensive restaurants and points of interest. Three of the routes provide the cross country cyclist with connections to the East Coast Bicycle Trail, which extends from Richmond to Boston.

The bridges selected for crossing the Delaware and Hudson Rivers and shore inlets all have walkways or bikeways. Mr. Rappoport has taken cue sheets available at the Department of Transportation and made some changes to improve bicycle safety. The cost of "Bicycling Through New Jersey" is $7.95, plus postage and handling, and Mr. Rappoport, who is his own marketing manager and promoter, as well as designer and publisher, has sold some 60 copies.

A member of the Princeton FreeWheelers, he says he averages 5,000 miles a year on his bicycle. Half of that is commuting to Trenton to his job in the N.J. Division of Medical Assistance in the Department of Human Affairs, the other half is vacation and weekend trips with the FreeWheelers.

For further information on the bicycle maps, call Mr. Rappoport at 924-9417 or write him at Apartment 5M, Holly House, Princeton Community Village, Princeton 08540.

EL SALVADOR FOCUS Of Justice Ministry. Interested Princeton residents are invited to join community, university and church people interested in the movement providing sanctuary to Salvadoran and Guatemalan refugees.

The Rev. Henry Atkins, chaplain of St. Michael's Chapel, Rutgers University, will lead an inquiry and discussion Friday at 7:30 p.m. in Murray-Dodge basement/cafe. Mr. Atkins, who participated in the first Witness for Peace on the Nicaraguan border, has long been active in church involvement in Central American affairs and the Sanctuary Movement.

At 7 p.m. Friday evening, Sanctuary Movement will be host to Buddhist nuns and priests who are praying for peace as they walk from New York City to Washington, D.C., to participate in the National Day of Advocacy of Central America, organized by the Inter-Religious Task Force. Those interested in joining the walkers for dinner should bring a contribution.

All are welcome and encouraged to attend any part of the evening. For further information call Susan at 921-7658 or 921-1136.

TWO EVENTS PLANNED

By Skating Club. The Princeton Skating Club is concluding its 51st season with an ice dance weekend on March 17-18 at Baker Rink on the Princeton University campus. The Club expects ice dancers from the Midwest to New England to join them for a succession of tangos, waltzes and marches.

On Saturday, March 17, from 5-7 p.m. the community is invited to observe a formal dance program and to witness the pageantry of ice dancing, called "the art form of modern skating." There will be no admission charge.

On Sunday, March 18, at 3:30 p.m., the Club will sponsor an ice-skating exhibition by young club members in group and solo performances, as well as by accomplished guest skaters, including nationally ranked pair and dance teams. Tickets, available at the door, are $3 for adults, $2 for children, under five free.

The Princeton Skating Club has been entertaining area audiences for half a century with carnivals, competitions, and exhibitons featuring some of America's top figure skaters. These performers have inspired spectators to take up the sport and to take advantage of the ice time and instruction offered seasonally by the club.

Figure, free style, dance, precision, and power skating lessons are available from PSC ice professionals who teach at Baker and Princeton Day School rinks from October through March each year. For further details call Bea Lee at 921-7449.

REGISTRATION SET

For YWCA Spring Session. Registration for YWCA Spring programs will be held on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Spring session will begin on Friday, March 23.

The Youth Department will welcome Spring with preschool programs in arts and crafts, music, science, cooking, and outdoor activities, as well as developmental pre-school programs such as Little Hands and Toddler Fun Club. New offerings for grade schoolers include Expressions, a chance to express moods and feelings as an artist; Introduction to Calligraphy, Back-Pack Art; and Munchie Madness — an opportunity to learn how to make such after-school goodies as pretzels and taco snacks.

For the 10-13-year-old, In the Babysitting Business will provide preparation for those "not so easy" baby sitting jobs. Saturday Spotlight, a unique program for educable mentally retarded and learning disabled teens, 14-18, will include social and recreational activities, arts and crafts, music, dance and field trips.

Adult Department Spring programs will include Breaking into Print, with New York editors Eileen Schnurr of Mademoiselle Magazine and Stephanie Von Hirschberg of Doubleday, and Making Your Move, a two-session program providing strategies for dealing with the practical and emotional aspects of moving. The Cooks Tour continues with demonstrations and samplings of house specialties at Towpath House in New Hope and The Bridge Street House Restaurant in Lambertville.

Other highlights of the Adult Department include Communication in Management, and Healing the Inner Ache, a series which will present a variety of ways to cope with the more painful aspects of life. Series topics include Taking the Woe out of Worry, Old Folks at Home, Catastrophic Illness in the Family, and Free Yourself to Be Yourself.

The Health, Physical Education, and Recreation Department will present a full complement of exercise, dance, and aquatics classes, for all ages and levels of experience, including early morning exercise and swim classes, self defense, camp and outside activities. Tom Scores High on the MBS Test; Will He Pass the Proficiency Exam?

"If Tom buys 18 tomato plants at 6 for $1.49 ... "

Ninth graders in all of New Jersey's public schools will take two state tests this month: the new High School Proficiency Test this week and the standard Minimum Basic Skills Test March 27-28.

By the year 1985-86, the new Proficiency Test will have replaced the MBS and passing it will become a requirement for a high school diploma. State school officials say that the new test measures higher-level skills than the MBS and is more appropriate as an exit from high school.

Tom and his vegetable garden have been used for one of the questions in the math. section of the High School Proficiency Test. Tom has bought 18 tomato plants at 6 for $1.49 and 12 lettuce plants at 3 for $1.96, paying for them with a $20 bill. The question: how much change did he receive?

In the easier MBS test one of the word-problem questions was this: "Carla bought a package of raisins for $1.69. How much change should she get back from a $5 bill?"

Another high school test question is this one: "Grass seed is needed for a lot that measures 100 feet by 150 feet. If one bag of grass seed covers 200 square feet and each bag costs $5.89, how much will it cost to seed the lot?"

All answers, incidentally, are multiple-choice and students have four choices.

In the "Reading" section of the Proficiency Test, students are given an extended passage about animal studies and asked whether the word "enables" means "is unable," "powerless," "makes possible" or "prevents."

Students are also asked whether the studies outlined in two of the given paragraphs suggest that an animal's ability to communicate is both "overrated and misunderstood," "very limited and predictable," "innate and learned" or "helpful and harmful."

"To correctly answer items on the High School Proficiency Test," says a report from the New Jersey School Boards Association, "students will be required to apply knowledge and to use more rigorous thought processes."

Sierra Defends Stand.
To the Editor of Town Topics:

In her letter of February 29th, Meredith Knowlton expressed disapproval of the Sierra Club position that the Institute for Advanced Studies should abandon its plans to develop the farmland adjoining the Institute Woods. The Sierra Club position is justifiable for the following reasons:

1. The farmland in question, together with the adjoining Institute Woods, Princeton Battlefield Historical Area, D&R Canal State Park and Rogers Wildlife Refuge, is a truly unique resource with extraordinary ecological, scientific, historical, educational, and recreational values.

2. Previous Institute administrations have strongly advocated preservation of this farmland. In fact, the Institute purchased the land, in the words of Dr. Robert Oppenheimer, to "preserve it from undesirable development," a more far-sighted policy than the current one.

3. The very existence of zoning laws is evidence that a community has the right to impose restrictions on the use of private land, such as flood plain regulations. These restrictions allow for reasonable use of the land, consistent with the best interest of the community. The Sierra Club position is consistent with the zoning law concept, i.e., that the Institute should be allowed reasonable use of its land. There is probably no land more worthy of protection in Central New Jersey than the Institute Woods area. Farming is and has been reasonable use of this land for many years; a 400-unit development is clearly inappropriate use.

Unfortunately, several years ago Princeton Township saw it fit to change the zoning of the Institute property, permitting large-scale development to occur. The Sierra Club hopes that the Institute administration will reconsider its position and advocate, as previous administrations did, the preservation of its farmland. In addition, Princeton Township should correct its previous mistake and restore appropriate zoning of the Institute property.

Lower Grade of Housing?
To the Editor of Town Topics:

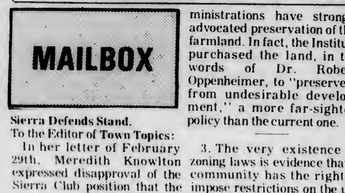
(The following is a letter to the Township Zoning Board.)

As individual residents of Princeton Township, we want to voice our strong opposition to the plan that is in the current news releases to rezone the White Farm and adjoining open areas for high-density housing.

It seems to us that this plan would sandwich in between the existing low-density zones consisting of the Princeton Battlefield area and the Gallup Road area, a lower grade of housing that would be inconsistent with the atmosphere and attractiveness of residential properties already there.



Such sandwiching could not help but reduce our property values extensively, increasing the difficulty of resale and realization of the values we have striven so long to build up.

A further powerful objection to the plan is the enormous buildup in traffic that would result, and the consequent need for widening roads. It is difficult to visualize the degrading effect that this situation alone would have for present property owners.

There are certainly ample open areas around the perimeter of Princeton where the need for high-density housing could be satisfied without so obviously trampling on the feet of present long-time residents.

We are sure that we speak the feelings of our neighbors in this matter, and we trust that you will take a firm stand in opposition to this or any similar plan.

In addition, Sunday Open Swims will continue. The hour from 1-2 p.m. is for persons who are disabled or over 60 with special needs, and Family Swim is from 2-4. YMCA membership is recognized for Sunday Swim.

Registration for Summer Camps will also begin at Spring Registration. For additional information, Spring brochures are available at the YWCA office, Paul Robeson Place.

FESTIVAL PLANNED

By Girl Scouts. The Service Unit of the Princeton Area Girl Scouts, in celebration of the 72nd birthday of girl scouting in America, is sponsoring an International Festival on Saturday, March 10, from 1-3 p.m. at John Witherspoon School.

More than 200 girls from 16 Princeton troops will gather to sample foods, play games and view cultural and photographic exhibits from the four Girl Scout World Centers and three National Centers. Flags from the 104 member nations of the World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts will be featured in a parade.

Three local scouts, chosen to receive Girl Scouting's second highest award, the silver award, and those girls who have been scouts for 5 and 10 years, will be honored during the festival. Parents, friends, and members of the community are invited.

FOR CAREER WOMEN

Workshop Planned. "Skills your mother never taught you" — the lessons women need to learn, but rarely have a chance to learn — will be the subject of "Women on the Move," a 9 a.m.-5 p.m. workshop to be given by two career women Saturday, March 17 at the Hyatt Regency Hotel.

Linda Albert, president of the consulting firm Copleman & Alpert, Inc., and Janet Kean, president of Kean Computing, Inc., will lead the workshop.

The focus will be on two themes: personal traits that make a difference between reaching career goals and just holding down a job, and specific skills necessary for survival in a complex business organization.

Each participant will take a "personal style inventory" to learn strengths and weakness, and will hear Ms. Albert and Ms. Kean explain how to capitalize on strong points and build up "your flat side."

Sessions will explore conflict resolutions, influence, risk-taking, networking and how to tell when beliefs and assumptions are helpful or a hindrance. There will also be an opportunity to talk with guest speakers.

The $95 fee includes lunch, all program materials and use of the Hyatt's Health Club. Registration — and credit cards are accepted — may be made by calling 921-6363.

BRIDGE RE-HAB?

Bill Introduced. The Harrison Street bridge is among several in the Princeton area included in a pair of rehabilitation bills introduced last week in the State Senate. Money would be appropriated from the 1983 Bridge Rehabilitation and Improvement Bond Act plus matching Federal money.

The bills allot $300,000 for engineering on the Harrison Street bridge; $160,000 for the bridge over Harry's Brook on Route 27 (Princeton-Kingston Road); $700,000 for the bridge over Stony Brook on Route 206 (Lawrenceville Road) and $320,000 for bridges on Princeton Junction-Cranbury Road in West Windsor.

Governor Thomas Kean said construction or pre-construction work could be completed by July, 1985.

OPEN HOUSE SET

By Montessori School. The Lakeside Montessori Center will hold an open house Sunday from 2-4 at the Center, located in the former Littlebrook School.

There will be a slide presentation at 2:30 and information on Lakeside's toddler and primary school programs. The toddler program accepts children from 18 to 30 months and runs year round. There are some openings for the current semester, and new enrollees for both the summer session, beginning July 1, and the fall session, will be accepted.

The toddler program offers a mixture of Montessori teaching and day-care in two programs, from 8 to 3 and 8 to 5:30 p.m. A half-day program will begin in the fall, and inquiries are welcome.

The primary school program is in its fourth year and currently has two classrooms taught by Association Montessori Internationale certified teachers. Children are admitted to the three year primary program between the ages of 2½ and 3 years 9 months. Admission is only in September. Lakeside offers a half-day, 9 to noon, and a full day program, from 9 to 3, as well as extended day program from 8 to 9 and after school from 3 to 5.

Ginny Bernau-Cusack is director. For further information call the Center at 924-8077.

REGISTRATION SET

For St. Paul's School. Registration for students wishing to enter St. Paul's School in the fall will be held on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, March 13-15, from 9 to 11:30 a.m.

A baptismal certificate, copy of birth certificate, a recent report card (if in school) and an immunization record are necessary for registration. A one-time fee of $15 per child will be charged.

For admission to kindergarten, the child must be 5 years old by November 30, or 5 years old by the date required by the public school district where he or she lives.

St. Paul's School has been in existence since 1881. For further information call Sister Mary Valerie, 921-8574.

The lecture, which will emphasize regional craftsmen and artists, will be held Thursday, March 15, at 8 p.m. in in McCormick 101 in the Princeton University Art Museum.

All three lectures in the series will concentrate on the decorative arts and architecture of the people of New Jersey and Pennsylvania. Peter O. Wacker will deliver the last lecture entitled "New Jersey Folk Architecture" on Thursday, May 10. Mr. Wacker is chairman of the Geography Department of Rutgers University, chairman of the State Review Board of Architectural Sites and author of "Land and People" and "Musconetcong Valley of New Jersey."

The lectures are free and open to the public.

All area high school students are invited to attend. Admission is $2.

After lunch at the 18th-century Washington Crossing Inn, the trip will continue to the Inn at McConkey's Ferry which served as a guardpost during the Continental Army's encampment in Bucks County.

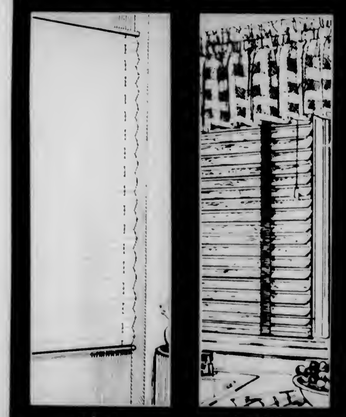
Economist Celeste King will head a sub-committee exploring ways county expenses might be shifted to the state and how to determine which level of government — local, county or state — should pay for which services.

Alice Small, of Educational Testing Service, will examine school, county and local taxes in the Borough and compare them with taxes in similar towns. Marvin Reed, director of governmental relations for the New Jersey Education Association, will study ways municipalities might share their rateables base.

EDUCATION AND SUPPORT

For Stroke Victim Families. The next cycle of the educational and support program for families of stroke patients will begin on Monday at 7 in the Merwick Rehabilitation Unit of Princeton Medical Center. The program consists of five discussions, designed to educate and provide support to families of stroke patients.

In subsequent sessions, Judith VanPelt, a staff speech and language pathologist, will describe and discuss the types of communication problems that result from stroke.



Video tapes of patients, prepared by Jane Hye, staff speech and language pathologist, and Joan Gordon, a Medical Center volunteer, will be used to supplement the discussions. Donald McDonald, PH.D., a licensed practicing psychologist, will be present at one session to discuss the psychosocial adjustments that are necessary after stroke. Dr. McDonald serves as a consultant to the Communication Disorders Unit.

The program will be presented continually throughout the year, and will be held every Monday evening in the Merwick Library, 79 Bayard Lane. For further information, call 734-4616.

Army Sgt. Marc A. Moran, son of William H. Moran of 14 Witherspoon Street, has been decorated with the U.S. Army Commendation Medal at Fort Bragg, N.C.

Piet Hut

A key contribution to a radically new theory of the solar system has been made by Piet Hut, a 31-year-old Dutch astrophysicist at the Institute for Advanced Study.

According to the new theory, developed jointly by Mr. Hut and two co-workers from the University of California at Berkeley, the sun is not a solitary star but rather a member of a binary, or two-star system. The sun's companion star, which the scientists suggest is in an elliptical orbit that brings it to within half a light-year of the sun every 26 to 28 million years, has not yet been observed directly. Its existence is inferred from two independent pieces of geological evidence.

The first clue is the fossil record of mass extinctions of marine organisms, which have recently been shown by paleontologists at the University of Chicago to recur at remarkably regular intervals of approximately 26 million years. The second clue is the record of large impact craters on the surface of the earth: their ages also exhibit a striking periodicity, with the statistical peaks appearing roughly 28 million years apart.

The geological evidence can apparently be accounted for only by invoking an extraterrestrial cause, and it was in an effort to find such a cause that the scientists came up with their binary-star hypothesis.

Mr. Hut based his suggestion on the results of millions of numerical experiments of what happens when stars interact with each other — experiments performed with the aid of a high-speed computer at the Institute for Advanced Study.

Mr. Hut is a visiting member with a long-term appointment in the School of Natural Sciences at the Institute for Advanced Study. A native of the Netherlands, he has an M.Sc. from the University of Utrecht and a Ph.D. from the University of Amsterdam.

Marine Pfc. Todd P. Fuhrman, son of Michael F. and Sandra E. Fuhrman, of Pineview Court, Skillman, has completed recruit training at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, Paris Island, S.C.

David A. Lampert, son of Murray A. and Maxine E. Lampert of 84 Mason Drive and a sophomore at Dartmouth College, is studying French language and culture in Blois, France, this term as a participant in Dartmouth's Language Study Abroad Program. He is a 1982 graduate of Phillips Academy.

Michael Wolfson, son of Ruth and Martin Wolfson of Bertrand Drive, is a recipient of the Dean's Award for academic excellence during the fall term at Colgate University where he is a sophomore. A 1982 graduate of Princeton High School, he is concentrating in history at Colgate.

Army Pvt. Venetia L. Crowell, daughter of Allen C. and Phyllis M. Crowell of 35 Woodland Drive, has completed military police training at the U.S. Army Military Police School, Fort McClellan, Ala.

Students were trained in civil and military law, traffic control, map reading and self-defense. Pvt. Crowell is a 1980 graduate of North Carolina School of the Arts, Winston-Salem.

Linda C. Lederman of Southern Way, president of the Eastern Communication Association, the oldest scholarly communication association in the nation, will preside over its 75th Diamond Anniversary conference which will be held in Philadelphia, March 8-11.

More than 600 communication scholars and researchers are expected to attend the conference which meets in Philadelphia as it did 75 years ago when the association was first founded.

Dr. Lederman is a member of the Department of Communication at Rutgers University where she specializes in organizational and instructional communication.

Judith M. Ringland, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Ringland of Russell Road, was recently awarded Freshman Honors at Sweet Briar College. The award is based on high academic performance.

A book by Ingrid Selberg, daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Atle Selberg of 7 Maxwell Lane, has won the "Critici in Erba" Award, which was presented at the 20th annual Bologna, Italy, Book Fair on March 3. The book is entitled "Our Changing World" and is illustrated by Andrew Miller.

A graduate of Princeton Day School and Barnard College and currently living in London, Ms. Selberg is senior editor with Collins Publishers, the largest publishing firm in the United Kingdom. She is in charge of the children's paperback book division.

Prof. Francois Rigolot, the Meredith Howland Pyne Professor of French Literature at Princeton University, has been awarded the Gilbert Chinard Literary Prize by the Institut Francais de Washington. He is a resident of Mountain Avenue.

The $1,000 prize, said to be the most distinguished annual award for French and Franco-American studies in America, was awarded for Prof.

DRAFT REPORT READY

On Housing. Is the Princeton community — Borough and Township — supposed to provide 1,563 additional units of lower-income housing by 1990, or 873 units or even a third figure?

Discussions — and lawsuits — about housing focus on one question: how much lower-income housing is Princeton supposed to provide, under the January, 1983 Mount Laurel II court ruling?

This Wednesday at 11 in the Valley Road Building, consultants John R. Nolon and Alan Mallach are scheduled to discuss their preliminary report with the Housing Subcommittee of the Planning Board. There is some urgency: last week, Calton Homes, Inc., announced that it would sue the Township unless Committee introduced by March 22 an ordinance allowing Calton to build 1,280 homes on a 128-acre tract between Mercer and Stockton Streets.

After Wednesday's meeting, the report is scheduled to go to the full Planning Board. If members approve it, they will recommend the necessary ordinances.

According to the state's Department of Community Affairs, Borough and Township must provide 304 units for people who already have Princeton ties — described as "indigenous" units — and 1,501 as Princeton's fair share for the region for a total of 1,902; however, since Princeton already has 271 lower-cost units (public housing and Princeton Community Housing's units), the actual DCA number is 1,563.

Of that number, the Borough's share is 220 for those described as "indigenous" and 52 are "fair share." The remainder are Township-assigned units.

But Mr. Mallach disagrees. His calculations show only 873 for both Borough and Township indigenous and fair share.

A court decision later this month could provide a third set of figures.

In their report, Mallach and Nolon and a sub-committee of the Planning Board appointed to consider Mt. Laurel, recommend that Princeton consider such housing as unfinished shell homes, manufactured houses, mid-rise apartments, zero-lot-line homes and mixed commercial-residential buildings.

Some of these could be produced at less than $70,000, which would reduce any internal subsidies. State guidelines define "low" income housing as two and one-half times the "low" income, which means a house costing $37,000. The same formula makes a "moderate" income house $75,000.

The report finds "hundreds" of small parcels scattered throughout the community that could sustain low-cost housing.

The Township's draft Conditional Density Bonus ordinance isn't likely to produce low-cost housing, the report finds, or generate enough units to meet the need. Mr. Mallach suggests an Affordable Housing District which would include almost all land in Borough and Township except limited growth areas and institutional sites.

In such a District, low-cost housing could be provided anywhere as a Conditional Use, and property-owners could build any kind of housing that meets design-density-quality objectives. The ordinance should let the Planning Board waive zoning provisions that might keep such housing from being built.

This would disperse low-cost units throughout the community, diversify the housing stock, encourage small-scale development and reduce the cost of lower-income units, the report says.

Developers should also have a chance at a density bonus, by giving five percent of the gross sales price to an Affordable Housing Fund. Allowing developers to build to a greater density, the consultants believe, would also provide "much-needed housing" for upper-middle-income families who cannot afford a $350,000 house.

An Affordable Housing Fund and Housing Trust should be established to provide the kind of financial help that would induce property-owners to develop without creating windfall profits.

Contributions from developers and money from a Development Permit Fee, plus contributions from individuals and foundations, would fund the Trust. The estimated cost of meeting Mount Laurel is estimated at $200,000 annually, to be met through the Building Permit Fee.

Meanwhile, Calton Homes, Inc. is waiting. The organization plans 1,280 homes, 20 percent of which would be low-moderate in cost. The remaining 1,024 would be market price.

The developer estimates that an apartment might cost $125,000 to $150,000, while two and three-bedroom townhouses would cost upwards of $200,000.

Costs of low or moderate-income homes are determined by a Housing and Urban Development formula related to the median income of the area, in this case Mercer County.

of the state's Department of Community Affairs, says his staff doesn't have that capability. He will talk to several firms that do such audits and report to the mayors by the end of this week.

The new error follows the underbilling discovered last fall which is costing Borough and Township $1.2 million. That underbilling, traceable to factoring one meter by 100 instead of 1000, had been done from 1980 to 1983.

This time there is also an arithmetic error. The Authority apparently takes daily flow figures and averages them for the month, then averages those monthly figures at the end of the year. But computation does not take account of the fact that some months have 30 days, some 31 — and one only 28 or 29.

"This kind of system increases the chances of error," remarked Mayor Pike.

From now on, the mayor said, the Authority will read its odometer at the beginning and end of each fiscal year.

"This is OK," Mayor Pike observed, "if the meters are registering."

He said he regarded the matter as one of staff competence.

Arthur Kling, executive director of the Authority, is retiring shortly but John McGee, chair of the Authority and Township representative on the body, says the retirement has been planned and known about for almost two years and is not related to current billing problems. Michael Dimino, engineer at the Authority, is a candidate to replace Mr. Kling. Mr. McGee said; however, mayors have said they would like some say in the replacement.

Billing adjustments, combined with a wet 1983, have zoomed sewer rates in Borough and Township by more than 70 percent. The average cost for sewer treatment in 1984 will be $455 for a Borough household and $399 for a Township home.

been sold, but it has only just been listed, also as an exclusive, by the Callaway office.

According to Stuart Bellows, there has been a great deal of interest expressed in the property, but the rumors of sale, or pending sale are just rumors, he says. The Bellows building includes 7,000 square feet on the ground floor and almost as much in the basement, as well as four apartments on the top two floors and the frame building to the rear known as "The Treehouse."

The Bellows building was at one time on the corner of Alexander and Dickinson Street and was moved in two parts to make way for Seminary apartments. Since 1920 it has been by turns the home of the YWCA, and Acme supermarket, a children's shop and for the past 25 years Bellows clothing store.

Two other pieces of prime commercial real estate that are presently under contract to prospective buyers are the Stuff 'n' Nonsense building at 10 Moore Street and the former Gourmet Shop, Warnocks for the Home, at 344 Nassau Street. Listed at $200,000 by K.M. Light Realty, the white frame house on Moore Street with apartment over the store housed a toy shop that was a favorite stopping place for children on their way home from the Nassau Street School.

The stone wing of the former Gourmet Shop building dates back to Princeton's earliest settlement, when it belonged to one of its six founding families. Listed by its neighbor, Princeton Crossroads Realty, it was offered at $375,000. Donald Warnock, present owner and proprietor, was not available for comment, but it is understood that he intends to move his Warnocks for the Home to a new location in town.

At the corner of Nassau and Chestnut Streets, two buildings owned by attorney William C. Baggitt are again on the market. Newly relisted by Fox and Lazo, the yellow two-story frame building with 2,000 square feet of office space and a two-bedroom apartment above at 238 Nassau Street is available for $260,000. Parking for eight cars is included.

Behind it, but facing Chestnut Street is a frame office-with-apartment building currently occupied by a psychologist. It is listed by Fox and Lazo for $139,000.

Further along, the proprietors of Nassau Seafood recently purchased that store and three others at 254-258 Nassau Street for $410,000. Still another sale of commercial property in recent months is the purchase of 12-14 Vandeventer Avenue by a group of psychologists for $230,000. The previous owner was the dentist Dr. Peter de Mauro. The sale price included a variance approval to convert one of the five apartments to additional office use.

There are other changes taking place on Nassau Street that involve not sales but leases. The WAWA Food Market will lease space presently occupied by Viking Furniture in addition to its store near the Dinky Station, and the Chinese food store at 354 Nassau Street will expand into space formerly occupied by Princeton Miniatures.

Where Princeton Miniatures is going is not known. The owner, Michael Roselli, had sought a 10-year lease but the landlord, Mrs. Martin Tuchman, who owns the whole complex at 360 Nassau Street, says she prefers to have her tenants on a one-year lease.

win on a 3-2 vote, depriving Mayor Sigmund of a pro-appellant tie-breaker.

He said that while he sat on the Planning Board, he listened to members confer and felt that in another case — not Collins — they had already made up their minds before hearing the applicant.

"The appeals are complicated," Mr. Urken pointed out. "One suit could win, one Popular Toy Store Owner Is Now Living in Homer, N.Y.

The Stuff and Nonsense Shop at 10 Moore Street, and Phyllis Britcher who founded it in 1950 as a toy shop for children, were institutions in Princeton.

Now that the shop has been closed and the building is under contract to a potential buyer, friends and long-time patrons will be glad to know that Miss Britcher is well ensconced in an elegant home in upstate New York, not far from where she grew up.

The Elizabeth Brewster House in Homer, N.Y., to which Miss Britcher has retired in her 84th year, is said to be a place of fluted columns and a front portico, of damask napkins, lovely china and few residents. Surrounded by furnishings from the home she kept above the store, the slight, fiercely independent woman who instinctively knew what children liked best, and who stocked her store with quality things that could be found nowhere else, is reported to be comfortable and in good spirits.

Before coming to Princeton in mid-life and purchasing the house at 10 Moore Street for a toy shop, Miss Britcher had had several overlapping careers. With a partner she had run a bookstore in Greenwich Village. Under the pen name Romney Gay she had written and illustrated between 25 and 30 books for children, some of which were used as readers in primary grades. As a young woman of somewhat frail health, she had been encouraged to take up art as a career.

The courses in commercial art and illustration that she requested be given at Syracuse University were the beginnings of the Fine Arts Program at Syracuse. She took additional courses in illustration at Parsons School of Design in New York City before going to live and paint with friends in Switzerland and France for a year.

She once told Connie Sayen Ban in an interview for the Princeton Recollector that her understanding of the importance of toys in a child's life dated back to a time when at age eight she was very ill with pneumonia and not expected to live. Her distraught lawyer father passed a shop window in which a lovely big doll was displaying baby clothes. He bought the doll and hurried home to present it to his ailing daughter.

Miss Britcher said that she was sure the doll saved her life, because it became a real companion sharing the enormous bed in the guest room where before the sick little girl had felt "swallowed up" and alone.

Her Stuff and Nonsense Shop was particularly known for its doll house furniture, its miniatures, animals of all kinds, and its imports. There were wonderful British-made forts and toy soldiers in regimental dress, Pelham puppets, Steiff marionettes, and origami construction kits. For several generations of Princeton youngsters and subsequently for their children, Christmas always began with a German-made Advent calendar purchased right after Thanksgiving.

Miss Britcher had an unerring sense of quality and taste. Toy cars, trains and puzzles on her shelves were made of wood and made to last. The few books she carried were particularly imaginative titles that could not be found elsewhere. She cared about each item and was occasionally known to tell a prospective buyer that a certain doll was "not for sale" if she intuitively felt it would not be going to a good home.

Those who would like to send her a card may write Miss Britcher at the Elizabeth Brewster House, 41 South Main Street, Homer, N.Y. 13077.

could lose. I will read and listen and decide. I want to be as objective as possible — everyone on Council should be, hearing the pluses and minuses on both sides."

Commenting on the Bliss decision, Collins vice-president Gary Green asked, "Did Irv want to be able to vote, or did Walt Bliss want him to be able to vote? We're in the political realm here instead of in the legal realm.

"To sit on the side lines because of a conflict of interest and then claim no conflict of interest ... "

"Absolutely" Collins will continue to Superior Court if Council votes for the appellants, Mr. Green stated.

"To suppose Hulfish North exists apart from the rest, is to misunderstand what a Planned Commercial Development is," he said.

"A PCD steps away from the traditional zoning of a single lot. It clusters, and creates an interface of things so that the whole stands together as a plan. It allows us the open spaces and courtyards. Otherwise, you'd have to take each lot on its own — there were originally several lots in the Palmer Square package — like a series of single sites. Hulfish North doesn't stand on its own; its density relates to that of Hulfish South."

He said of the two Council newcomers, Mr. Huntoon and Mr. Urken, "I think they are intelligent, free-thinking people who will vote their minds and hearts."

ENTERTAINMENT SET

For "Just Desserts." Dixieland, Sousa, PDQ Bach, Richard Rodgers, Irving Berlin, Cole Porter, The Beatles, The Mommas and The Poppas — Gilbert and Sullivan — will be represented at "Just Desserts," the benefit for The American Boychoir School.

The event will take place on Saturday, March 10, at the Hyatt Regency, starting at 8 p.m. The Princeton Barbershoppers, who are celebrating their 15th year of old-fashioned group harmony, will begin the musical program.

Princeton's Gilbert and Sullivan troupe will sign highlights from "The Mikado," "Iolanthe," "Patience," and "The Sorcerer."

The American Boychoir will join in the spirit of the event and sing familiar American music from a new digital album, "This Is My Country." The choirboys, ages 10 to 14, have just completed a three-week tour through the southern states.

Following the second "dessert interlude," The Katzenjammers of Princeton University will perform from their popular and classical repertoire. This 14-member coed a cappella singing group has gained a reputation for performing a wide range of works, including Bach and Brahms as well as The Beatles and Billy Joel.

Composer and choral conductor, Gordon Myers, will perform his ironic mock reverence in the tradition of PDQ Bach and Victor Borge, entitled "The Art of Belly Canto." Mr. Myers, who is present a professor of music at Trenton State College, formerly sang with the Pro Musica in New York.

The final group of the evening will be The Sons of The Whiskey Rebellion, an 11-man Dixieland band from the Mercer - Hunterdon area.

During the serving of the desserts, the University Brass Quintet will entertain with trumpets, french horn, tuba and a trombone. Primarily a chamber music ensemble, their repertoire will include ragtime, PDQ Bach and exciting brass music.

The emcee for the evening will be actor, director, and lyricist Lawrence Holofcener.

The value of door prizes increases and is well over $7,000. Included are a walk-on part in "Edge of Night" plus a talent fee of $97, a VCR Home Video Recorder, a Boehm porcelain appraised at $1275, a round trip for two to London for a weekend of theater, and a week's stay at a condominium in Florida.

HELP FOR BLUEBIRDS

Nesting Boxes Available. Bluebirds soon will be searching for nesting sites and they need help.

Requiring ready-made enclosures in which to build their nests, bluebirds here in central New Jersey find fewer and fewer places each year as increased development destroys appropriate habitats in fields and orchards where hollow trees and rotting fence posts are located. Additional pressure comes from man-introduced species such as starlings.

Bluebirds can, however, be induced to return if suitable man-made enclosures are provided in areas where there is also open space and low undergrowth. The Watersheds Association has "Starling-proof" bluebird nesting boxes, complete with installation instructions. The boxes may be purchased by calling the Watersheds Association at 737-3735.

The Days of the $7.50 Patron Fee Are Gone from Princeton; Fund-Raising Has Left Miss Fine's Gym for the Hyatt Regency

Opening your heart to let all the good impulses out costs more than it used to.

Today, in Princeton, you can release those impulses for $100 and get a tax break, too.

Last Saturday, you spent $100 each — $200 a couple, if your $9.98 calculator is working — to help retinitis pigmentosa research. This Saturday, it will only cost you $75 to get your Just Desserts at the American Boychoir fund-raiser.

But you may have to draw down your money market account if you want to have dinner with Brooke Shields at the April 28 Fantasy Auction for the Association for the Advancement of Mental Health and then move on to spend "Springtime in New Jersey" with Channel 13 on May 5 — each event is $100 each.

Even Johann Sebastian Bach has joined the chorus: Nassau Presbyterian Church is having a Festival of Bach as a pre-300th birthday party for J.B. and the top ticket is $150 ("or more") although you can slip into part of the Festival for $10.

Simpler Days. "I remember ... " begins Mrs. Landon Peters. She's running "Springtime in New Jersey" for The Princeton Friends of 13, but she remembers simpler days.

"Used to be that dances were 'it'. You ate dinner in somebody's house and Brought Your Own, probably to the Miss Fine's School gym (the cinder-block building behind Borough Hall) and everybody took their kids to the gym to help decorate.

"I remember a Princeton Day School dance about 1972 where the Patron fee was $7.50. The Republican Dance that year — $7.50, too, and you didn't get anything but set-ups and appetizers.

"Why, the Historical Society had a dinner at the Nass at $12.50 a head, and $5 of that was tax-deductible!"

Nobody, of course, decorates any more. (Although a Channel 13 group in Morristown is coming down to decorate "Springtime in New Jersey.") Mrs. Peters remembers with affection the decorating talents of the late Josie Hall and how everybody got together under Mrs. Hall's direction to make pigs out of plaster of Paris and paint them, too ... For a PDS dance, she thinks it was.

In a town without much evening entertainment, these events are welcomed and with the tax deductible tag, doubly so.... There is imagination here and the promise of an evening of fun."

Corporate Underwriters. Today, you hold it at a hotel, which doesn't need decoration and you get underwriters, chiefly the corporate royalty around Princeton. That's why so much of your $100 can be tax-deductible — $60 worth for the RP Foundation Fighting Blindness entertainment last Saturday, the whole $75 for the Boychoir Just Desserts, the whole $25 for the Princeton High School Inn Cabaret benefit January 28. Corporate donors gave $3,000 for the high school fund-raiser.

"Without corporate donors, we would have to charge much more," says Ruth Wilson, head of McCarter Associates, whose "McCarter Masquerade" last Hallowe'en raised — well, it's theatre policy not to publicize fund-raising results, but Mrs. Wilson reveals that "our goal was $10,000 and our net went way beyond that."

There were 300 paid admissions at $100 each, $200 for Sponsors.

"Hahne's at Quakerbridge, actually chose McCarter. When they decorate a store, they like to put on a cultural event," Mrs. Wilson explains. "They'd looked into several organizations in Princeton, and chose us. All McCarter paid for was the dinners and mailing costs.

"Paper for our invitations, graphic design, printing costs — all were donated."

It was Herb Hobler, head of the Boychoir Board of Trustees, who thought up the idea of having Just Desserts. It will be at the Hyatt Regency on Route One, and it's the first big benefit in 47 years for the Boychoir.

Both E.R. Squibb and Prudential-Bache have given "a lot" of money to help underwrite the event, according to Julia Holofcener, Boychoir's director of public relations.

Mr. Hobler's Nassau Broadcasting underwrote the 11- by 17-inch invitation that lures customers with hints of "sinfully delicious after-dinner entertainment." Boychoir headmaster Steven Howard got the silver cylinders, in which the invitations were mailed, from a friend in New York.

Singers and musicians like the Princeton Barbershoppers, a Gilbert and Sullivan group including George Gallup III, the banjos and red vests of the Sons of the Whisky Rebellion, Gordon Myers and his "Art of Belly Canto" and, surprise-surprise, the Boychoir itself, will all be heard in and around the calories.

Because it's a first, the Boychoir has no financial goal. The RP Foundation Fighting Blindness hoped for 400 guests last Saturday and had 350.

Besides netting $38,000 on the advertising book, — which included information about retinitis pigmentosa — the Foundation made a net of $14,236 on the dinner, for a total of more than $52,000, according to Mrs. Gordon Gund, president of the Foundation.

Big Contributors. The biggest contributors for the book of advertisers were the Golden Nugget Casino in Atlantic City, whose owner, Steven Wynn, has RP; H. Gross — Outfitters, who also offered the new shop on Palmer Square as a pre-dinner cocktail lounge; Merrill Lynch and Prudential-Bache. In addition, Mr. Gross is giving the RP Foundation ten percent of the gross, this first week his store is open.

RP sold "gold pages" for $2000 to Fidelity Bank of Philadelphia and Mac Products Inc., of Kearny, whose owner has RP in his family, and $1000 "silver pages" to Squibb, Princeton Microfilm, Prince Manufacturing, Nationwide Advertising Services, Inc., New Jersey National Bank, Palmer Square, Automatic Catering, Inc. and Calloway Real Estate.

"It was our first year at a $100 ticket," Mrs. Gund explains, "but our board felt that when you give lots of entertainment and a dinner, you need to go that high. And the Foundation gives all but 18 percent — for administrative expenses — to research."

Past fund-raisers have been an exhibit of the Gund Collection of Western Art and premieres of "Jaws" and "The Island" — because author and Princeton resident Peter Benchley was a classmate of Mr. Gund's.

Many Volunteers. It takes volunteers, workers, friends, contacts, networking, letters to line up these contributors.

Mrs. Holofcener speaks

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, BUT .... What's going on between mommie (Stacy Ray, standing, rear) and her — uh — friend, played by Greg Thornton is a nice counterpoint to the happy pandemonium of the little kiddies' birthday. At the party are, from left, Mary Martello, Robert Lanchester, Penelope Reed and Jay Doyle. And watch Jay's balloon. (Cliff Moore Photo)

"The Dining Room" starts out rather slowly as what might be called a comedy of table-manners, but soon erupts into a manic panorama of The American Family through several generations and in nearly every conceivable familial situation.

What the current McCarter Theatre Company production lacks in subtlety, it makes up for in vitality, variety, and sheer funniness.

Director Nagle Jackson gives us six of our favorite McCarter actors, each playing many roles, ranging, sometimes in a flash, from misbehaving moppets to starchy elders, going out one door as one person and instantly coming in another door as someone else. Great theatrical fun.

News of the THEATRES

It is difficult if not impossible, but not important, to keep all these cutout characters straight. But you know what they are if not who.

A.R. Gurney Jr.'s play is about the amazing change in family life from about 1900 to now, symbolized by the decline of the dining room as a gathering place and its virtual disappearance architecturally. A depressing thought, but, as handled by Gurney, Jackson & Co., not so much a "thought" as the basis for a series of revue-like comic sketches that are far from depressing.

———

"TDR" is not above straining for laughs — of the kind spelled "laffs" in showbiz. Rebellious Young Daughter: "St. Joan didn't go to dancing school in a mill-yun years!" Overbearing Mother: "And look what happened to St. Joan."

Obviously Mr. Gurney offers far better exchanges than this or "TDR" could not have been the off-Broadway hit it was. And if you don't like one sketch, wait a second. Pace is Nagle Jackson's middle name and a palpable element in this work.

Fast-Paced. Scenes not only chase each other off the stage, they often overlap; and at times two situations play against each other: a typically pandemoniacal children's birthday party — with four of the six actors playing funny-hatted celebrants — is the background for a furtive exchange between the hostess-mother and one of the fathers about their love affair, which has been discovered and is about to self-destruct.

As the man's little son, who at times of high excitement automatically clutches his handiest protuberance, Robert Lanchester is ridiculously believable and hysterically funny.

"TDR" is a comic actors' field day. Jay Doyle — a balloon-busting kid in the birthday party — is also a stiff father who lets his children breakfast with him provided they eat their shredded wheat in silence while he reads the paper and ignores them; and a rich self-made grandfather who makes a grandson beg for money to attend a private school; and an old man who insists on going over, play-by-play, his funeral scenario with his eldest son, who, for reasons not readily apparent, is overcome by emotion.

These are familiar scenes but each with a surefire emotional base, and with Laugh-In timing that keeps even the cliches from seeming tiresome.

Penelope Reed Believable. Penelope Reed has perhaps the most believable characters to play — or is it that she can make any character believable? She is a dignified servant, bossy mother, philandering suburban matron, and finally, a widow too senile to recognize her own sons, but still responsive to their harmonizing on her favorite old song in the play's most — maybe only — genuinely touching scene.

Greg Thornton, always first-rate, is called upon to overplay some of his roles, but is pretty funny as an architect who wants to destroy the dining room by converting it to an office and waiting room for his psychoanalyst client; and as an antique furniture restorer prowling under the dining table with one of Miss Reed's dotty ladies.

A strong scene has Mr. Lanchester as a fussy, set-in-his-ways father and Stacy Ray as his swinging daughter who wants to move into the old family house with her three children (one of whom just broke father's favorite old-fashioned glass) because her husband has another woman; and, as a matter of fact, because she has another man — plus a woman. Seem complicated? Well, says Mr. Gurney's play, life is, today.

Miss Ray plays children and adults with equal wackiness; and it is good to see Mary Martello on the Big Stage after her fine performances in Murray Theatre last summer and recently in McCarter's "Judevine."

James Wolk's dining room setting is handsomely noncommittal except to say these people have, or had, money; and, in furniture, good taste, of which they reveal very little in other ways. But Susan Rheaume's costumes whisk them through the years becomingly.

None of the characters in "TDR" is particularly original or intriguing in her- or himself, but as cogs in an intricate, well-oiled machine they do mesh and whir most entertainingly.

—William McCleery

Periwig Tryouts

Auditions for all female parts in The Periwig Club's "H.M.S. Pinafore" — and successful contestants must be able to handle simple dance steps as well as sing — will be held on the campus of The Lawrenceville School Thursday and Friday, March 22-23 at 7 p.m. in Prentiss Room behind the Upper House.

As a voice test, those who try out will be asked to sing "The Star-Spangled Banner." A piano accompaniment will be provided.

The production will be given in the school's Kirby Arts Center May 11 and 12 at 8.

TWO EXPERIMENTS

In Theatre Program. Two experimental works, each one probing for ways to present prose material in theatrical form, will be given this Thursday through Sunday by members of Princeton University's Program in Theatre and Dance. Performances will be in the 185 Nassau Theatre at 8 p.m. each evening.

In "Open Rehearsal for 'Tis Pity She's A Whore Directed by Antonin Artaud," playwright Artaud is portrayed as a man searching for the feeling of "victims burnt at the stake, signaling through the flames." With actors, the playwright explores the nightmarish dimensions of a scene from 'Tis Pity, describing his ideas to the audience as he goes, repeating and distorting the test and adding startling light and sound effects. The audience is left to decide whether he has succeeded.

In "The Angelus" — adapted, directed and acted by Catherine Curtain, James Joyce's Molly Bloom lies in bed, examining the events of the preceding day, skipping from one thought to another remembering both the real and the fantasy and finally settling into sleep.

Tickets are $3 for adults, $2 for students and reservations are available by calling 452-3676.

BACK TO THE MOVIES

"Passion d'Amore." "... the ironies of love, the traps of passion and the real nature of beauty." Those are the themes, according to McCarter Theatre, of Ettore Scola's "Passion d'Amore" to be screened next Tuesday and Wednesday in Kresge Auditorium at 7:30 and 9:30 as part of the Movies-from-McCarter series.

"Passion" is set in Italy in 1862, and tells of a young cavalry officer who falls in love with the beautiful wife of a rich older man. Posted to another assignment in a distant town, he becomes the object of infatuation by an ugly and possibly mad, young woman by whom he is eventually snared.

Superb Quality of Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra Attributed to Conducting of Karl Munchinger

In the past five years this writer has heard several excellent chamber orchestras at McCarter Theatre — the Orpheus Ensemble, I Musici, the Y Chamber Orchestra — all ensembles of fine musicianship. None, though, can compare with the fabulous music produced by the Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra. This superb string ensemble played to a packed audience Monday evening at Music-at-McCarter's sixth event of this season.

Under the leadership of its delightfully flamboyant conductor, Karl Munchinger, the ensemble performed five works, many of which are rarely heard: Concertino No. 4 in F Minor by Pergolesi; Divertimento in D Major (K. 136) by Mozart; J.S. Bach's Concerto for Two Violins and Orchestra (BWV 1043); Chaconne from Gluck's opera, Paris and Helena; and Dvorak's Serenade for Strings in E Major (Op. 22).

The astounding quality of the Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra can only be credited to its marvelous conductor. Munchinger is by far the most visually expressive conductor this writer has ever seen. His hands show precisely what he wants to the most minute detail. Since he conducts everything from memory, he is free to maneuver about the ensemble, drawing wide arcs with his arms and showing subtle turns of dynamics and articulation with the fingers of his left hand. Munchinger's finely honed sense of phrasing is matched only by his sensitivity to the diverse array of colors available from his orchestra. He has a total concept of sound in mind, and he shapes that sound to absolute perfection.

The players themselves are musicians of the highest order, as demonstrated by their complete responsiveness to Munchinger's conducting. Ensemble and intonation never faltered, and control over their instruments was absolute.

In the Pergolesi, each line was lucid and well-defined. Dynamics ranged from the hushed whispers of the muted violins in the Andante to the robust fortes of the fugal second movement. Within this range, the sound maintained a feeling of classical austerity, an element which also characterized the performance of works by Mozart and Gluck. The charm and grace of these latter pieces were exceeded only by their intrinsic clarity of form.

The performance of the concerto by Bach deserves special note. The soloists, Herwig Zack and Wolfgang Kussmaul, played extraordinarily well. The melodic give-and-take which permeated the work was most remarkable for its fine balance. The timbres of the instruments blended into a double strand of pearl-like sounds set against the transparent textures of the ensemble. The second movement was exceptionally beautiful as the soloists spun out its long, dulcet phrases.

The character of the orchestra's sound changed dramatically with the Dvorak Serenade. The tone took on a lush quality as Munchinger allowed the composer's warm melodies to swell with richness and vibrance. The conductor's animated movements elicited quick shifts in mood from the ensemble, and the rubati of the work's third movement were especially tasteful.

Princeton audiences are accustomed to routinely hearing some very good musical performances. The resounding applause which filled McCarter Theatre at the conclusion of this performance was indicative of the exceptionally high quality of the Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra.

BACH FESTIVAL PLANNED

By Nassau Church. A year before the 300th anniversary of the birth of Johann Sebastian Bach, Nassau Presbyterian Church is planning a Festival of Bach.

The festival will be held on Saturday, March 31, at 8 in the sanctuary of the church at 61 Nassau Street.

The Concerto Soloists of Philadelphia will join with the Nassau Choir soloists to perform three works: Cantata No. 10 for choir and orchestra, Meine Seele erhebt den Herren; Magnificat for choir, orchestra and four soloists, Anne Ackley, Lindsey Christiansen, Frederick Urrey and Daniel Pratt; and Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 for orchestra. The contribution will be $10 per person for this Saturday evening concert.

On Sunday, April 1, during the 10 a.m. worship service, the Nassau Church Adult Choir and a special children's Bach choir will join the Concerto Soloists of Philadelphia in a performance of Cantata No. 78, Jesu, der Du meine Seele. The order for the morning worship service will be based on that used in Bach's St. Thomas Church in Leipzig in the early 18th century when cantatas were an integral part of each Sunday service.

Because the ticket price of $10 covers only a portion of the Festival expenses, the Festival Committee is seeking special support in four categories. There is the Festival Supporter at $25 each, Festival Patron at $50 each, Festival Benefactor at $75 and Special Friend of Bach at any amount over $150. The contributors' names will appear in the Festival Program.

Patrons, benefactors and special friends of Bach are invited to the Great Hall of the J.S. Morgan mansion at Constitution Hill on Friday evening, March 30, at 7:30, for an informal evening of chamber music similar to concerts performed in the great houses of Leipzig in Bach's time. Champagne, dessert and coffee will be served.

The music will be performed by Emily Agnew, oboist, a string quartet, and the vocal soloists of Saturday evening. The Great Hall at Constitution Hill has a capacity of 90, and reservations for the Friday evening concert will be accepted in order of receipt.

Festival patrons, benefactors and special friends of Bach will also be invited to join Dr. William Scheide for a tour of the Scheide Collection at Firestone Library on Saturday, March 31, from 2 to 4. Original Bach manuscripts highlight this collection, as well as some recent acquisitions.

Tax deductible contributions may be made to Nassau Presbyterian Church/Bach Festival, and sent to the church at 61 Nassau Street.

OPERA BENEFIT

Planned by Choir College. The annual musical benefit for the Westminster Choir Foundation is scheduled for Saturday evening, May 5 at Westminster Choir College.

The benefit will feature the Westminster Opera Theatre, performing two, one-act French operas sung in English: Poulenc's "Les Mamelles de Tiresias," and Ravel's "L'Enfant et les Sortileges." The performance will be followed by a reception for the audience and the opera company.

The Westminster Opera Theatre, under the leadership of its director, Glenn Parker, prepares one fully staged production each year. The 29 members of the cast are music students at Westminster Choir College, working toward bachelor or master of music degrees. This year's production was staged by David Gately.

The two operas were performed by the Metropolitan Opera several seasons ago, but are seldom performed at the college level. Based on a text by Apollonaire, the Poulenc opera is funny, yet it makes a social statement on war. Ravel based his impressionist opera on a fairy tale by Colette.

Westminster's first musical benefit was held in 1983, and featured The Blue Hill Troupe of New York and The Westminster Singers. Sponsored by the board of trustees of the Choir College, the event will continue on an annual basis to benefit the Westminster Choir Foundation. For more information call 924-7407.

REHEARSING FOR BENEFIT: The date is May 5, but already the Westminster Opera Theatre has started rehearsals for the two operas it will put on as a benefit for the Westminster Choir Foundation. From left are soloist Robert Prowse, Opera Theatre director Glenn Parker, and soloist Barbara Fatzinger. (Tom Graves photo)

STAGE SEATS ONLY

For Serkin Concert. Stage seats are available from the McCarter Theatre box office for the return of pianist Peter Serkin on Monday, April 2, at 8 p.m.

The program for Mr. Serkin's Music-at-McCarter concert will be devoted in its entirety to the last three piano sonatas of Beethoven: No. 30 in E major, Op. 109; No. 31 in A-flat major, Op. 110; and No. 32 in c minor, Op. 111.

Ticket price for stage seats is $14. For further information, call the McCarter box office, 452-5200, Monday through Saturday, noon to 6 p.m.

BACK AGAIN

"The Chieftains". You know it's spring — or at least St. Patrick's season — when The Chieftains come back to McCarter. This will be the fourth year in a row and the 1984 date is Monday, March 12 at 8.

Hailed, says McCarter, as "the greatest exponents of traditional Irish music," The Chieftains have performed for the Pope in Dublin and have appeared on "Saturday Night Live." They've also played London's Albert Hall and small local clubs, which is where they began.

Their music includes the tribal reels of the ancient Celts and lovely wedding serenades from the Georgian area.

Accompaniments are on Uillean pipes, bodhrans, harps and flutes.

MUSIC HALL SET

By Folk Music Society. The Princeton Folk Music Society will present "An Evening of English Music Hall" on Friday, March 16, at 8 at the YM-YWCA building.

The performers will include David Jones, from London, England, who has an enormous repertoire of songs from the days of the music hall; Murray Callahan, from Philadelphia, noted for her wit in music hall song and Victoriana; Kristen Garver, pianist, singer and actress; Tom Goslin, a professional guitarist and singer who also plays the French horn; and Richard Fewtrell, a native of England who will play violin, cornet and ukelele.

Admission is $5 for adults, $3.50 for students, $3 for Society members, $2 for children and senior citizens. There are no advanced sales. For further information call 924-9143.

AMATEURS TO MEET

To Sing Brahms, V. Williams. The Princeton Society of Musical Amateurs will meet Sunday, March 11, at 4 at the Unitarian Church, Cherry Valley Road and Route 206.

The program will include two pieces by Brahms, Nanie and Schicksalslied sung in English, and Mass in G by Vaughn Williams. Lois Laverty, director of music at All Saints' Church, will conduct the chorus, orchestra and soloists in a reading of these works. The soloists will be Karen Hansen, soprano; Jeanette Smith, alto; Thomas Faracco, tenor; and Alan Seale, bass.

Those who are interested in choral singing are welcome to participate. These "sings" held by the Musical Amateurs are not performances. Auditions are not required for the chorus, but a modest sight-reading ability is helpful.

There is a small charge for non-members to cover the cost of refreshments and music. For further information call Mrs. Ramus at 924-4266.

'ARABELLA' NEXT

As Opera Outing. The Westminster Conservatory has scheduled a matinee performance of Richard Strauss' opera Arabella as its Opera Outing for March. The trip is scheduled for Saturday, March 17, with a preparatory class, giving musical and historical background, on Monday, March 12.

Starring in the March 17 matinee will be Kay Griffel as Arabella, Kathleen Battle as Zdenka, Mignon Dunn as Countess Adelaide, David Rendall as Matteo and Franz Ferdinand Nentwig as Mandryka. The love story is set in Vienna in the 1860s and puts Arabella in the position of choosing betrothal to Matteo or Mandryka.

For further information, call the Westminster Conservatory office at 921-7104 or 924-6359.

EXCITING OPENING

At H. Gross, Outfitters. An aura of expectation filled Palmer Square last weekend as Henry Gross II directed a constant flow of activity preparing for the grand opening of his new store, H. Gross and Co. Outfitters. Curious onlookers could not help but be caught up in the festive atmosphere which emanated from One Palmer Square, vacant for so many months.

A heart-warming surprise to Mr. Gross and his wife Nancy, treasurer of the new company, was the outpouring of help they received from family members and friends, who spent long hours with them sorting out the clothing, assisting with creative displays, even moving furniture. The hard-driving owner always found time to welcome passersby and chat for a few minutes as he readied the shop for the seven o'clock opening cocktail party preceding the "Benefit Gala" at the Nassau Inn.

H. Gross and Co. Outfitters joined the Retinitis Pigmentosa Foundation in presenting the party, which included dinner, a delightful program of singing, and a blend of comedy and ballet followed by dancing until two in the morning.

A DREAM COME TRUE: Nancy and Henry Gross, shown at the grand opening of H. Gross & Co., Outfitters, have realized a lifelong ambition to open a store in Princeton. They will not only sell your favorite casual clothes, but will also have tickets to McCarter Theatre and University sports events, and plan to become an active part of the Princeton community.

It was a wonder that the Grosses could dance at all after the schedule they had kept the week before! They were up until 1.30 in the morning every day last week except for Friday, when Mr. Gross actually slept in his attractive new shop because of a mix-up with keys! The shop officially opened on Monday in conjunction with the RP Awareness Week. Ten percent of all sales will be donated to the RP Foundation, founded by Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Gund of Princeton.

H. Gross and Co. Outfitters is the fulfillment of a childhood dream of its owner, who has spent all of his working years in the retail business. Fifteen years were spent with Bloomingdale's where he began as a trainee, moving from department to department until he was promoted to a corporate vice president for planning and marketing analysis. His vast retailing experience will surely be a boon to his Princeton customers.

Born and raised in West Trenton, Mr. Gross was brought up in a family of retailers. His father owned a chain of millinery stores across the country.

"I always wanted to open my own store ever since I was a child and used to come to Princeton every Friday night for family skating at Baker rink. I knew that this was the best place to do it," says Mr. Gross, whose enthusiasm and commitment to the town clearly reaches far beyond good public relations.

"My wife — who is my sidekick and active in all phases of the business — and I want this to become more than just a store. We look forward to becoming an integral part of the community, involved with worthy charities such as the RP Foundation," he explains.

A Great Start. If last Saturday night was any indication, H. Gross and Co. is off to a terrific start. The Princeton Nassoons, barbershop quartets, mimes and the University band led guests from the cocktail party to the Inn.

"I didn't hear one negative comment. Mrs. Gund and her committee organized a beautiful party; the people were terrific and very positive about the store," says Mr. Gross, whose good taste is reflected throughout. The shop's handsome interior was designed by Mr. Gross and his sister, Irene Schragger, a designer. Forest green walls and green and white striped carpeting offset stunning handmade natural oak and pine display cabinets. Brass accessories and effective lighting please the eye and create an atmosphere new to Princeton. Antique English armoires, cabinets, washstands, and tables of natural oak give the shop a distinctive air. Almost every piece collected for the store has a special story.

On a Sunday stroll through Hopewell Mr. and Mrs. Gross found the eight tavern chairs in Cox's Collectibles, originally from the Hopewell Hotel and given to Mr. Cox for his barber shop in 1948. They will now be used to try on shoes in the men's and women's departments.

A traditionalist at heart, Mr. Gross has for years been collecting memorabilia from the area for his shop. The "Sign of the Goose" has become his logo on many of the items which bear his private label. Why the goose? Because so many winter here in Princeton. Geese, carved or handmade of wool — folk art collector's items — are seen everywhere in the shop.

Casual Clothes Features. A vast assortment of handsome casual clothing for men, women and children is featured. "This is a totally traditional store with the kind of classic clothes which Princeton shoppers like to wear and a few fun items thrown in for good measure," says the owner. One corner of the shop is devoted to Princeton University items, and is called "Tiger Town." Soon to be completed, it will yield a variety of gifts such as glasses, mugs, shirts, and other accessories. The children's section is named "Little Tigers."

Service and quality will be the mainstays of H. Gross and Co. Outfitters. Stunning camel's hair blazers, navy and tweed ones; casual outerwear for golfing and other sporting occasions; cotton sweaters by Alan Paine in several colors; button-down shirts in Bengal stripes and solids, with or without a white collar; well-priced cotton pants for spring and summer; polo and rugby shirts; and a fine selection of men's accessories such as umbrellas, hats, and handsome items in leather are among the selections.

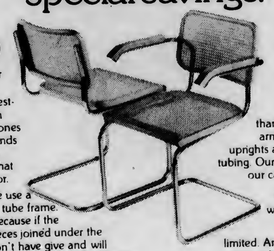
Shorts and bathing attire herald the warmer months and H. Gross is the place to find them. Alluring dresses by Lanz for summer, nighties and night shirts — even lingerie and flannel sheets by that company — can be found in the women's section. Colorful cotton pants, windbreakers in refreshing pastels, zippy socks, boat shoes in spring colors, crisp navy and white skirts and blazers by Lady Thompson, are among the choices which well-dressed women and girls will appreciate.

Imported picnic baskets, six different sizes and styles, fitted with plates, cups and tablewear — even a basket which will carry six bottles of wine — adorn the back section of the shop. You will also find a large selection of canvas totes, luggage, hanging suit bags, and a number of travel items, all with the H. Gross label. Colorful tartan stadium blankets will complete the picnic scene for Princetonians.



The sign of the goose is printed on tiny bags which will hold the store's own watches which begin at $75. A variety of club ties, knitted ones and regimental stripes will serve as excellent Father's Day gifts. Mr. Gross also suggests a canvas log carrier for Dad. Unusual gifts abound here, for instance, original post office boxes fashioned into banks at $49 each; green yellow, orange, and black stadium coats (the kind the football players wear at the sidelines); hundreds of University glasses, in sets or sold individually; and a large selection of reasonable belts.

Opening Celebration. Festivities will mark the shop's opening, in conjunction with RP Awareness week, through Saturday when H. Gross and Co. will have a prize-filled contest drawing. Nancy Buxton, the store manager, and Carol Glenn, merchandising manager, have been assisting Mr. Gross with all of his plans to entertain his customers as they acquaint themselves with the shop. Video tapes on the genetics of RP will be played on the huge video screen, which will later give fashion demonstrations, literature on the subject, and a week of entertainment of music and mime will celebrate the occasion. A folk guitar duo called Potpourri, winners of the New Jersey award, includes Frank Ruck who has RP.

On-the-spot charge accounts may be opened by shoppers so inclined. Hours for the new store are Monday through Wednesday and Saturdays, 9:30 to 5:30; 9:30 to 8:30 on Thursday and Friday.

Mr. Gross invites all of Princeton to come in and celebrate his "dream come true. People say they think they have friends, and now I know we do after all of the unsolicited help we have had this week. The town's reception has been tremendous," he concludes.

LITERARY MURDER
On Display at Firestone Library. Strange as it may seem, looking at eight centuries of murder, death, and detection — the bibliophile's view of the evil deed in fact and in fiction on display at Firestone Library — turns out to be a surprisingly lighthearted experience. Despite its onerous title "Crime and Punishment," a display of books, manuscripts, drawings, and prints culled from the University Library Collections provides a peculiarly entertaining history of the most heinous of crimes in the exhibition gallery (the only section of the Library that still remains open to the public).

Beginning with Cain and Abel, we are introduced to killers and their victims via an assortment of bookplates, correspondence, posters, prints and, even a pair of dueling pistols. There are ancient volumes, gleaming with gilt ornament; stylized hand-colored plates from old English books; a series of wood-engravings by Fritz Eichenberg; and contemporary books by the dozen, including Philip Wylie and F. Scott Fitzgerald, have also tried their hands at writing about crime. In fact, murder in academe is popular enough to warrant its own display. And women authors, women killers, academics as writers, biblical criminals and early punishments also receive special attention.

The display considers murder as both an art and a craft. In addition to accounts of bona fide criminals, mystery writers and their creations are given their due. In fact, there are so many — including more than one that is linked with Princeton in some fashion — that whodunits and related materials occupy a good deal of the exhibition space.

Authors connected with the University are featured in several displays. Professors Margaret Doody and Robert Barnard are both successful mystery writers, as is writer-in-residence Joyce Carol Oates. And, it turns out that distinguished literary alumni,

The cast of evildoers includes actual 18th-century murderesses such as Eliza Brownrigg, who committed "inhuman cruelties," a fictional president of Harvard University who dealt with academic pressures in a most unpleasant fashion, and a medieval clergyman who violated more than one commandment.

An impressive variety of graphic material can be seen in this collection. There are a substantial number of eighteenth and nineteenth century prints and illustrations that entertain as they edify. There is also a medieval manuscript illustrating that murder is every bit as beautiful as an act with a more heavenly purpose in mind. And the somber but eloquent Eichenberg wood engravings that illustrate some of the grimmer moments from stories by Dostoevsky are stunning examples of the printmakers art.

Sculptural Works at AT&T. T. Wayne Roberts, the featured artist, describes his work as a fusion of sculpture and painting. And to some degree this is true. Although his constructions are not exactly painterly, and are, in fact, three dimensional, sculptural works, they are meant to be viewed hanging on a wall — and, as such, function in two dimensions in the manner of a painting.

In this collection, on display at the AT&T Corporate Education Gallery (formerly Western Electric), combinations of found objects — painted pieces of weathered wood, discarded window frames, fences and odd bits of this and that — become the basis for carefully arranged compositions — varied works that offer rich and diverse arrangements of space and surface. Roberts artfully blends rough and smooth, large and small, curves and hard edges. The results appear almost artless in their easy-to-take forms, yet are actually intricate, thoughtful arrangements of negative and positive space, silhouette and substance.

Roberts has gotten a lot of mileage out of his materials. The mellow colors of the weathered boards are deftly combined with each other and with the raw surfaces of newer wood. And, in his most recent works, some of the wood has been painted by the artist in stronger colors to create more powerful and controlled effects.

The collection is consistently interesting and well conceived. Roberts' concern with design and spatial relationships is apparent in all of the exhibited work. A series of white constructions stand out, however, by making the viewer especially aware of the carefully arranged balances and the affect of three-dimensional forms when viewed within a two-dimensional context.

Photographs at Art Museum. A small display of photographs by Harry Callahan at the Princeton University Art Museum makes it easy to understand why he has been described as one of the rare great artists of our day. The collection, which spans the early decades of his career, includes some of the images for which he is best known: interpretive portraits of his wife, Eleanor; stark views of nature; and the carefully composed city landscapes that feature facades and street scenes.

The display points out Callahan's effectiveness as an interpreter of his surroundings. It is possible, here, to see his use of the camera as a flexible tool. For, in effect, he paints with light and chemicals using multiple exposures, high key prints and photo-collage to present his subjects in a fresh and expressive manner; one that his distinguished his work for several decades.

An amateur photographer since he took his first snapshot in 1913, Mr. Moffat has also been an avid traveler for many years. His travels were frequently connected with his work as an expert on Southeast Asia in the State Department and later as a member of the staff of the World Bank. In 1958, he was asked to organize and lead the U.S. Operations Mission to Ghana.

He retired in 1961. A resident of Princeton, he is a former member of Princeton Township Committee.

Carril Works His Magic Again, Tiger Quintet Wins Ivy Title And Will Likely Play in NCAA Preliminary Round Tuesday

Pete Carril, God bless him, hopefully will stick around as Princeton's basketball coach for years to come, regardless of the annual rumors that have him moving on to greener pastures.

The balding little man in the rumpled attire has done more to lift the level of success in men's sports here than anyone else in the past 15 years, and last weekend he did it again.

His Tiger team went out and won the two contests it had to, beating Yale, 61-48, on Friday, and Brown, 65-57, Saturday night. And when all the Ivy action had ended, Princeton had won another league title.

The Orange and Black's two closest competitors had both themselves destructed at inopportune moments, ending any need for a playoff. Harvard was eliminated when it could not defeat Cornell at home Friday. The Big Red was impressive in that outing, but choked and died the following evening in Hanover, blown out by 16 points by a mediocre Dartmouth quintet.

A REPEAT PERFORMANCE: Last year Craig Robinson was hoisted on the shoulders of his teammates to cut down the net, this time captain Billy Ryan was given the honor, after Princeton's 65-57 victory over Brown Saturday night clinched the Ivy title. (W.L. Bill Allen photo)

In his 17 seasons here, Carril has won the title six times, finished second on eight occasions, and third three times. His victory Saturday evening was his 300th at Princeton.

The beauty of Carril is that no one has to listen to excuses about Princeton basketball. Year after year, with whatever talent the man has, he gets the job done.

He lost the Ivy Player of the year, Craig Robinson, Gordon Enderle, who averaged in double figures, and center Rick Simkus from last year's defending champions. Nobody figured he could make up the difference this season; it was labled a rebuilding year for the Tigers.

Perhaps Kevin Mullin had the talent all along, and given a starting berth he certainly proved it. But under Carril's tutelage, Howard Levy blossomed into a steady 40-minute performer this winter, who could be counted on for 10-14 points a game. Carril had Billy Ryan set in one guard spot, but it took a good part of the season for Isaac Carter to nail down the other one, while the coach fiddled with various combinations. In the stretch run, Carter made important contributions.

Every ounce of talent on this team was squeezed out by Carril, and it made the difference in the end. Harvard and Cornell had as much or more, but neither could put it together when it counted most.

No Panic after Poor Start. When the Tigers lost their first two games to Harvard and Dartmouth, Carril brought the team back three weeks later to a superb upset of Penn in the Palestra, the first Princeton victory there in eight years.

Later losses to Harvard at home, and Cornell away, kept the race a tight one to the end, but at the finish it was the others not Princeton that came away empty-handed. In a race among equals, Carril's teams are invariably just a little more equal.

"What an irony," Carril commented after Saturday night's game. To have come so far and then have no one satisfied unless we could win it all." Maybe, Carril's success has spoiled Princeton fans, making the lack of it in other sports more diffciult to accept.

At season's end in the other major men's spectator sports here, football, hockey, baseball and lacrosse, the "should haves" and "could haves," are dished out regularly. There's talk of well played losses, close scores.

Here's an amazing fact ... A team once won the national championship in college basketball even though — incredibly — they NEVER played a home game that season! ... Holy Cross was the 1947 national champion but they had no gym or arena of their own ... They played EVERY game on the road ... Yet they were able to win 27 of 30 games, including 23 in a row, and won the college basketball championship of the nation.

Here's a question with a surprising answer ... When Babe Ruth hit his famous 60 home runs in 1927 to set a new major league record for most homers in one year, whose record did he break? ... Answer is: his own! ... Ruth had set the previous all-time record when he hit 59 homers in 1921.

On to the NCAA Playoffs

Princeton will take its 17-9 record into the NCAA playoffs, most likely into a preliminary round next Tuesday.

The site is expected to be the Palestra in Philadelphia, where the Tigers will be part of a tripleheader to be played that evening. A doubleheader will also be played in Dayton, Ohio that night.

The opponent will not be known until later this week, either late Friday afternoon or in the unlikely event the Tigers receive a bye, not until Sunday afternoon when the pairings will be announced over CBS-TV. Pete Carril thinks Iona, the MAAC Champion, is a strong possibility to oppose Princeton.

A year ago, the Orange and Black defeated North Carolina A&T, 53-41, in the preliminary round, then upset Oklahoma State in Oregon, before losing to Boston College.

turning the program around, and hopes for next season.

And not one has produced a league title in the last 15 years. In some cases a winning record has been hard to come by.

Carril is a businessman's dream. When it comes time to look at the bottom line, the right numbers are there.

Ryan Beats Brown. What a sweet way for captain Billy Ryan to end his career in Jadwin. Taking a cue from Penn, Brown decided to give Ryan the open shot, and collapse inside on Mullin and Levy.

Against the Quakers in Jadwin three weeks ago, Ryan could hit only four of 15 attempts, but he made Brown pay Saturday night, canning eight of 12 from the field, and adding nine of 10 from the foul line for a career-high 25 points.

He kept the Tigers ahead of Brown throughout the first half, which ended with the Orange and Black ahead by just a point 28-27. Ryan hit his first six attempts before missing, and had 16 by the intermission.

At the start of the second half, the Bruins produced only one basket in their first nine possessions, and Princeton soon had a 41-30 lead, and the game tucked safely away. The visitors never got closer than seven the rest of the night.

After not going to the line once in the first 20 minutes, the Orange and Black made 23 of 27 free throws, which helped offset a 38-19 rebounding edge for the losers. Levy finished with 16 points, and Mullin, 12, and Brown went home with its streak of having never won a basketball game here intact.

Another Loss for Yale. There is some solace for Princeton fans who wonder why the Tigers rarely win on the football field against Yale, regardless of the teams' abilities. The opposite is true in basketball.

The Elis can not find a way to beat the Orange and Black either home or away, winning only once in the last 12 years. Their all-American candidate Butch Graves, only the second player in Ivy history to score more than 2,000 points (Bill Bradley was the other) will graduate in June, having never beaten the Tigers in eight tries. He led Yale to a last-place finish in the league this year.

And when the outcome of Friday night's game was still in doubt, late in the second half, Graves had several chances but could not hit the key basket that might have turned the tide Yale's way.

After several lead changes through the first 10 minutes of the opening half, the Tigers took control, turning a 16-16 tie with 6:30 left into a 28-21 advantage at the intermission. A pair of foul shots by Carter produced a 10-point margin, 35-25, with 16:37 left in the contest, and the Tigers looked ready to walk away from the visitors.

However, as it did in the loss to Cornell 10 days ago, that lead began to evaporate a few minutes later. Freshman Chris Dudley collected a couple of key tip-ins to reduce the spread to three, 43-40, with 9:54 to play.

SHE'LL BE MISSED: Syrena Caribom, along with Kelly O'Dell, has led the Princeton women's hockey team to three consecutive Ivy titles.

It was 50-46 with 7:05 to go, and stayed that way for the next five minutes, as neither team could score. Mullin uncharacteristically missed three straight shots from the foul line during this period, but Yale could do nothing to close the gap. Twice, Graves had the chance to pull his team within two and missed.

A driving lay-up by Mullin with 2:14 left upped the lead to six points, and Princeton expanded that to 13 by game's end. Mullin, may not be an all-American, but his 30 points marked the first time a Princeton player has reached that plateau since Barnes Hauptfuhrer did it against Brown in 1976. Levy had 13

TWO LOSSES END SEASON

For Women's Hockey Team. Try as it might, and it was a good effort, the Princeton women's hockey team still came away empty-handed from the NCAA tournament last weekend in Providence.

The Tigers, the class of the Ivy League these past three seasons, can not match the abilities of the top teams. In Friday's first round, they were blanked, 4-0, by Providence, the fourth time they have lost to the Friars this season. Princeton has never won against this team in 11 attempts over the last five years.

The winners tallied once in the first period, and three times in the final frame for the victory. Both teams had 25 shots on goal. The Friars went on to nip the defending champions, New Hampshire, 1-0 in overtime to win the tournament

Princeton fell into the consolation bracket against Northeastern, a team it had beaten in regular season play this year. The Orange and Black held a 2-1 lead early in

Tiger Baseball, Lacrosse to Begin Saturday; One on Finney Field, the Other in Florida

Like their counterparts in the pros, collegiate sports seasons follow right on the heels of one another these days. Hockey has just ended, and the basketball team will still be playing, but lacrosse fans can watch their first game this Saturday at Finney Field, next to Palmer Stadium.

Princeton will begin its 1984 season there at 2 p.m. against Hofstra, and travel to Maryland on Wednesday to face UMBC.

Needing warmer weather, the Tiger baseball squad also will start play this weekend, but about 1,000 miles further south in Florida. The Orange and Black will play nine games in as many days, most of them at Winter Park, home of Rollins College.

East Carolina will provide the opposition Saturday, followed by Creighton, Monday; Rollins, Tuesday; and University of Maryland and Stetson, Wednesday.

Head coach Tom Connell will be entering his third season at the helm of the Tiger nine, aiming to push Princeton over the .500 mark for the first time in several years. And if O'Connell can pick up where he left off last spring, he might just do it.

Including victories over eastern powers St. John's and Temple, the Tigers won 10 of their last 12 to finish 17-20-2, (7-10-1 EIBL) a strong improvement from the year before. O'Connell will have to replace his co-captains last year, pitcher Steve Kordish (drafted by the Texas Rangers) and third baseman Paul Steinhauser, but there is ample talent returning, plus his first full-year recruits.

Pitcher Ed Aulisi

The pressure's on

However, some of the talent will be on the sidelines instead of the mound this spring. Righthander Mike Fiala,a junior transfer from Brandeis where O'Connell last coached, was expected to step into the starting pitching rotation, until he broke his wrist sliding in practice in Jadwin last week. He is out for the season. That puts more pressure on Bill Beard, who boasts an 8-1 two-year record, and three-year veteran and co-captain Ed Aulisi.

Twins Steve and Scott LaForest are two more O'Connell can count on; Scott went 5-5, mostly in relief in 1983, while his brother pitched on the junior varsity. Freshman candidates include Joe Pape and Art Peponis.

Leavitt, Goldenberg Back. Two of the four starting infielders, sophomore second baseman Mark Goldenberg and sophomore shortstop Todd Leavitt will be back. Starting 27 games, Goldenberg hit .328 and made only 12 errors; Leavitt had a .272 average, and was guilty of just 14 miscues.

Other returnees include third baseman Harry Kolowat, up from the jayvee squad, second baseman Chip Newton, and first baseman Ralph Brooks. Todd Tuckner, who hits well, is the most promising freshman candidate, according to O'Connell.

One of three outfield positions will be taken care of by sophomore Dan Arendas, who started all 39 games last year, batted .311 and had six assists. Two other sophomores, Tom Urquhart and Jim Curtis, both reserves last year, will challenge for starting berths along with junior Kyle Hefley, a converted infielder.

A high-school all-American from Massachusetts, Drew Stratton, has the best chance among the freshman.

Three fine receivers return, making catching the strongest position on this year's squad. Junior Craig Peters, who hit .317 in 1983, seems to have the inside track. He'll be pushed by another third-year man, Rick Edie, who took over when Peters broke his thumb. Sophomore Mike Donato will probably make the jump from the jayvee squad.

This squad is more youthful than last year's, but O'Connell is hopeful that the momentum generated from 1983's strong finish will get the team off to a good start this month.

The first home games are not scheduled for a couple of weeks. Seton Hall will open the Clarke Field entertainment on Wednesday, March 21, the first day of spring, with Swarthmore set for the following Friday. If spring arrives on time for a change, they may actually get to play those games.

Tougher Task for Lacrosse. Improvement is always tougher for the Princeton lacrosse team, which plays one of the most difficult schedules of any team in the country.

A year ago, the Tigers squeezed out a winning record, 7-6, but were only 3-3 in the Ivy League. With games against Johns Hopkins, Navy, and league champions Cornell and Penn, this year will be no different.

The Orange and Black lost three of its top scorers from last season, Gerry Ronon, who led the team with 60 points, and midfielders Bob Flippin and Mike Wieczorek. Sophomore attackman Charlie Stillwell, who tallied 44 points, returns.

He is the only holdover on attack, the rest have all graduated. David Chang, who registered 18 points and Paul Faber will be back at midfield. All three goalies will also be back. Junior Otey Marshall, who saw the most playing time will be pushed by a pair of sophomores, Tim Krongard and Chris Corcoran.

the third period on goals by Kelly O'Dell and Syrena Carlbom, but the Huskies tallied three straight goals to take a 4-2 victory.

There is no love lost between these two teams, and at times the game resembled a men's contest, with several penalties handed out on both sides. A total of 20 were called.

The contest was finally declared over with 12 seconds remaining, when a stick-swinging melee involving O'Dell and the Northeastern goalie broke out. The goalie was subsequently disqualified, and O'Dell received two five-minute penalties for fighting.

It was a disappointing end to an otherwise fine season for Coach Bill Quackenbush's team, which finished, 12-6. He loses both O'Dell and Carlbom, who will graduate in June, but a good nucleus of players will be back to make the Tigers very competitive in the league next year.

Shawn Forrester of Mount St. Joseph's School in Maryland.

In winning four bouts — two by major decsions — and losing twice at Lehigh, Lipani finished his senior year at Hun with a 26-4 record. As a junior he was 25-3-1 — "which is pretty good," commented Hun coach Dave Faus who accompanied Lipani and sophomore 138 pounder Rob Cobun to the meet.

"Obviously, we both were hoping for a little bit better performance," said Faus. "Todd was not satisfied. You always have aspirations of doing better but it was good experience for him."

In his second match, Lipani lost to the number one high school and private school wrestler from Maryland, who then went on to advance to the finals. "It put him in the losers' bracket right away," commented Faus.

"It's a tough tournament," continued Faus, who described it as the largest of its kind in the nation. Ninety-four schools participated and there were 50 some wrestlers in Lipani's division. This division, Faus said, along with 142 and 148, were the strongest in the tournament.

"It was a nice way to end his high school career," concluded Faus. Cobun, he reported, was eliminated in the first round, losing an overtime, one-point decision to an opponent from Valley Forge Military Academy.

Another area wrestler, Sal Profaci of Peddie School finished fourth at Lehigh in the 115-pound class, ending with a 27-2 record. He had entered the tournament with a 24-0 mark.

Fund Raising

warmly of the 20 volunteers working on the Just Desserts. Mrs. Gund talks with feeling about her "close friends" and "fantastic board members" who do so much.

"It's an on-going chore," says Mrs. Wilson, describing fund-raising for McCarter. "Since the theatre's earned income is only 66 percent of its total budget, we raise funds on a full-time basis."

The AAMH Fantasy Auction, the big one coming along after Just Desserts, uses about 150 volunteers, not counting those who line up such dreams-come-true as lunch with actress Joanne Woodward or lunch with a Penthouse Pet of the Month.

"Queen" Brooke Shields and "King" Art Buchwald will be hosts to those who pay $100 each for a Round Table Feast at Green Acres Country Club after the auctions.

Sheila Albert, who has worked with many Princeton University students in her job as Director of Development for AAMH, knew somebody who knew Brooke. At Ms. Albert's request, he asked if Brooke would contribute to the auction.

"After she agreed," Ms. Albert says, "I telephoned her mother and told her the most significant contribution would be if she actually came in person.

A high bidder will win a professional photograph of himself — one assumes "him" — with Brooke.

Art Buchwald's Idea. The Fantasy Auction grew from the summer friendship of columnist Art Buchwald with Sheldon and Lucy Hackney, long-time supporters of AAMH.

"Mrs. Hackney wanted a really significant fund-raiser," Ms. Albert recalls, "and somebody said 'See if Buchwald will come.' She did, and he did, and it was he who suggested a Fantasy Auction, the kind of thing they do on the Vineyard every summer, also for mental health problems and related disabilities.

The idea is to provide things people couldn't get on their own — like 60 minutes with Mike Wallace, or the overnight stay in the Czechoslovakia castle of Ambassador and Mrs. Leurs — Wendy Leurs worked on our auction last year.

"And it's been our fantasy, too, because we now realize significantly more than 20 percent of our budget from this event."

AAMH asks underwriters for contributions so that all the money raised can be free for AAMH programs. FMC has underwritten the auction catalogue — worth about $8-10,000, in Ms. Albert's estimate — and Squibb the printing of invitations for a similar amount, Educational Testing Service gives its Conant Hall facilities.

Eight caterers are doing the cocktail party for nothing. FMC staff are bartenders — and Ms. Albert has grateful praise for Ronald Wehner, FMC's director of personnel.

Bohren Moving and Storage owner Ted Frohlich — "a gem!" — is a spotter at the auction and his firm handles all the auction's moving and storage.

You may bid on a game of tennis with Jan Leschly on his private court. Leschly is a ranked tennis player and president of American Squibb.

It's important for AAMH to have these warm corporate relationships because the organization wants corporations to hire AAMH clients. And they do.

Last year, the auction made $70,000 net and everyone expects it do to better this year.

If you go, you can spend as little as $15 for the cocktails and auction with Art and Brooke, moving on to dinner if you've paid the $100.

In a town without much evening entertainment, these events are welcomed and with the tax deductible tag, doubly so. But the pleasure of spending money isn't enough, just by itself.

There is imagination here and the promise of an evening of fun. Parents, for example, had been drained by the need to raise money for the high school's choir and orchestra trip to Vienna this summer. But the wit of Inn Cabaret jammed the Prince William Room for two shows and the high school cleared $13,500.

One worker says "I won't go unless I believe in the cause — after all, you can't go to everything."

But the question arises — why not? It's only $100.

Institute Drops Plans to Develop Quaker Rd. Land

The Institute for Advanced Study has abandoned plans to develop its farm land along Quaker Road.

In a letter to the Friends of Princeton Open Space, dated March 5, Institute Director Harry Woolf writes: "we have decided to discontinue our development efforts ... The Institute for Advanced Study is not interested in selling its land or its development rights."

The decision ends 11 months of effort on the part of the re-activated "Friends" and represents, in the words of Friends president Rosemary Blair, "an outpouring of sentiment from so many in the community."

Both the Institute and the Friends emphasized the low-key, harmonious nature of the private discussions between the two groups.

"There was never a point when we felt we had a gun to our head," said Allen Rowe, associate director of the Institute. "We were never so polarized we couldn't talk. They are very fine people."

In his letter to the Friends, Dr. Woolf referred to "our common concern for the quality of environment has certainly been established and we have dealt with each other with candor and openness and considerable friendliness."

"Openness and flexibility was shown by all who took part in the negotiations," Mrs. Blair said.

"We had no inkling of this decision," she added.

In mid-February, the Friends had given the Institute an appraisal of development rights for its lands, expecting the appraisal to be considered by Institute trustees in April. The appraisal figure was never made public. Mr. Rowe said this week that the deci-

Tigers Win 65-56; Head for Salt Lake

Kevin Mullin had the game of his life Tuesday night in the Palestra, to lead Princeton to a 65-56 victory over San Diego in a NCAA preliminary round.

Mullin's 38 points, 22 in the first half, earned the Tigers a trip to Salt Lake City, Utah, where they will meet the University of Nevada at Las Vegas Thursday night. The Running Rebels are ranked among the nation's top 10 teams.

Mullin's ability to drive inside against the Toreros was the determining factor in the contest. He hit seven of nine shots in the first half, and eight of 10 from the foul line, converting on three of four three-point plays.

The Orange and Black fell behind only once in the contest, 3-2, but quickly pulled away to a

Ivan, Murray Win Suit Against School Board

Physical education teachers Lawrence Ivan and Thomas Murray were improperly transferred in 1981 from Princeton High School to other schools and are to be re-instated, the Appellate Division of Superior Court ruled on Monday.

The ruling reversed a finding by Saul Cooperman, state Commissioner of Education — later confirmed by the State Board of Education — that the transfer was in order.

Mr. Ivan and Mr. Murray, who had taught for several years at Princeton High School, were transferred to Littlebrook and the Middle School respectively. With the closing of Littlebrook, Mr. Ivan was transferred to Community Park; Mr. Murray is still at the Middle School.

Council Fast Running Out of Time to Hear Appeals against Collins' Plans for Square

A calendar may not be as insistent as a ticking clock but it has its own tyranny. Borough Council, looking ahead to the four appeals it must hear from Planning Board approval of Collins' plans for Palmer Square, began to be concerned about that tyranny this week.

Deadline for a decision on all four is Tuesday, April 10, a scant four weeks away. Not one appeal has been heard. No dates have even been set for the hearings.

The problem has been with obtaining transcripts of Planning Board hearings for Council members to read and digest. Council has been waiting for Shorthand Reporting Co. of Cranford, which has said it will deliver the transcripts to Borough Hall this Wednesday. The company has had since January 6 to prepare them. That was the date of publication of the Planning Board decision that is being appealed. By law, the final decision date must be 95 days from publication date — April 10.

It is expected that Council will set dates at this Tuesday's meeting, in anticipation of the transcripts' arrival. Borough attorney Walter Bliss said on Tuesday that he hopes Council will take that action.

Also, under Borough law, ten-day notice of the appeal hearing dates must be given, which pulls the time line even tighter.

Once the transcripts arrive, Mr. Bliss thinks Council may have to meet every night to hear all four appeals before April 10.

If decisions are not reached by that date, the Planning Board's approval is automatically affirmed and Collins wins.

Under the Borough's land-use law, Collins could grant an extension, but any extension is solely up to Collins.

Barbara Hill to Resign From Council in April

Barbara Hill will resign from Borough Council "sometime in late April" she revealed this week, as soon as final closing is completed on the sale of the Hills' house at 37 Hawthorne, and R. William Potter says he is doing all he can to get her off Council as soon as possible.

"Of course, I'd like to get her off Council," he stated. Mr. Potter's case against Collins Development is due to be heard by Council on appeal from the Planning Board. Ms. Hill has voted for Collins in the past and is expected to again — provided she is still on Council when the four Collins appeals are heard.

Mr. Potter says Ms. Hill "is under the mistaken assumption that she is still a resident of the Borough, but the law is extremely clear that this is not the case.

"I've talked with several real-estate agents and they confirm that there is a contract of sale for the Hills'

9-3 lead on baskets Mullin and John Smyth.

In a fast-paced first half, that saw both Howie Levy and Billy Ryan pick up three personals, Princeton managed to maintain leads of four to seven points most of the way.

There were some anxious moments when freshman Joe Scott replaced Ryan after his third personal, and SD chopped an eight-point advantage in half, but Mullin could not be stopped. He scored 15 of Princeton's last 17 before the half. His last two foul shots gave Princeton a 33-24 lead at the intermission, its biggest margin to that point.

Levy, too, had to sit down when he drew his third foul, but freshman Alan Williams filled in competently. Both Ryan and Levy returned at the start of the second half, and the Tigers quickly pulled away to a 13-point lead.

They couldn't quite put the contest on ice, however. The Toreros 6-6 senior Mike Whitmarsh, who finished with 17, and guard John Prunty, who canned long bombs from outside, kept the losers within striking distance. A spate of Princeton turnovers, enabled San Diego to close within five, 47-42 with 4:50 to go.

At that point, Princeton started to run the remaining time off the clock, forcing the West Coast team to foul repeatedly. Mullin, Levy, Carter and Ryan were almost flawless in their foul shooting, as the Tigers pulled slowly away.

Overall, Mullin shot a torrid 80 percent from the field, 12 of 15, and added 14 of 16 from the line. John Smyth had one of his better games, scoring 13 points, and playing superbly on defense. Princeton's zone cut off the Toreros inside game, and 6-11 center Scott Thompson was never a factor.

Other scoring came from Levy, six points, Isaac Carter, four, Ryan, two, and Scott, two. But it was clearly Mullin's night. Only three players, Bill Bradley, Geoff Petrie and Brian Taylor have ever scored more points in a game. Bradley had 58, Petrie and Taylor both tallied 39.

For Pete Carril, it was icing on the cake, after winning the Ivy title. He now must prepare his players to face the free-wheeling UNLV team (27-5), with the victor advancing to face the University of Texas at El Paso (27-3) over the weekend. The season may end Thursday night, but what a season it has been.

Institute Land

sion to forego development was made by the executive committee of the trustees in a meeting at the end of February.

For the Central Jersey group of the Sierra Club, Jose Garcia said the group is "extremely happy" over the Institute's decision.

"The community sent a very strong message to the Institute through our petition drive and letters, and the Institute should be commended for listening to this message," Mr. Garcia said.

———

"Although it doesn't indicate a long-term commitment to preservation of the land, we're sure the reponse of the community on this issue will not be forgotten."

Mr. Rowe himself pointed out that aspect of the decision.

———

"Some people would like to see this decision legally nailed down," he commented, "and it's true another Institute board or administration could decide to do something different."

Mr. Garcia, who lives in West Windsor, said the Sierra Club still believes the rezoning of Institute lands was a mistake. He hopes the Township will "correct it."

———

Meanwhile, what will the Institute do for money? It was need for money that brought on development ideas in the first place.

"We'll redouble our efforts," Mr. Rowe said wryly.

There is a Friends of the Institute, but "it doesn't hold the promise for what we need," he continued. "It's hard to give a dollar amount: you can always live with less than you think you need. A lot depends on what happens to the stock market. I'd say $15 to $25 million is a target figure."

There is a "meanwhile" for the Friends of Princeton Open Space, also. The group will now move ahead with its Greenway plans and will meet with the Institute on that subject later this week.

The proposed Greenway would run along the route of the Delaware and Raritan Canal between Trenton and New Brunswick. It comprises lands of the Institute and Princeton University, the commercial campuses of such companies as Lenox, local parks like Turning Basin, and so on.

The Friends will work with developers to encourage easements along stream corridors and the canal hoping to develop a series of open space areas along the canal.

A task force includes the Trust for Public Land, the Middlesex-Somerset-Mercer Regional Study Council, the Stony Brook-Millstone Watersheds Association and the Canal Commission. James Sayen, retiring from the Canal Commission, will be head of the task force.

Members of the Friends of Princeton Open Space who negotiated with the Institute include Mrs. Blair, Mr. Sayen, Lawrence Norris Kerr, William Starr and Margaret Meiss.

ASK NO-CONNECTION

Did Planning Board Know? A request to put back a cancelled no-connection sewer zone was scheduled for presentation to Borough Council Tuesday night by the Joint Borough-Township Environmental Commission. A similar request has been rejected by Township Committee.

Peggy McNeill, head of the Commission, said this week that a perusal of old Sewer Operating Committee minutes showed that on September 20, 1982, the SOC unanimously passed a motion recording "strenuous objections" to any further approval of developments by the Planning Board until the "Utilities" element of the Master Plan has been adopted. The "Utilities" part of the Master Plan — still not adopted — would deal with sewers. The motion had been made by Richard Schoch, Township Committee representative on the SOC.

However, according to Mrs. McNeill there is no evidence in Planning Board records that the board ever received word of the SOC's action or that it was ever discussed by the Planning Board.

"If we'd known what the SOC had done," she said, "the Environmental Commission would have backed them up."

———

In a related matter, Mrs. McNeill reported that minutes of July 20, 1983, when the SOC voted to wipe out the no-connection sewer zone, report that developer Benedict Yedlin was "pleased" (the word used in the minutes, although not necessarily Mr. Yedlin's own word) when the no-connection zone was eliminated.

Mr. Yedlin said this week that in July he will complete formal agreements to buy from Princeton University the Foulet property on Cherry Hill Road, a tract which lies in the former no-connection zone. His plans for 37 clustered lots on that property will go before the Environmental Design Review Committee May 9 and later to the Planning Board.

Because of this purchase agreement, Mrs. McNeill said that in her view, Princeton University's two representatives on the SOC — Michael McKay and George Glahn — should have abstained in the vote to eliminate the no-connection zone.

Also this Tuesday, Council is scheduled to announce that it will defer payment of the March installment on underbilling charges owed to the Stony Brook Regional Sewerage Authority.

Before paying, Council wants to discuss the report from the Authority's independent consultant and sewerage meter investigations by Borough engineer George Olexa, Township engineer Robert Kiser and Borough attorney Walter Bliss. There will be no financial penalty for late payment, Council members say.

———

Also on Tuesday, Council was scheduled to decide whether to accept the Township's invitation to pay half the cost of dredging the canal in the Township's Turning Basin Park. Cost would be $53,000 — $26,500 each for Borough and Township. Other dredging money would come from state Green Acres funds.

PLANS BEFORE BOARDS

Russell, Salzman, Peyton. Plans for development of the Russell estate off Edgerstoune Road are on the agenda of the Environmental Design Review Committee this Wednesday. They are scheduled to be heard about 8 p.m. in the Valley Road building.

Last week, the Planning Board had to postpone scheduled hearings on the Montadale Drive subdivision of Albert Salzman for lack of a quorum. Two of the board's members — Peter Bearse and Michael Floyd — were absent, although according to Pearl Pillon, each one had said he would be present. Board member Richard Schoch is ineligible to participate because he is a Salzman neighbor.

Salzman hearings have been re-scheduled for Tuesday, April 3. The developer is Russell Baltzer.

A concept for developing the Peyton property on Pretty Brook Road was also presented to the board last Tuesday. The buyer and developer plans to live in the main house on the 129-acre plot and carve 24 lots out of the property.

Ceremony Sunday at Cleveland Grave

Maj. Gen Thomas W. Kelly, commanding general, U.S. Army Training Center at Fort Dix, will lead a contingent of military and civilian officials in a commemorative wreath-laying ceremony Sunday at the gravesite of former President Grover Cleveland.

The public is invited to attend the ceremony in the Princeton Cemetery, which will begin at 3 p.m.

An honor guard and color detail will be provided by Fort Dix, which is the nearest major military installation to the gravesite. By tradition, the gravesites of all former U.S. Presidents are visited annually by local military commanders as representatives of the incumbent President. Civilian officials who are expected to attend are Township Mayor Winthrop S. Pike and Borough Mayor Barbara B. Sigmund.

Sunday is the 147th anniversary of the birth of Grover Cleveland, a native of Caldwell, N.J., who became the nation's 22nd and 24th President. He was first elected in 1884 after gaining national fame as a corruption fighter as Mayor of Buffalo, N.Y., and New York State Governor. Defeated in 1888, he ran again in 1892 and defeated the incumbent Republican, Benjamin Harrison.

After retiring from office in 1896, President Cleveland moved to Princeton where he served as a lecturer and trustee at the University. He purchased the stately mansion at 15 Hodge Road built by Commodore Robert F. Stockton for his daughter Caroline and her husband, William A. Dod. He named the property "Westlands" in honor of his friend, Andrew Fleming West, proponent and later Dean of the Graduate College.

an additional $15,000 in the legal account that may be needed in regard to the proposed Calton Homes development and Mt. Laurel requirements for low and moderate income housing. The recent increase in Township Committee salaries; adjustments in Police Department salaries to reflect three new probationary patrolmen and two new desk officers, and a request from the Joint Commission on Aging for $500 to start a van service for the elderly make up the rest of the changes, along with a change in federal revenue sharing funds.

According to Township Administrator James Pascale, the amendments made for juggling of amounts and accounts within the budget. They do not affect the total dollar amount, $7.4 million, up 18 percent from last year, nor the amount to be raised by taxation, which is $2.4 million. The budget amendments will not affect the municipal tax rate, $ 377 per $100 of assessed valuation, up almost 11 percent from last year.

Committee held the public hearing on the 1984 budget and introduced the ordinance amending the budget at its regular meeting last Monday night. The public hearing on the budget amendments will be held on Monday, March 26, and the amended budget will be adopted then as well.

Committeewoman Gail W. Firestone voted against introduction of the budget amendments, explaining that she felt increases in Township Committee salaries should not be tied to staff increases. "That's like rewarding ourselves for spending money," Mrs. Firestone said. She proposed that Committee receive a raise in years the budget is below the previous budget and be docked when it goes above. Hers was the lone nay to the budget amendments introduction.

In other business, Committee agreed to hear an appeal by Dr. Paul E. Van Horn from a Planning Board decision requiring him to dedicate five feet of his office building property at 211 North Harrison Street for future widening of Harrison Street to conform to the Master Plan. Committee agreed it would consider an appeal only in relation to the dedication of the roadway. No date was set for the hearing.

Committee also introduced an ordinance prohibiting smoking at public meetings in the Township's Valley Road meeting rooms and in Township Hall above the Police Station. The public hearing for the measure will be on Monday, April 2.

SUPPORT IS GIVEN

To Sewerage Authority. "The role of incessant sewer-system whip is not altogether a joy..." says Dwight O. North in a statement designed to show "why and how" charges of "intolerable inefficiency" leveled against the Stony Brook Regional Sewerage Authority are "ill-formulated, untrue and thoroughly misleading."

In his statement, Mr. North, a Random Road resident who has made almost a career of sewer investigation, says it is an "undocumented claim" that Borough residents are paying 11 times as much to the Authority as they used to pay the old Princeton system. The old sewer plant, Mr. North says, "flagrantly, fragrantly violated effluent-control law and dumped vast amounts of untreated sewage into the Millstone River."

As to charges that SBRSA unit charges for treating Princeton sewage have tripled, Mr. North presents tables with figures obtained from the SBRSA and Ewing Lawrence Sewerage Authority to show that total unit costs and operating-maintenance costs for Princeton have dropped by a factor of about 3/4.

He says it is "patently invidious" to compare operating and maintenance costs of ELSA with the total costs of the SBRSA. Those costs are declining steadily at the SBRSA, he says, and rising at ELSA where sewage-treatment improvements have not yet been completed.

The SBRSA, Mr. North says, collects figures from about a dozen other sewage treatment plants in New Jersey and after looking over these statistics, Mr. North has concluded that no other plant doing the "advanced secondary" treatment of sewage that is done by the SBRSA, "puts SBRSA in a shadow."

dable Housing" study committee, co-chair John Huntoon said this week. Newcomers bring the committee to a membership of 46.

New members are Letitia Ufford, Nancy Browder, Sheila Cook, Eugene McPartland, Evelyn Geddes, Gary Green, the Rev. Jean Smith and two graduate students at Princeton University. There will also be a representative later from St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church, Mr. Huntoon said.

Mr. McPartland, a vice-president of Princeton University, handles physical planning for the University. Mr. Green is vice-president of Collins Development. Both Mrs. Browder and Mrs. Cook are Princeton landlords. Mrs. Ufford is a member of Princeton Community Housing, Inc., the non-profit organization responsible for lower-cost housing in Princeton.

MORE HOUSING?

Report to be Considered. The threat of an imminent law suit hangs over the Planning Board discussions of a housing report that will begin this Thursday at 7:30 in the Valley Road building.

Another hearing has already been scheduled for next Wednesday, March 21 (same time, place) and there will be a total of about five public sessions, dates to be announced, extending to the end of April.

But Calton Homes, Inc., has announced that it will sue the Township unless Committee introduces by March 22 the kind of housing and zoning ordinances Calton wants. The firm is proposing 1,280 homes on the 128-acre tract between Mercer and Stockton Street owned by Mrs. Ferdinand White and known as Hunt Farm. Twenty percent of the units would be lower-cost housing.

With approximately five hearings going to April 30, clearly the deadline of March 22 cannot be met. Township Mayor Winthrop S. Pike this week was philosophical.

"These folks must realize the Planning Board can't always move as fast as some people would like and still give matters their full consideration," the mayor said. "And if the board can't move fast enough to satisfy them — well, that's that."

The report, by Alan Mallach and John R. Nolon of the Center for Community Development and Preservation of Tarrytown, New York, was presented last Wednesday to the housing sub-committee of the Planning Board.

It suggests an "Affordable Housing District," comprising almost the entire Borough and Township except for limited growth areas and institutional sites. Low-cost housing could be provided anywhere in this district as a Conditional Use, thereby dispersing lower-cost housing throughout the community.

The report also proposes a Housing Trust to provide financial help that would induce property-owners to build lower-cost units. A density bonus, allowing developers greater density if they give a percentage of the sale price to an Affordable Housing Fund.

Copies of the report are available in the Planning Board office, Valley Road Building, at ten cents a sheet. The report may also be read there.

After the public hearings, the Planning Board will adopt the appropriate amendments to the Master Plan.

LAW OFFICE LOOTED

Of Four Electric Typewriters. Four IBM Selectric typewriters with an estimated value of $4,000 were stolen last week from a second-floor law office in the One Palmer Square building. The office was entered overnight, police said, by an intruder who broke out a glass door to the office.

Another IBM Selectric was stolen overnight last week from a Henry Avenue home which is owned by the Princeton Medical Center and used as an office. A security guard found a door had been forced open at 1:20 a.m. Police report that a second door to another office was forced open but nothing was taken.

At approximately the same time and same area, police, while investigating the above entry, discovered that one of the doctors' suites in the Medical Arts Building on Witherspoon Street had been broken into and lightly ransacked. Nothing appeared to have been taken, however. Ptl. James Vandermark investigated both entries.

In one of three entries last week on the Princeton University campus, more than a dozen pieces of jewelry was stolen between noon and 4:30 last Wednesday from a student's room in Foulke Hall.

Items of known value taken totalled $466.30 and were removed from the top of a dresser. There were no signs of forced entry although the victim told police the room had been locked.

An AM-FM radio cassette player valued at $160 was taken last week from an unlocked room in Lockhart Hall, and some uncut luncheon meat worth $65 was stolen from the kitchen of the Terrace Club off Washington Road between 8:30 and 10:40 Monday night. Police said they are waiting for an itemized list of what was taken.

To enter the club, the intruder removed a piece of cardboard covering a broken window and then pushed aside four wooden slats to reach in and unlock a door.

STORE WINDOWS TARGET

Of Vandals. Expensive, quarter-inch plate glass windows in Nassau Street food shops were used as targets last week by someone shooting a BB-type projectile.

Police first received a report of a BB or pellet hole in a four by five foot front window in a sandwich shop in the 200 block of Nassau Street. The same day, a five-foot square window in an ice cream parlor was the target, and later -- all the incidents occurred on the same day -- the sandwich shop called police at 3:45 p.m. to report another window, measuring four by three-feet, had been shot by a pellet.

Capt. John J. Bellow reported that police checked the areas without success. They were unable to recover any of the projectiles, which, he said, probably came from someone firing from a passing car.

An employee of the Princeton Medical Center told Township police that two tires on his 1982 Fiat were punctured while it was parked between 11 Thursday night and 6:15 the next morning in the hospital's parking garage.

A Princeton University employee reported that the entire right side door window of his 1973 sedan was broken out while it was parked for four hours Monday afternoon in a university lot on College Road.

Nothing was taken from the car and police say they don't know how the window was broken because no object was recovered.

FIRE ON PROSPECT AVE.

Electric Blanket Blamed. A folded electric blanket which was left on is being blamed for a fire last week in a home at 720 Prospect Avenue. A general alarm was sounded at 1:35.

All of the occupants escaped injury, police said, but a dachshund, which had suffered smoke inhalation and was almost unconscious, had to be rescued by a fireman. Police report damage to the bedroom where the fire originated and extensive smoke and water damage.

BUS, CAR MEET HEAD ON

On Route 206. A Mercer Metro bus and a 1980 sedan collided head on Monday night on Route 206 south near Edgerstoune Road.

The driver of the car, which was a total loss, was pinned inside and had to be removed by the Princeton Rescue Squad with the aid of a Jaws Of Life machine. The victim, 18-year old Joseph T. Delorefice of Upper Darby, Pa., was taken by the First Aid Squad to Princeton Medical Center where he was admitted for treatment of a broken leg and lacerations of the face.

The driver of the bus, Robert A. Brooks, 33, of Trenton, and the eight to ten passengers aboard were not injured.

Ptl. Peter Savalli, who is investigating the accident, reported that it had not yet been determined what caused the two vehicles to meet in the same lane. The roads were clear, he said, at the time of the mishap -- 10:33 p.m. No summonses have been issued, pending the completion of his investigation.

Traffic Signal Leveled. An 18-wheel tractor-trailer turning right from Stockton Street onto Elm Road Friday afternoon, uprooted and knocked down a traffic light when it turned too sharply and the trailer caught the light standard pole.

Ptl. Ronald Wohlschlegel charged the driver, Charles H. Powers, 48, of North Lima, Ohio, with careless driving and operating while his license is suspended.

EQUIPMENT STOLEN

From Palmer Stadium. Pieces of electronic equipment worth approximately $7,900 were reported stolen last week from Palmer Stadium.

Included in items taken from a locked room near the end of the press box were an oscilliscope valued at $5,700 and a $2,100 amplifier. The equipment is the property of New Jersey Bell who reported the theft to police last week. Police said the theft took place sometime between February 18-27.

Entry to the room was gained by forcing a door, police said. Ptl. William Potts investigated.

Two Apple computers valued at $2,000 each and a $600 printer have been stolen from a room in the Activity Center on the Hun School campus. They were taken sometime during a five-day period last week, police said. There was no forced entry.

Stolen last week from a locked wooden cabinet in a cellar of a home under construction on Mountain Avenue were items valued at approximately $450. Taken, police said, were two masonary drills, two thermostats, two aquastat controllers and six gallons of foam sealant. Det. David Wilbur investigated.

A red steel tool box containing assorted building tools was stolen last week from the floor of a pickup truck cab while the truck was parked from 1:30 to 2 p.m.on Maclean Street.

Police identified the owner as a resident of Hamilton Township. The door on the passenger's side of the cab was unlocked, police said.

THEFT SUSPECT CAUGHT

Luther D. McKellar, 25, of Lytle Street, was later charged by Sgt. Gerald Patterson with burglary and two counts of theft. He was later released after being issued a complaint summons calling for his appearance March 21 in Borough Court.

McKellar was charged with allegedly stealing a micro cassette recorded valued at $80, a 35 mm camera valued at $50 and $4.50 from a desk from an unlocked and unattended students' room. He had been observed, police said, by another student who was a friend of the victims.

After university security had been supplied with a description of the suspect, Proctor James Collins observed a person fitting the description on University Place near Alexander. He placed the suspect in custody and notified security who called Borough police.

While searching the suspect for weapons, Sgt. Patterson found a hard object in one of his pockets which turned out to be the micro recorder.

McKellar was arrested and taken to police headquarters. Police contacted the witness who came to headquaters to identify the suspect.

FILET SHOPLIFTED

Trenton Pair Charged. Two Trenton residents have been charged with shoplifting a 6.45 pound filet mignon valued at $29.97 from a Nassau Street market.

They are Robert R. Rossi, 34, and Judy A. Kaiser, 22. The two were observed Monday by a store security officer. According to police, Ms. Kaiser was observed by the security officer near the meat counter holding a grocery basket. She then walked to a aisle in the interior of the store where she was joined by Rossi who allegedly took the filet from the basket and placed it in his pants, concealing it with his green jacket.

At the checkout register, Rossi was approached by the security officer who questioned him about the filet in his pants. Both suspects were taken to police headquarters, issued a complaint summons and released, pending their appearance April 4 in court.

Theft By Deception. A Hamilton Square teenager, Bruce S. Mendel, 19, has been charged by Borough police with attempted theft by deception, attempted unlawful use of a credit card and falsifying records. Mendel, who was arrested Friday evening in a 20 Nassau Street store, was later released in $100 cash bail. He is scheduled to appear in Borough court March 21.

As recounted by Captain John J. Bellow, Mendel had ordered from store by telephone a stereo receiver valued at $479 and a $466 digital disc player. He gave a valid number from a Visa credit card and told the store that he would send a friend over to pick up the merchandise.

However, when the actual owner of the card was called by the store, he revealed that he had made no such purchase nor had he authorized anyone to make a transaction in his behalf.

After police were notified, Det. James Agains stationed himself in the store and waited until the suspect appeared. When Mendel signed a fictitous name to the credit card slip and attempted to retrieve the items, he was arrested.

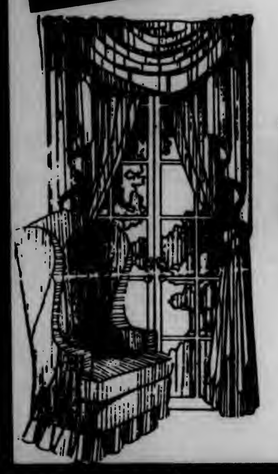
Capt. Bellow stated that the card owner told them he did not know how his number had been obtained by someone else.

4 JUVENILES APPREHENDED

After Winant Rd. Break-In. Following an hour's pursuit in the snow by an encircling ring of Township and Borough police officers, four juveniles were apprehended Friday afternoon and all charged with the breaking and entering of a Winant Road home.

The oldest, Township Chief Anthony Pinelli reported, is 15. Two are 14 and one is 12. All are residents of Trenton. Several have had numerous previous contacts with police.

The 15-year-old had recently been released from the Skillman Training School for Boys, Chief Pinelli reported. He has a previous record of approximately 15 break-ins. He was sent to the Mercer County Youth House while the other three juveniles were released to their parents, awaiting further action by a Mercer County Juvenile Court.



Township police were first alerted when a alarm in the Winant Road sounded at 2:30. When Ptl. James Vandermark arrived, he discovered that a rear window had been pried open. There were footprints in the snow leading away from the house. The officer spoke with a neighbor who confirmed seeing youths running from the home.

Police said there were two sets of tracks at first, then three, then four. They went across Winant Road, across Edgerstoune into the abandoned Russell Estate.

Four to five Township officers were joined by an equal number from the Borough as police encircled the area where the youths were known to be located. "Ptl. Vandermark did a good job of tracking them," said Chief Pinelli.

"It was quite a chore running in the snow. Those kids were young and had a lot of energy. It was a good effort on our part with the assistance of the Borough to apprehend all four."

Fifty minutes after the alarm had sounded the first youth was apprehended. Ten minutes later all three had been captured, one near the Constitution Hill housing development, another near Elm Road and two more near Rosedale. Lt. Samuel Bianco and Ptl. William Potts of the Township each grabbed one of the fleeing suspects while Borough police netted the other two.

The investigation at the break-in site was conducted by Ptl. David Cromwell.

Police said the youths had taken a large pair of wire cutters from a tool shed and cut the wires to the house. They then used the cutters to pry open a window to enter the house, which they ransacked. Police uncovered two bottles of liquor and a gold commemorative coin hidden under the snow near the house.

TIP FROM PASSER-BY

Arrests Follow. Charges of drug and unlawful weapon possession against two out-of-town residents last week were the result of a tip from a passer-by.

A 10:52 in the evening, a passer-by called Borough police to report that two occupants in a brown Volkswagen parked on Tulane Street were using cocaine. Ptl. Mark Stillitano and Ptl. Donald Dawson responded and located the car.

The first thing the officers observed was a pair of karate nun-chuks, a martial arts weapon consisting of two 13-inch wooden clubs connected by a five-inch steel chain. "It's a very dangerous weapon in the hands of an experienced person," commented Capt. John Bellow. A further seach of the car uncovered a brass pipe and some marijuana in the glove compartment.

The occupants, Michael P. Lewis, 25, of Lonaconing, Md. and Bryan K. Wilson, 22, of Morrisville were each charged with possession of less than 25 grams of marijuana, and Lewis with possession of an unlawful weapon. Both were issued summons at police headquarters and then released. They are scheduled to appear in Borough court on next Wednesday.

31 BIRTHS LISTED

Election Board Workers

At the primary election in June and the general election in November, each voting district is managed by four election board workers, two Democratic and two Republican. Both parties would like to hear from those who are interested in serving.

This is a paid position, $50 for each election. A one-evening indoctrination is held in Princeton in the spring and the fall. Applicants need only be registered voters in Mercer County and do not have to live in Princeton Township or Borough.

Those who would like to learn more about being an election board worker for the Democrats should call Ginger Lennon at 924-7242. To work as a Republican, call Tom Poole, 924-2271.

WORKSHOP PLANNED

On Ethical Investing. A workshop on "Socially Responsible Investing" will be held Sunday evening from 7:30 to 10 at Christ Congregation, 48 Walnut Lane.

The worship has been organized by members of the Coalition for Nuclear Disarmament and is designed to provide information to individuals and organizations on how they can invest their funds, taking social and ethical issues, as well as financial returns, into consideration.

Organizers of the workshop emphasize that socially responsible investing is an issue of importance to all types of investors. There will be information useful to people with only a few thousand dollars in investments, as well as information of use to individuals or organizations who deal regularly with large amounts of money.

The workshop costs $5 and interested persons may register at the door. An informational packet on this issue, "Resources for Responsible Investors," has also been prepared by the Coalition office, 40 Witherspoon Street, for $3.00.

For further information on this event, call the Coalition for Nuclear Disarmament, 924-5022.

Prof. Allen Pollack

Timothy Smith, Director of the Interfaith Coalition for Corporate Responsibility (ICCR), will open the evening with a talk on "How to Be a Socially Responsible Shareholder."

A second workshop will be led by Mr. Smith on "Responding to Corporate Involvement in South Africa." A third will focus on "Responding to Corporate Involvement in Weapons Production," and will be led by Rebecca Blank, an economist at Princeton University, and Rachel Findley, acting director of the New Jersey Freeze Voter '84 campaign.

PROFESSOR TO SPEAK

At UJA Appeal. The Princeton United Jewish Appeal's major gifts reception for the 1984 fund raising campaign will be held on Sunday at 3 at the home of Victor and Perrisue Silverstein.

Prof. Allen Pollack, a founder and former national chairman of The American Professors for Peace in the Middle East, will be the guest of honor. Prof. Pollack, who has recently emigrated to Israel, is director of The Institute for Leadership Development, the major seminar center of the Jewish Agency for Israel. For further information, contact Mrs. Silverstein at 924-2141.

The United Jewish Appeal is an organization providing a wide range of health, welfare, rehabilitation, educational, and cultural services to Jews in 30 countries around the world, including Israel. It aids Jewish immigrants settling in Israel and other countries. In addition, UJA helps support area organizations including the Jewish Family Services of the Greater Trenton Area and the Princeton University Hillel Foundation.

The executive board includes Florence Kahn, chairman; Chaim Schreiber, Susan Hollander, and Mark Cohen, vice chairmen; Norman Denard, corresponding secretary; Barbara Litt, financial secretary; and Rubin Schwartzstein, treasurer.

DEADLINE NEAR

For Volunteer Nominations. Outstanding volunteers may still be nominated for the 1984 Robert E. Clancy Award but the deadline is this Friday. The Council of Community Services makes the award and the companion Clancy Youth Award, both to individuals who have served the community through direct volunteer services.

Nomination forms are available at the Council's office in the Valley Road Building, Princeton, or by calling the office at 924-5865 or 799-6033.

Judges will be Richard Gilbert, the Rev. Bernadine McRipley, Sally Piller, John Seiber and Jeanne Silvester.

Both awards will be presented at a luncheon to be held May 10 at the Nassau Club, Princeton, during National Volunteer Week — May 6-12.

All judges have their own records of volunteer service. Mr. Gilbert, treasurer of the Family Service Agency, received the Gerald B. Lambert Community Service Award in 1977. Mrs. Piller is president and crew chief of the Montgomery Township First Aid Squad and is a member of the Montgomery Elder Citizens' Council.

Mr. Seiber has been a member of the Plainsboro Lions Club, the volunteer fire company and has been a trustee of the United Way. Mrs. Silvester has also received the Lambert Service Award and, in addition, the Eden Institute Award and the Council's citation for Distinguished Volunteer Leadership.

The Rev. Ms. McRipley has been president of the League of Women Voters, East Windsor-Hightstown; head of the Princeton Outreach Ministry and has served on the board of the Council of Community Services.

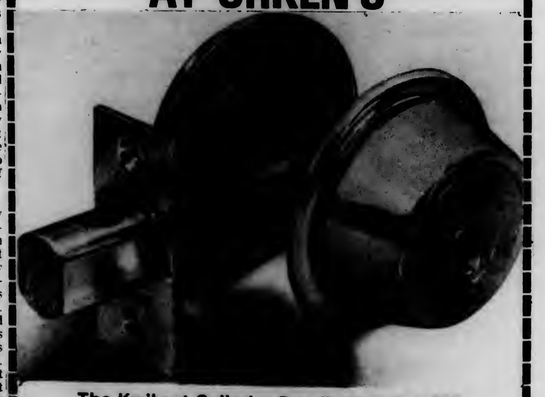
Clarification.

To the Editor of Town Topics:

Kay Bretnall's article on Architects in the March 1 Town Topics was excellent. I only have one problem. I was quoted as saying that Dean McLaughlin advised me "Don't work in Princeton - its a terrible place".



Dean McLaughlin has been a wonderful mentor and very supportive of the profession locally. He was respected and admired by Princeton architects and did more than any other dean in my memory to encourage a strong rapport between the architecture school and those of us who practiced on the other side of Nassau Street.

What I was trying to tell Kay Bretnall was that at graduation, Dean McLaughlin pointed me towards the great architectural firms in New York and wrote many personal letters to the principals in these firms on my behalf. Thanks to him, I received several handsome job offers and indeed spent many years commuting to jobs in the city.

To set the record straight, it is important to emphasize that Dean McLaughlin through his excellent contacts in the profession nationwide, was a great job counselor. He was not opposed to our working in Princeton but thought there were many exciting possibilities elsewhere. My apologies to him and to your readers if what I said came out convoluted.

COMMUNITY PARK SCHOOL

Ken Raybuck's current focus in the C.P. music program for third and fourth graders is theme and variation. He is using Aaron Copeland's "Appalachian Spring" for this part of their on-going study of different forms in music.

The Kindergarten class of Elaine Toscano went to a program at the Trenton Museum called, "A Day in the Life Of An Indian Child". The children were able to both participate and observe as they learned. During follow-up discussions in the classroom it was evident that they understood that the Lenape Indian children did not have schools as we know them. However, they also understood that the Lenape children, by watching and interacting with adults, learned to hunt, fish, gather food and be productive members of their tribe.

Because the K-1 class of Nancy Vandervoort, Marcia Kramer and Sally Rowl has 22 children from different countries in it, they have been involved in a study of families around the world. Parents are visiting the class to share slides, stories and songs from other lands. The art projects will be centered around designing banners and making finger puppets representing other nations. They have gathered a collection of artifacts which are on display in the classroom. Interested community members are welcome to join them in their appreciation of the diversity of the world's people.

Cooperative learning is flourishing at C.P. Doreen Griffin (grade 3) and Sam Ishibashi (grade 4) are piloting a math program called Team-Assisted Individualization (T.A.I.). The program was developed by researchers at The Johns Hopkins University. The structure of this program includes elements of both cooperative learning (in which students work in teams and help one another) and individualized instruction (which allows each student to work at his own pace).

The children in Miss Sharon's and Mrs. Sly's resource room are concentrating on writing. Their latest project is on the solar system. The students chose a planet, researched and wrote a paper, and made illustrations to enhance their work. The next phase of their writing unit will be creative story writing.

RESIDENT IS HONORED

By Lawrence Black Caucus. The recently formed Lawrence Black Caucus took advantage of Black History Month to honor an area resident who has become a national figure in the ecumenical movement and in the cause of human rights and justice.

The Rev. M. William Howard Jr. was the recipient of a number of tributes and testimonials during a three-hour event held in the Lawrence Neighborhood Association building on Eggerts Crossing Road. Mr. Howard was cited, among other things, for having led the ecumenical delegation that accompanied Jesse Jackson to Syria on the successful mission to free the navy pilot being held captive.

The immediate past president of the National Council of Churches, he has been a member of several delegations abroad to promote peace and justice. In 1979 he traveled to Iran to bring Christmas to the U.S. Embassy personnel held hostage in Teheran.

Resolutions paying tribute to him were adopted by the Mercer County Board of Freeholders, the New Jersey State Assembly, and the Lawrence Township Committee and were presented by John Watson of the Assembly, Shirley K. Turner, Freeholder, and Lawrence Township Mayor Gretel Gatterdam. Fred Vereen Jr., president of the Lawrence Black Caucus, presented Mr. Howard with a photograph of himself outside an earlier Lawrence Neighborhood Center where he worked one summer while a student at Princeton Theological Seminary.

The Rev. William P. Deveaux, executive director of the Fund For Theological Education and an ordained pastor in the A.M.E. Church, was the guest speaker for the occasion. Mr. Deveaux is also a Lawrence Township resident. "Poetry in Motion," a dance and poetry work was performed by The Players Company to open the afternoon activities.

STUDENTS IN CAPITOL

For Arms Race Lobby. Over 650 students, faculty and staff representing universities from Virginia to Vermont converged on Washington, D.C. last week to lobby their Congressional Representatives for specific legislation to slow the arms race.

The event, coordinated by a student group from Princeton University, marks a renewed level of activism on the campuses and a new approach for the nuclear disarmament movement.

The "University Lobby to End the Arms Race" started as an idle conversation between students in the Princeton University Alliance to Reverse the Arms Race (PARAR) six months ago. By last Wednesday, the effort had grown to encompass 65 schools in 14 states. Delegations travelled from as far away as Texas to meet with their House Representatives and Senators, and receive training in voter registration and lobbying techniques.

The immediate goal of the day was to line up support for the following legislative initiatives:

- Cancellation or delay in the deployment and testing of the MX Missile.
- The "Quick Freeze" — A new approach to implement the mutual, verifiable freeze on new nuclear weapons systems without long negotiations. Under the "Quick Freeze," the funds for testing and deployment of all new nuclear weapons systems would be cut off if the Soviet Union announces a similar cutoff by a specified date.
- A moratorium on the testing of Anti-Satellite and space-based Anti-Ballistic Missile weapons, renewable on reciprocal Soviet actions.

The New Jersey delegation included approximately 150 students and professors from Rutgers, Princeton, Trenton State and a number of other schools. After meeting with most of the state's 14 Representatives (or their Defense aides) in small groups, the delegation packed into a Senate committee hearing room to meet with Senator Bill Bradley, and an aide to Senator Frank Lautenberg.

THREE CLASSES PLANNED

By Cancer Unit. The Mercer County Unit of the American Cancer Society will offer a three-session course on nutrition, stress and physical fitness in cooperation with the West Windsor-Plainsboro Community Education program. The classes will meet Tuesday evenings beginning March 20.

The first session will be led by Barbara Daume, Health, Physical Education and Recreation Director of the Princeton YWCA, who will discuss how to get the greatest benefit from time spent exercising. Participants can take a computerized health risk assessment test offered by the New Jersey Hospital Association that points out ways that personal lifestyle habits can be adjusted to eliminate or minimize health risks.

Susan Wachtel, a certified nutritional counselor will discuss nurtition at the March 27 class. The new American Cancer Society statement on nutrition will be available for participants. Dale Starcher, director of the Center for Stress Control, is the scheduled speaker on April 3. This seminar will include relaxation experience and a biofeedback demonstration.

To register for the three-session course, call West Windsor-Plainsboro Community Education, 799-0200. For further information call the American Cancer Society, 394-5000.

FUND RAISER PLANNED

At Nursing Home. The Lawrenceville Nursing Home in Lawrence Township will sponsor a Rock-n-Roll Jamboree on Wednesday, March 21. Proceeds from the day of fund raising will benefit the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Association.

The public is invited to come to the Home and involve themselves in the activities, which will begin at 11:30 and end at 7:30. Visitors can purchase goods from a day-long bake sale, participate in a wheelchair obstacle course, or win one of several door prizes to be awarded throughout the day.

house, subject only to financing, and that the closing will be April 1."

"It is nobody's business when our closing date is, but it is not April 1," Ms. Hill retorted, when informed of Mr. Potter's research. "I guarantee to you that the moment I close on that house I will no longer be a member of Borough Council."

Mr. Potter, who is a lawyer, says the law requires public officials to show that they actually live in a location and sleep there. In addition, they must have a "mental intention" to remain there "permanently and indefinitely."

Ms. Hill has recently started working for a yearbook photography company in Manhattan, in charge of its university and college division. She was at one time master of the graduate college at Princeton University. She and her husband, Raymond, who works in New York, have bought a house in Brooklyn — formerly a pumping station, she reports.

Ms Hill Is Not "In." "My understanding is," Mr. Potter says, "that her husband lives in Brooklyn."

He said he has tried repeatedly to reach Ms. Hill at the Hawthorne house but has not found her in. "I asked them at Borough Hall to give me her office telephone in New York, and they did.

"I called her, but she didn't want to meet with me. I urged her to see a lawyer because the law says an office shall be vacant if the office-holder does not have a permanent domicile in the community. Her job, her husband's job and his living place are all in New York.

"Even if she sells the house and rents a place in the Borough, it's not enough unless she is willing to swear she will stay 'permanently and indefinitely.'"

"We talked, but she hung up on me."

Mr. Potter said he plans to hand-deliver a letter to Ms. Hill at this Tuesday's Council meeting, outlining his views. He will hand it to her, he said, "because I'm not sure what address to send it to."

"It's Not Pleasant." He said he thought that "once she cools down and consults a lawyer, she will do the right thing. It is not a pleasant thing, either for me or for her."

She has a lawyer, Ms. Hill replied.

"I respectfully disagree with Mr. Potter's opinion," she stated. "If he or anyone else chooses to challenge my ability to serve legally as a member of Council, I'll be happy to meet them in court."

She said she has been advised that there are only two ways an official can be removed from a governing body: citizen recall or a decision by the courts.

Ms. Hill, who is Police Commissioner of the Borough, was elected to a second term on Council in November, 1982. Her successor, who must be a member of the Democratic party since Ms. Hill herself is a Democrat, will be chosen by Council from a slate of three assembled by the Borough Democratic Municipal Committee.

The Committee, whose chair is Gertrude Dubrovsky, consists of committeemen and committeewomen from each Borough district.

Barbara Hill
Home is Where The Heart Is

Sigmund Won't Speculate. Mayor Barbara Sigmund, also a Democrat, declined to speculate on whom the Committee might choose. Possible candidates are Diana Radcliff, president of the Princeton Community Democratic Organization; Pierina Thayer, who once considered running for Council; Mary Perone, who ran Mayor Sigmund's campaign, or Mrs. Dubrovsky.

Although Democrats decline to discuss the matter for publication, it is thought that Ms. Hill is persona non grata with the party.

However, Mayor Sigmund expressed regret at her departure.

"I'm sorry to lose her," the mayor said, "She is a hard-working and valuable member of Council."

Appeals

As Planning Board hearings went on, week after week, Collins did grant extensions but whether the company would be willing to do so under these circumstances is another matter.

The calendar may also decide just who happens to be sitting on Council when the appeals are heard.

Irv Urken, it was learned this week, will be on vacation from March 20 to March 31. Only last week, Mr. Urken was told that he is eligible to hear the appeals even though his hardware store is a Collins neighbor. It is over the 200-foot line and out of the conflict of interest zone, declared Mr. Bliss.

No sooner does Mr. Urken get back than Richard Macgill departs. He will be away from April 2 to 24.

Mr. Macgill has voted for Collins in the past. Mr. Urken says he will not make up his mind until he has read the material and heard the appeals.

Their absence raises a new voting question. If all six Council members hear the appeals and vote and it is a 3-3 tie, Mayor Sigmund casts the tie-breaking vote.

But if only five are voting, the land use law says, it will require four "yes" votes to affirm the Planning Board's action, reverse it, modify it or send the matter back to the board. And the votes must be by Council members themselves; the mayor does not take part in such a case.

The two teachers charged that they were transferred because they had criticized PHS Principal John Sakala for changing a student's failing gym grade to a "medically excused" grade. The student's father was, at the time, president of the school board.

The Appellate Court found that both Mr. Sakala and Superintendent Paul Houston had displayed "bad faith" in recommending the transfers to the school board.

The school board may ask to have the Appellate Division re-hear the case, or may ask the State Supreme Court to consider it. The matter was scheduled for discussion this Tuesday with board attorney William Hartigan in executive session.

Re-instatement is not all that easy, Dr. Houston said this week.

"Who settles the educational questions?" he asked. "If we re-instate them at the high school, we must move two people out. How do we decide which two? Five people in that department were moved originally, including Larry and Tom. One has now retired. Who gets the short straw?

"Also, the high school physical education program has changed. We now have Project Adventure. Larry and Tom are not trained for Project Adventure, although Tom has had preliminary training. We send all our phys. ed. teachers to Massachusetts for training in that program — safety of the students is involved."

The superintendent said he thought the case should have been sent back to Commissioner Cooperman. It was never formally argued orally, he said, only through briefs.

Regarding the "bad faith" accusation, he said the school board had had two public hearings on the transfers, and it was the board who made the transfers, not he himself nor Mr. Sakala. There has never been any implication that the board acted in bad faith, Dr. Houston said.

The two teachers have not had the formal backing of the PREA, the Princeton teachers' union. The NJEA stated that in its opinion, the board had the right to transfer them.

PEOPLE in the News

Seven Princeton University faculty members are among the 200 engineers and scientists whose selection to receive the first Presidential Young Investigator Awards has been announced by the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy.

The awards were established to address the growing faculty shortages in the highly competitive fields of engineering and science. The problem has become acute in fields such as engineering and computer sciences, but extends throughout scientific and technical disciplines. The awards are intended to help universities attract and retain outstanding young Ph.D.'s who might otherwise be lured to industry.

The seven Princeton assistant professors chosen are Daniel I. Rubenstein of biology; Robert K. Prud'homme of chemical engineering; Hector Garcia-Molina, William E. Hopkins Jr., Antoine Kahn and Stephen A. Lyon of electrical engineering and computer sciences, and Daniel M. Nosenchuck of mechanical and aerospace engineering.

The awards carry a base grant from the National Science Foundation of $25,000 per year for up to five years. NSF will also provide up to $37,500 per year to match contributions from industrial sources, bringing the possible total annual support of an individual's research activities to $100,000.

Sister Joan Magnetti, headmistress of Stuart Country Day School, has been named a director of the National Association of Independent Schools. She will serve as a director for the East until 1988.

Sister Magnetti is immediate past president of the New Jersey Association of Independent Schools.

John R. Martin, professor of art and archaeology at Princeton University, has been elected president of the College Art Association of America. He was elected to head the 8,500-member association of artists, art historians and museum professionals during its 72nd annual business meeting held in Toronto last month. He has previously served as vice-president and secretary.

One of the nation's leading Rubens scholars, Prof. Martin is working on a book, "Rubens and Rembrandt," while on leave from Princeton during the 1984 spring term. A member of the Princeton faculty since 1947, he holds the Marquand Professorship of Art and Archaeology.

Dorothy A. Neceda, daughter of Mrs. Mary E. Neceda of 118 Spruce Street and John Neceda of Houston, Tex., received her Bachelor of Arts in English at the University of California in Los Angeles in December. She is presently living in California.

Robert A. Bartolini of West Windsor Township, head of optical systems at RCA Laboratories, has been elected a Fellow of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers (IEEE).

Fellow is the highest membership grade attainable in the IEEE, conferred upon "persons of outstanding and extraordinary qualifications in their particular fields." Dr. Bartolini was honored "for contributions to the development of optical recording media and systems." He is one of 132 Fellows elected in 1983 from among the IEEE's worldwide membership of over 250,000.

Dr. Bartolini joined RCA Laboratories as a member of the technical staff in 1966 and was appointed to his present position in 1983. He has received three RCA Laboratories Outstanding Achievement Awards for research contributions in developing techniques for plating masters and replicating vinyl holographic tapes; for initiative in the analysis and evaluation of optical recording materials; and for development of a high-density optical information storage system employing an injection laser.

Teresa R. Phillips, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold O. Phillips, 38 Slayback Drive, Princeton Junction, has been inducted into Gamma Beta Phi Society, a national honor and service organization at North Carolina State University where she is a sophomore majoring in food science and biochemistry.

The Eastern Psychological Association will pay tribute to Princeton University psychologist Frank A. Geldard during its annual meeting in Baltimore. A symposium, "Topics in Touch, Temperature and Visual Perception," will be held on Saturday, April 14, to honor Prof. Geldard's 80th birthday and his 56th year as an experimental psychologist.

Papers will be presented by former students and colleagues, and Prof. Geldard will present the results of his recent work on saltatory drift. Carl E. Sherrick, Jr., a lecturer in psychology at Princeton, will chair the symposium. Roger W. Cholewiak of Princeton will also participate.

An authority on the human senses, Prof. Geldard focuses his research on cutaneous communication. The Stuart Professor of Psychology, Emeritus, at Princeton, he joined the faculty in 1962 and, since retiring in 1972, has retained appointment as a senior research psychologist. Until coming to Princeton, he had taught for 34 years at the University of Virginia.

Don M. Betterton, director of financial aid at Princeton University since 1974, has been elected a trustee of the College Board.

Mr. Betterton previously served as assistant and associate director of financial aid. His office is responsible for awarding $16,000,000 in scholarships, loans and jobs to 2,500 undergraduates.

A captain in the U.S. Naval Reserve, Mr. Betterton is a 1960 magna cum laude graduate of Dartmouth College with an A.B. in History, and received his M.A. from Rutgers University.

Edgar J. Denlinger of Wheatstone Court, Princeton Junction, has been named head, signal conversion systems research, in the Television Research Laboratory at RCA Laboratories.

For the past 10 years Dr. Denlinger has been a member of the technical staff of RCA Laboratories, engaged in research on various microwave solid state devices, microwave integrated circuits, low-noise microwave receivers, and, more recently, on television receivers. He was the recipient of an RCA Laboratories Outstanding Achievement Award for development of an all-solid-state aviation weather radar. He has had five U.S. patents issued to him and is the author of more than 30 papers in professional journals.

Laura A. Curtis of 294 Western Way is the author of The Elusive Daniel Defoe published jointly by Vision Press in London and Barnes and Noble in Totowa, N.J.

She notes that Defoe is the only figure of prominence in English literature whose works remain relatively unexplored and whose intentions remain comparatively enigmatic to scholars and critics. Her previous book, The Versatile Defoe, an interdisciplinary study, was published in 1979, also in England and the U.S. It contains excerpts from Defoe's non-fiction writing on politics, economics and sociology, unavailable in 20th century editions.

Ms. Curtis hopes the publication of both books will help rectify the neglect of one of the most prolific writers in English literature. She is a lecturer in the English Department at Princeton University.

Mr. Fairman has produced and directed several short dramatic films, including "Ragnarok," which received the Cine Golden Eagle Award, "Waking" and "A Dilemma."

"Refuge" is his first feature length film. Mr. Fairman's documentary credits include a film for Planned Parenthood and one for the Metropolitan Museum of Art. From 1973-1975 he worked for Aegis Productions making industrial films, and from 1974 to the present he has been editing films for Decade Media, Inc.

Prof. Geddes will also be recognized at the 1984 AIA National Convention, May 5-9, in Phoenix.

Prof. Geddes is the second winner of the award from the Princeton University School of Architecture. In 1976, Professor of Architecture Emeritus Jean Labatut was the first recipient. Earnings Increase 47 Percent. Applied Data Research, Inc. achieved record revenue and earnings levels for the year ended December 31.

Operating revenues were $89,086,000, an increase of 30 percent over revenues of $68,590,000 in 1982. Operating income was $12,031,000 compared to $8,396,000, a 43 percent increase. Net earnings in 1983 totaled $6,984,000 a 47 percent increase over the $4,737,000 for 1982. Finally, net earnings per share amounted to a record $1.45 compared to $1.16 in 1982.

New products, expanded customer support and increased marketing effectiveness, combined with a recovering economy in the United States, contributed to ADR's performance. In 1983, software product orders were $83,128,000, an increase of 55 percent over 1982 orders. Especially strong were database orders which more than doubled over the previous year.

John R. Bennett, chairman and president of ADR, commented that the nature of the business makes quarterly projections difficult; however, ADR expects continued growth in revenue and earnings for 1984, and has targeted revenue increases in excess of 30 percent and earnings in the range of $1.85 per share for the year.

GARDEN WINS TROPHY

At Flower Show. For the third year in a row, an exhibit by Ambleside Gardens, Route 206, Belle Mead, has won the Governor's Trophy for the best garden in the New Jersey Flower Show being held at the National Guard Armory in Morristown. The show will run through March 18.

The exhibit also received the Stanley McIntosh Trophy for best design of a small area and a special award for excellent use of water. This is the first time in the 18 year history of the flower show that one exhibitor has won for three consecutive years.

Designed to show how a small outdoor living area can be created in a natural rock garden setting, the garden includes a flagstone patio, a stone sitting wall with built-in fireplace and a natural pool. A large pine tree shelters the patio at one end while a waterfall splashes beneath a hillside of mountain laurel at the far side. More than 50 different varieties of ferns, perennials, wild flowers, dwarf rhododendron and native plants are used in the display.

A NEW PRESIDENT, A LONG HISTORY: Barbara Stahl, new president of the Princeton Ward Relief Society, assembles decorations with Vickie Clark and Annette Carter to be used at the Society's 172nd anniversary celebration.

TO MARK 142ND YEAR

Of Relief Society. The Princeton Ward Relief Society, a branch of one of the country's oldest women's organizations, will celebrate its 142nd anniversary with a special program Friday.

Organized in 1842, the Relief Society now has a worldwide membership of 1.6 million women, with 80 members in the Princeton area. Most also belong to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon), but all women are invited to participate.

"Getting to Know You" is the theme of the birthday celebration to be held at the chapel on Alexander Road. The program will begin with a specially choreographed production number. Chairman Vickie Clark has planned skits, games and displays to highlight the varied talents of Society members. The cake baking and decorating talents of Marie Caccavella and Ellen Dragert will be sampled.

Justin Raydo, infant son of William and Linda Levy Raydo of Albany, N.Y., died February 19 in Albany, N.Y. He was the grandson of Janet and Saul Levy of Philadelphia, recently of Princeton.

Survivors also include his brother, Ian Raydo; his paternal grandparents, Loretta and William Raydo of Syracuse, N.Y.; three uncles, Jonah Levy and James and John Raydo; and great-grandparents Mrs. Henrietta Frankel of Staten Island and Sidney Levy of Brooklyn.

A graveside service was held in Princeton Cemetery under the direction of the Kimble Funeral Home. Memorial contributions may be made to the March of Dimes.

The Princeton Ward Relief Society is staffed by volunteer workers. Barbara Stahl, Belle Mead, is the newly appointed president. She is assisted by counselors Alice Fraser and Joni Prince.

The Society has an extensive program of volunteer community service, including caring for the sick and elderly, caring for families of the sick and deceased, and welcoming new women into the community.

The Society also holds weekly classes on topics such as religion, child development, social relations, home management and cultural studies.

RELO: World Leader In Relocation

Princeton Crisis Ministry Director, Carol Kerbel, Helps Alleviate the Hunger Problem in Our Area

From her office in the basement of Nassau Presbyterian Church as director of the Princeton office of the Crisis Ministry, Carol Kerbel reflects on the problem of hunger in Princeton.

Around the perimeter of the room, stacked three deep in some places, are grocery bags packed with canned and dried foods and staples. Mrs. Kerbel says she gives out around 30 bags of food a month to Princeton residents who are experiencing difficulty in making ends meet.

"Yes, hunger does exist in Princeton," she says. "If you are talking about the bloated bellies and toothpick limbs of Biafra, no, that's not the situation here, but people are hungry. I know, because they come to my office, and they wouldn't do that except as a last resort.

"It is a complex issue. It's not just that poeple don't have food. They are hungry because they have had to make difficult choices. These are people who don't have money to pay rent and utilities and have enough left at the end of the month to buy food. We encourage them to keep up with the rent and utilities and help them out if they need it on the food."

Since June, some 273 bags of food have been given out in Princeton to feed approximately 398 persons. In addition, 12 food vouchers for $50 worth of groceries have been handed out.

The Crisis Ministry's year-end report also notes that since June, 180 heads of households have been provided with resources, counseling or other services. Half of these are Princeton residents, most of the other half come from Trenton or other Mercer, Middlesex County and Pennsylvania areas. Some 32 are transients.

Supported by Churches. Founded five years ago at Nassau Church, the Crisis Ministry exists to help those who for various reasons "fall through the cracks" and are in immediate need. It works closely with the social service agencies in town and has developed into an interfaith ministry supported by nearly a dozen Princeton congregations. Many of these churches and religious organizations collect non-perishable food items for Trenton and Princeton at their weekly worship services.

In addition, 2,500 lbs. of government surplus flour, cornmeal, rice, honey and dried milk were recently made available--enough to last five months, Mrs. Kerbel says. The Crisis Ministry also has $2,000 from Federal Emergency Food and Shelter funds administered by the Mercer County Board of Social Services which she parcels out in food vouchers or in reserve at a supermarket to be used in $50 increments for food and paper goods. This fund also assists the occasional individual passing through Princeton who is in need of a hot meal at a luncheonette.

An attractive, cheerful brunette with a bright smile and traces of a southern accent, Mrs. Kerbel comes to the Crisis Ministry after serving three years as the coordinator of urban mission for five New Brunswick Episcopal Churches. After a career as a high school English teacher, she entered seminary when the Episcopal Church began ordaining women. Mother of three teenagers and wife of an airline pilot, she has chosen an outreach ministry as a permanent or vocational deacon, rather than ordination as a priest and church ministry.

She began her present job last June when the Crisis Ministry formally opened a Trenton office under the direction of the Rev. Neil Dunnavant, a Presbyterian and her predecessor in the Nassau Church basement office. The Hanover Street Ministry, as the Trenton office is called, grew out of the realization that pressing needs were compelling more and more persons to seek assistance in Princeton. At the invitation of the First Presbyterian Church in Trenton, the ministry is housed adjacent to that church on Hanover Street.

A Complex Issue. "Hunger is such a combination of factors," Mrs. Kerbel notes, "and food is really the symptom of what's going on in society. People have made other hard choices."

She speaks of clients whose situations are so marginal that if something unforseen occurs, such as car trouble with repairs needed in order to get to work, everything is thrown out of balance. The Crisis Ministry steps in with a food voucher to replace funds that go to fix the car. It will also intervene with Public Service or advise on the availability of Pharmaceutical Assistance, as do other agencies in town.

In another instance a woman, a single parent with four children, faced eviction because she was behind in her rent. In addition her job had been cut back. Mrs. Kerbel helped this mother figure out how she could eke out a rent payback schedule and gave her a couple of bags of groceries to feed her teenagers. The satisfaction in intervening in such a situation "feels pastoral," she says.

Mrs. Kerbel says she is working on "the creative 'no' " and "cutting the con." to work more humanely with people. "There are times when 'no' is the right thing to say," she notes.

Support Group. Every Wednesday representatives of each contributing church and other interested persons meet as a Crisis Ministry support group. "It is a terrific time to do some problem solving," Mrs. Kerbel says, and she appreciates the experience of the community that members of the group bring to the sessions. She feels that Princeton is rare in its sense of responsibility toward people who are in need and that Princeton has a lot to give--and not only in terms of dollars.

She points to the Trenton Soup Kitchen which has been a "learning environment" for those Princeton church members who came to work ladling soup and washing dishes and in the process learned much about why people are hungry and why hunger is such a combination of factors.

There is also an eight-week pilot tutoring program involving Princeton Day School students and the Trenton Academy sponsored by the First Presbyterian Church of Trenton as an outgrowth of its day care center. Vans are presently bringing young children from the Trenton Academy to learn about computers at PDS, and after four

To Feed a Family of Four

Mrs. Kerbel of the Crisis Ministry keeps a list of food items that will feed a family of four for two days. Those who want to support the food pantry of this crisis intervention service may want to clip it out and buy one or two items a week, collecting them in a special bag set aside for the purpose. When the whole list has been achieved, the bag of groceries may be brought to the Crisis Ministry office in the basement of Nassau Presbysterian Church.

- two cans each meat, vegetables, fruit and soup
- two boxes macaroni and cheese
- one box each dried soup mix and hot cereal
- one pound dried beans
- two packages powdered milk (6-7 quarts)

ENTER 'EQUUS'

In Players' Production. A psychological horror story, pitting a hardened psychiatrist against a teenage boy who has blinded horses with a spike, Peter Shaffer's "Equus" is regarded by many critics as one of the most important plays of the 1970s. It won the Tony Award for Best Play in 1974.

It will be given by Princeton Community Players from Thursday, March 22 through April 1 at 8 p.m. in the Mill Hill Playhouse, Trenton, featuring Churchill Clark as the psychiatrist and Joseph O'Laughlin as the tormented boy.

Behind the boy's gruesome act, lies a tale of worship and obsession, as the boy's spirit is enslaved by his imaginary god, Equus. The play follows the effect of the boy's sickness on the doctor himself.

Ralph Siegel is directing and Curt Hall is the producer. Others in the cast are June Connerton as the boy's mother, Milton Koosman as his father, Felisa Tibbitts as the stable girl who introduces the boy to horses and Lelia Matthews as the magistrate who keeps the boy from going to prison.

Tickets, at $6, may be reserved by calling 921-6314 or 989-3037. The Playhouse is at Front and Montgomery Streets, two blocks from the Front Street exit of the Route One Trenton Freeway.

WE READ A PLAY

"Bok." The rise and fall of Jean-Bedel Bokassa (Bok) and the process of Westernization is the theme of "Bok," a new play by Alan Jolis which will be read next Monday at Princeton Inn College in the Playwrights-at-McCarter series.

It will be given at 7:30 in PIC's basement theatre space. Admission is free and refreshments are served at intermission. After the reading, the audience is invited to stay and talk with playwright, director and actors.

Playwrights-at-McCarter is designed to give new playwrights a place where their works may be performed, and a chance to hear what the audience thinks. A grant from the Geraldine R. Dodge Foundation funds the enterprise, now in its seventh season.

MOVIE TIME

"Living Dangerously." It's 1965 in Indonesia as the Sukarno government heads toward its demise. "The Year of Living Dangerously" will be shown next Monday through Wednesday at 7:30 and 9:30 in Kresge Auditorium on the Movies-from-McCarter agenda.

Mel Gibson plays an ambitious journalist exploiting the volatile situation, Sigourney Weaver is the young Briton with whom he falls in love and who passes on to him the secrets she has access to in the British embassy. Linda Hunt plays the half-Chinese-half-Australian midget photographer who becomes the reporter's partner.

The film, says McCarter, "captures the confusion and terror of Western man confronting the squalor of a depressed and explosive Eastern civilization."

Music in Princeton

Sunday, March 25, at 2 in the Kirby Arts Center of the Lawrenceville School.

With the help of Magnolia the ostrich, Shanel No. 5 the skunk, Mr. Pennywhistle the bird who can't whistle, and Wembly the stork, the mother and son team will present their film "For the Love of Fred." Musical selections from the film's score, a combination of classical, popular, jazz, and folk, will be demonstrated by the MCSO Symphonette, a chamber group from the larger orchestra, and the Princeton Children's Choir, a 17-member singing group of children between the ages of 8 and 12.

The theme of this year's concert, entitled "Music Tells the Story," centers on how emotions are expressed through music. Music from the sound track will be reproduced by instruments and voices, and the music's effect on mood explained by the Ritts puppets. In the struggle of Fred the caterpillar to form a cocoon and eventually emerge from it as a beautiful butterfly, the Ritts film shows the developing of an individual's full potential.

Tickets, at $2 for children and $3 for adults, may be reserved by calling Linda Tsui at 924-3786 or may be purchased at the door.

ANDEAN FOLK MUSIC

At University. The South American group "Tahuantinsuyo" will give a performance of Andean folk music Sunday, March 25, at 8 in the auditorium of the School of Architecture at Princeton University.

Tahuantinsuyo, the name the Incas gave to their empire, was chosen for the group by its three members, Pepe Santana from Ecuador, Guillermo Guerrero from Peru, and Alcides Loza from Bolivia. Dedicated to researching and performing authentic music from the highlands of Bolivia, Peru, Ecuador, Colombia, Chile and Argentina, the group has made several major concert appearances and an album on Adelphi Records.

Organized by the Princeton University International Center and co-sponsored by Stevenson Hall, the Department of Anthropology and the Dean of Students, the performance will be free of charge.

Area Craftswoman Turns to Dollmaking In Culmination of Lifetime Skill in Sewing

Marjorie Mertz, the dollmaker.

After three decades as a homemaker, this energetic and attractive mother of four grown children, who has been sewing since she was 18, has turned her considerable skill with needle and thread into making dolls. Dolls which she believes the ideal doll should look like.

MARJORIE MERTZ AND BABIES: Marjorie Mertz sits with some of the baby dolls she has made at her home on Skyfield Drive. She tells how she got started in an article this page.

"A doll has to be loveable," insists Mrs. Mertz. "I wanted to make something you can like after the doll is done; I didn't want to make something ugly." She readily agreed that Cabbage Patch dolls to some people are loveable and that there is no accounting for taste — not even in dolls.

Although a doll is probably the most enduring of all toys, it has been subject to change — from Raggedy Ann to Barbie to Cabbage Patch. Currently, the old-fashioned, cuddly doll is in vogue, led, of course, by three million Cabbage Patch dolls made by Coleco last year and the attendant Cabbage Patch stories.

Using needle and thread, Mrs. Mertz "sculpts" material into what she feels a doll should look like. "It's very cuddly, like holding a newborn baby," she said, as she offered one of her creations for inspection. "A baby that doesn't cry — or doesn't wet or need to be fed," she laughs. Her quick laugh comes easily and often.

At her home on Skyfield Drive, she makes dolls in two sizes: 22 and 18 inches. Just recently she has added a 14-inch "preemie," with a diaper, baby sacque and blanket. Dolls can be custom ordered, she says, (two to three weeks notice) and customers can pick the sex, color of hair and eyes, and style of clothing.

Each doll is numbered and signed on the bottom of one of the feet. Each comes with a certificate for the foster parents bearing the name of the doll, the recipient, and the date it was received — all done in caligraphy by her daughter Susan.

"The parents can choose the name but if they don't, I'll name it," says Mrs. Mertz. "It's all part of the pattern."

Most of her customers, she finds, are adults and most of those are friends who have seen the dolls. "I haven't advertised them yet — I've been too busy — but a few are on display at The Master's Design craft shop on Olden Avenue in Trenton."

Customers who buy her dolls, she adds, say they are buying them now and saving them — they claim — for their grandchildren. Another reaction: those who have bought them to give away didn't want to give them up, she said. "I think I have sold only one to a child."

Right now, she has a room set aside in her house and is ready to increase production if the demand continues. She has made more than two dozen dolls so far and probably the most difficult part, even for her, is letting them go. "You do get attached to them," she smiled.

How long does it take to make a doll? If she is in a hurry, replies Mrs. Mertz, she can finish a doll in two days, including clothes.

"Usually, I do a bunch at once — four large and four small," she says, "and I usually do the same thing at once. Some days I'll just make clothes; the next day something different." Like painting 16 eyeballs.

She spends a lot of time painting the eyes and mouth, she says, because she feels the face is the most important part of the doll. "People have commented so much on the face and the eyes ... that it looks so realistic. If the face doesn't look right the doll won't. The face is what they want to see."

She makes all the clothes for her 18-inch dolls because she can't buy anything that small in a store. Six-month size clothing will fit the 22-inch size. Although she prefers making her own clothing, Mrs. Mertz admits, "Some outfits I see in a store I just know will go with a doll I'm making."

Girls are dressed bloomers, a slip, a dress, socks and, usually, black patent leather Maryjane shoes. For boys, the usual costume is underwear, jeans or overalls, a shirt and running shoes or ties. One of the hardest items to find, she says, are cowboy boots small enough to fit.

She told a story of shopping in a children's store for a pair of shoes and asking the clerk if she could try them on. "When the clerk said yes," recalled Mrs. Mertz, "I whipped a doll out of my bag and tried them on. The clerk was aghast. 'Won't she suffocate?' she asked. I told her, no, that I didn't use a plastic bag."

That is not nearly as extreme, she insists, as the stories surrounding the first Cabbage Patch dolls and their orginator, Xavier Roberts of Cleveland, Georgia. "He's the one that has a hospital in Atlanta for tranfusions. And if you laugh they send you out of the room."

Her interest in making dolls was sparked, she said, last spring before the Cabbage Patch craze, when she saw a pattern in a book. "It was something different and I tried it," she said.

The first pair of dolls she made she didn't like. It went slowly, she said. The second pair she altered and they were more to her liking. The third pair evolved into the pattern she is now using.

Cutting and stuffing a doll is easy. But sculpting a doll, giving it its unique features — "that's where the fun is, where the skill is required. Sculpting is a lot of work!"

She intends, she revealed, to start a class — limited to three — for members of her church craft group. "It will be a learning experience for everyone," she laughed. "I showed them a before-and-after stage and they couldn't believe how ugly a doll is when you first begin."

Ready For Adoption

She starts by cutting a pattern for the body from double knit material (so it won't run) which is available in stores in several skin tones. Next she paints on the eyes and mouth. Then she begins to assemble the body by stuffing it with a polyester fill and sculpting it.

The ears have a piece of material that has to be sewn on the inside, she explained. Channels are then stitched on a machine and filled to give them shape. Coming up from under the chin, Mrs. Mertz then uses needle and thread to sculpt the nose, giving a flare to the nostrils and then shaping the mouth.

The fingers are sewn on a machine and filled. Each finger and thumb, the palm and back of the hand are then given a couple of hand-sewn stitches for shaping. Likewise the toes. A few more stitches form a dimple at the knee. A few more shaping stitches on the tush, add a bellybutton and the doll is ready for its final stuffing. Now the decision of whether it is to be a boy or a girl.

Mrs. Mertz fashions the hair from various styles of yarn and sews it to the skull. Girls get pigtails or a pony tail; boys, short, curly hair.

Not only is the finished product lifelike, it is pliable. When her husband, Doug, complained that one doll looked bowlegged, Mrs. Mertz merely took the legs in her hands and straightened them. A few stiff taps eliminated a pair of fat cheeks.

You won't find anything like them in a store," insists Mrs. Mertz. "They are a throwback to the way dolls used to be hand made."

Mrs. Mertz has been sewing since the eighth grade. "I just enjoy it; it came naturally to me. I like to try different things," she said.

Her mother ran a foster home, and whenever anyone needed a sunsuit, or a dress or a pair of pants, she made it for them, she recalled. She started at home as a dressmaker and did alterations. When she got married, she made all the clothes for her family — at first out of necessity, she said. "I never buy anything out."

Wedding gowns, too? "Oh, yes. I couldn't even tell you how many I've made. Wedding gowns and dresses for the wedding party. The whole thing.

Versatile, she also makes drapes and slipcovers, knits, does needle point, crewel — "I've tried just about everything except tatting (handmade lace)" she said. "I draw the line on that. It's real, real fine and I don't have the patience for that."

How long she continues to make dolls will depend, says Mrs. Mertz, on the response. She intends to stay with it through the summer and will take her sewing machine along while she spends July in New Hampshire.

"I'm not looking to support myself," she adds. "If people buy them, fine, but I'm not going to keep making them until my house is full of dolls."

TIME TO REGISTER

For PAA Classes. Four years is not too young to begin, in the view of the Princeton Art Association. In "Young Art," for ages four-six, Eve Kaplan will encourage children to work in painting, drawing and sculpture, helping them to become aware of color, texture and shape.

The class will be given Thursdays from 3:30 to 4:30 at the PAA's Rosedale Road studios. Fee is $38 for families who are not members of the PAA, $35 for member families.

At the other end of the age spectrum, the PAA offers Joanne Augustine's course, "Painting for Senior Adults." It will be given Fridays from 1 to 3:30 for a $35 fee.

Older young people (ages 12-15) are invited to "Introduction to Color," "Beginning Drawing" and "Continuing Drawing," all with Jean Lindabury.

For adults, print-maker Marie Sturken will teach "Monotype Printmaking," in which the processes of drawing, painting and printmaking are combined. No print-making experience is necessary. The class will be held Mondays from 10 to 1.

Lee Harr will teach portrait drawing and painting from 1-4 Mondays, and Elizabeth Ruggles will give a Monday course on painting with oils and acrylics. Mary Yess will give a beginner's course in drawing and Jacques Fabert will continue with "Drawing II".

For graphic designers and illustrators, Fred Kraus will give a seminar on illustration and design. This evening class — 7 to 10 — has certain prerequisites or Mr. Kraus' permission.

Among the watercolor courses is an introduction for the beginner, figure painting for the more advanced (both with Linda Lombardi) and "Creative Watercolor" with Joanne Augustine.

Joan Needham will teach papermaking for both beginners and those who have worked with paper before. John Carbone will teach clay modeling from the nude, and Stephen Kennedy will give a class in painting, concentrating on nature.

Advanced students may sign up for evening and Sunday life workshops where artists work from a nude model. No formal teaching or criticism is provided.

Off the Rosedale campus, Betty Ruth Curtiss will teach Xerography, working with a Xerox color copier in the Triangle Repro Centers at Hulfish Street or Route One.

Marie Sturken will teach aluminum plate lithography at her studio and Jane Eccles will teach etching — beginning and advanced — at her own studio.

Whitney Ross has logged many volunteer hours in the Princeton community serving on the YWCA Teen Council, working on special projects for the Princeton Art Society, enlisting as a founding member of Safe Rides, and assisting at weekly drug and alcohol sessions at Corner House. At school she worked for class projects and won acclaim for her chairmanship of the junior-senior prom.

weeks PDS students will go to Trenton to teach language arts skills at the Academy.

Mrs. Kerbel herself works at the Hanover Street Ministry one day a week, and the support group is constantly wrestling with how to make Princeton expertise more available to Trenton.

Bread for the Peanut Butter. Mrs. Kerbel brings humor and common sense to her job. Before handing out bags of groceries that have been prepacked by girl scouts with quantities and items to feed a family of four she asks what the cooking facilities are. There are those who wouldn't know what to do with cornmeal, for instance, and those who will eat donated canned ravioli right out of the can. She keeps hand operated can openers handy for the latter.

"We try to be careful not to give out things that will be thrown out," she says. The Crisis Ministry office now has a freezer in which she can keep bread. "We'd have peanut butter and nothing to put it on."

PHC WINS CHAMPIONSHIP

With 8-2 Victory. It had not beaten Bedford either time the two teams met during the regular season, (a 4-3 loss and a 5-5 tie) but with the championship on the line Sunday morning in Baker Rink, the Princeton Hockey Club was more than equal to the task.

Sparked by good, solid team play, not always in evidence on the "cocktail circuit," PHC blew out Bedford, 8-2, before a sparse but appreciative group of wives, girlfriends, children and other assorted relatives and friends. The victory gave PHC possession for another year of the F. Skip Farrington Trophy, an imposing piece, that makes the Stanley Cup look like a tin can.

And when it was all over, the ageless John Cook, the oldest player on the team at 42, summed up the win fairly succinctly: "We always rise to the occasion."

And rise they did, under the masterful direction of coach Aubrey Houston, the Princeton skaters pulled away from an early 1-1 tie, and led 3-1 at the end of the first period. By the end of two, the lead had ballooned to 6-1, the final tally coming at the buzzer.

Mindful of a 5-1 lead that disappeared against Bedford earlier in the season, resulting in a tie at the end, PHC did not let up in the final frame. It scored twice more, and allowed the visitors, only one more goal on a power play.

Mike Reynolds led the scoring with a hat trick, Bob Plumb had a pair of goals, and Dudley Fitzpatrick, Mark Zawadsky and Richie McLaughlin, one apiece. Meanwhile, at the other end of the ice, the fine goaltending of Chris Burchfield, kept Bedford from making a game out of it.

PHC, which finished first with a record of 5-2-1, won its second consecutive title, and eighth in the last nine years. Essex broke the streak in 1982, the only time in recent memory that PHC has not risen to the occasion.

Other team players include Scott Reed, Peter Lawson-Johnston, Al Fitzpatrick, Colley Donaldson, Steve Dagdigian, Larry Sanford, Jimmy Rodgers, Buff Burchfield, Eric Monberg and Billy Erdman.

TWO LOSSES AT START

For Tiger Baseball Team. The temperatures are a good deal higher than they are here, but the Princeton baseball team has yet to warm up, losing its first two contests on its Florida trip.

Last Saturday, the Tigers lost their season's opener, 5-4, to East Carolina, and Monday afternoon they were routed, 10-4, by Creighton. The Monday game was part of the Rollins Tournament that will continue this week.

The Orange and Black was scheduled to play the host team Tuesday afternoon, two games Wednesday against Maryland and Stetson, another game against Creighton on Thursday; Rollins again Friday, and Maryland Saturday. On Sunday, the team will play at Jacksonville.

Creighton College is located in Nebraska, but its batters were in mid-season form against Princeton pitching, socking four home runs en route to their victory. The winners never trailed in this one, rapping out 15 hits off three Tiger hurlers.

Creighton built a 4-0 lead off of Dan Arendas, Princeton's starting pitcher, who was charged with the loss. He was relieved by Ed Aulisi who gave up four more. Scott LaForest finished up, and allowed two more runs in the bottom of the eighth.

Arendas had better luck with his bat, getting four hits, and freshman Todd Tuckner continued his impressive showing with four safeties, one a home run. Princeton had the misfortune to hit into three double plays that effectively ended promising rallies.

Opening Game Loss. In the season's opener against East Carolina, the Tigers held an early 2-0 lead, scoring twice in the third inning. Mark Goldenberg singled with one out, and advanced to third when Arendas was safe on an error.

Freshman Todd Tuckner doubled home one run, and sophomore Henry Kolowrat singled Arendas with the second. That held up until the fifth when the home team scored three times.

The Orange and Black managed to tie it at 3-3 in the top of the seventh when Arendas doubled home Todd Leavitt, who had singled and gone to second on a passed ball. However, East Carolina tallied the winning runs in the bottom of the same inning off losing pitcher Scott LaForest. Bill Beard pitched the first six.

Freshman Drew Stratton scored in the eighth for Princeton, to make it 5-4.

TIGERS LOSE OPENER

In Lacrosse. Neither the Princeton lacrosse team or anybody around here who might have wanted to watch it play had much success last weekend.

The Tigers lost their season's opener to Hofstra, 13-7, Sunday afternoon, and contrary to what was announced in advance, it was played in Hempstead, Long Island.

After Friday's snowstorm, the game was moved from Saturday to Sunday, and the location changed to the field on Washington Road, across Lake Carnegie. At some point over the weekend, it was decided to move the game to Hofstra's astroturf, to provide a better playing surface, but the word never got out on that move.

By halftime, Princeton would probably have been happier playing in two to three feet of snow; the Tigers were down 9-0. They rallied to outscore the home team, 7-4, in the final two periods, but that left them on the short end of the 13-7 final score.

Junior midfielder Bill Donahue led the Orange and Black with two goals. Rick Kirscher, David Chang, John Lurie, Paul Faber and Dave Kopp had one apiece. Chris Corcoran started in goal for the Tigers and made six saves. His replacement Tim Krongard had two. Princeton outshot the winners, 38 to 37.

This Wednesday, the Tigers will travel to Baltimore to face a tough UMBC club that lost to John Hopkins by only two goals, 10-8, over the weekend. Army is scheduled here this Sunday at two on Poe Field, but it wouldn't hurt to call the "fan phone" (452-3545) and double check.

ABRECHT IS NAMED

Second-Team All-Ivy. Princeton's sophomore defenseman Cliff Abrecht was the lone Tiger hockey player receiving any kind of all-Ivy mention in voting by the league's head coaches.

Abrecht was named to the second team, along with another sophomore defenseman, Mike Schaefer of Cornell. Harvard, Yale and Cornell dominated the first team selections, placing two men each on the top unit.

These included sophomore goalie Grant Blair and senior defenseman Ken Code from Harvard; sophomore and senior forwards Duanne Moeser and Geoff Dervin from Cornell; and sophomore forward Bob Logan and junior defenseman Peter Sawkins from Yale.

On a somewhat expanded second team, Brown placed two players, including goalie John Franzosa. Yale, two; Harvard, two; and Cornell, two. Dartmouth was the only team not represented on either team or by honorable mention.

Moeser was the league's top scorer with 32 points on 11 goals and 21 assists. He was followed by two Big Red teammates, junior center Gary Cullen with 22 points, and Dervin with 20. The next highest scorer in the league had 12 points. Abrecht and freshman forward Jon Rocco led Princeton with 10 points apiece.

In the goaltending department, Harvard's Blair had a fine 1.96 goals-against average in nine games. Yale senior Paul Tortorella finished second. The Tigers' Wally McDonough finished seventh with a 4.46 average.

Finishing with 14 points, Harvard and Cornell tied for the title for the second consecutive year, only the second time in 48 years there has been a deadlock. On the basis of its better ECAC Division I record, the Crimson advanced to the playoffs in Boston, but was eliminated.

NAUTILUS TEAM SECOND

In Soccer Playoff. The Princeton Nautilus girls soccer team finished second in the Mercer County Women's Unlimited Soccer League when it lost a hotly contested playoff game to Joe's Mill Hill Tavern.

After regular play and two overtime periods, the score was still knotted at 1-1. The outcome was then decided on a penalty kick score of 4-3 which gave the championship to Joe's. Nautilus was the only team to defeat Joe's Mill during the regular season, defeating the champions, 3-1.

Starting with only 11 players, coaches Norton Parker and Jeff Petrone guided Nautilus to a 13-5-3 record and third place in the regular season standings. The team got off to a slow start, losing two and tying one in its first three outings but then came on and ended its regular season with a 3-1 victory over Mike's Tavern of Princeton.

Tracy Parker was high scorer with 14 goals, followed by Sherri Sheppard with 11 and Cathy Arcaro with 10. A solid defense, a strong factor in many of Nautilus's wins, was led by fullbacks Karen Parker and Cindy Lucash and goalie Lucy Baruch.

Other starters on the team are Libby Bahr, Darlene Abagnale, Carol Raymond, Karen Reid, Alice Koniges, Cindy Hines, Lisa Robbins, Brett Wilson, Denise King and Sharon Tufano.

PLAY BALL

The Volvo Diesel and the Mercedes 300D are both well-appointed diesel automobiles.

The Volvo, for example, comes with a long list of standard equipment including air conditioning. Power windows and door locks. A sunroof. And an electrically-heated, orthopedically-designed driver's seat.

Of course, the 300D comes with an impressive list of standard features too.

But what makes the 300D so exceptional is not what it comes with, but what it goes for. More than twice the price of the Volvo. *

So if you're in the market for a roomy, well-equipped diesel that's built to last, you can spend a small fortune on a Mercedes.

Or you can make the much wiser purchase and buy a Volvo. Or two.

Conservative Group Sponsors Candidate In School Board Race

Tatiana Ermalaev, Borough resident who has announced her candidacy for the school board, said in the course of an interview that she is a candidate sponsored by the conservative "Citizens for American System Education" known as CASE.

The group, which claims 111 school board candidates in 78 school districts across the state, follows the curriculum proposals of Lyndon H. LaRouche Jr. CASE hopes, according to a "Dear Tatiana" letter to the candidate, "to have 1,000 Jerseyans running 'with LaRouche' for Congress, county and municipal offices, Democratic and Republican county committee posts, as well as school board."

The letter defines the movement as "critical" in order to "break President Reagan free of the 'palace guard' headed by Henry Kissinger and his Eastern Establishment allies that now control the Administration."

Mrs. Ermalaev said that a CASE representative had telephoned her and asked her to run. She said she had signed a CASE request for names when the group had an information table in Princeton and the caller apparently obtained her name from that list.

"It is a conservative organization," Mrs. Ermalaev explained, "and I don't agree with some of their proposals too much, but I do believe we could improve our education." Her views are amplified in the interviews on page 1B.

According to CASE material which Mrs. Ermalaev gave a Town Topics reporter, the group supports what it calls "a New Kameralist Curriculum" — "the education of all

A PRESIDENT IS HONORED: A detail from Fort Dix, headed by the commanding general, came to Princeton last Sunday to lay a wreath on the grave of former President Grover Cleveland in the Princeton Cemetery. By tradition, the gravesites of all former U.S. Presidents are visited annually by local military commanders as representatives of the incumbent President. Township Mayor Winthrop S. Pike and Borough Mayor Barbara B. Sigmund took part in the ceremony, which was held on the 147th anniversary of the birth of the nation's 22nd and 24th President. (Michaela McMillan photo)

Construction of New Collins Parking Garage May Lead to Ride-Sharing from Jadwin Lot

Ride-sharing may begin in Princeton by April 2, said Collins' Jerry Berner this week. Mr. Berner is temporary chair of the Ride Sharing Committee that has been talking about things like van pools, car pools and shuttle services for people shuttling in and out of Princeton for various reasons.

He is also, as a Collins executive, getting ready for next Monday's groundbreaking for construction of Collins' 560-car Chambers Street parking garage. He expects Mahoney and Troast, the Collins contractors, to complete the garage "in about a year."

The kind of ride-sharing that may start April 2 would have people who work in town parking in Princeton University's Jadwin Gym lots and riding car-pools into the Central Business District. Any shuttle service from Jadwin is in the future, Mr. Berner emphasized.

Cars that have been parking in the Chambers Street lot may or may not have a place to go. Fourteen of them had been parking there

Collins Refuses to Grant Extension Of Deadline for Decision on Appeals

Collins will not grant an extension of the April 10 deadline for Borough Council's decision on the four Collins appeals that will be heard before Council.

Two dates for beginning to hear the appeals have now been set: Wednesday and Thursday, April 4 and 5. Borough officials said it has not yet been decided which of the four will be heard first.

"We're not going to grant the extension," stated Collins' vice-president Gary Green. "Somebody is going to take it to a higher court, so why wait? Nobody has given me to understand that they would give in if they lose."

"I am sorry they would not accede to the granting of the extension and I hope they will re-consider," said Borough Mayor Barbara Sigmund. "I would like to have these appeals heard fully, with the full participation by all on Council — including Barbara Hill."

The legality of Ms. Hill's presence on Council has been questioned (see page 3).

Mr. Green pointed out that during the months of Planning Board hearings on Collins' various plans, Collins granted "many, many extensions."

The chief reason for the closeness of the deadline is the delay in obtaining transcripts of Collins hearings before the Planning Board. They did not arrive from the court stenographer's office until

School Board to Ask N.J. Supreme Court To Hear Transfer Case

The school board will ask the New Jersey Supreme Court to hear the case of the board vs. teachers Lawrence Ivan and Thomas Murray.

Last week, Mr. Ivan and Mr. Murray won from the Appellate Division of Superior Court a ruling that Princeton's school board had to re-instate them in teaching positions from which they had been transferred. The court found that both Superintendent Paul Houston and Princeton High School principal John Sakala had acted in "bad faith" in recommending the transfers to the school board.

The board will also file a motion with the Appellate Division asking that court to stay the order to re-instate

Macgill Won't Run For Borough Council

Richard Macgill will not run for a third term on Borough Council he announced this week.

Two Council members, Mr. Macgill and Peter Bearse, will complete their terms this year. Mr. Bearse, who is serving his first term, is running in the Democratic primary for his party's designation as Congressional candidate in the Fourth District.

He said this week that he is running "an aggressive primary campaign" for that nomination and is not prepared to say what action he will take about another term on Council.

Mr. Macgill, also a Democrat, was appointed to Council in April, 1978, to replace Gus Escher, who had resigned. He ran that November and was elected to his first term, running successfully again in 1981.

The Democrats must also fill the seat that will be vacated by Barbara Hill when she resigns from Council later this spring.

citizens of future true democratic republics based on the assimilation of a science of history of the struggle to create such republics, against irrationalism and feudalist oligarchism." Webster's Third International defines "cameralist" — Mr. LaRouche prefers the Greek spelling — with a "k" — as an economist who strongly emphasizes the political factors in economics.

In its letter to Mrs. Ermalaev, CASE writes that it will produce campaign literature for her and will file finance disclosure reports with the state.

Ride-Sharing

overnight on an arrangement with the Borough at a monthly rate of $5. Collins offered them space in the Hulfish lot at the same monthly rate — $42 — as apartment tenants. So far, only two have signed up, Mr. Berner said.

Most Chambers cars are there short-term. Effective April 1, Collins will increase the capacity of the Hulfish lot by reducing the number of monthly parkers. Employees of the Nassau Inn will be required to find other places to park. Others who have monthly parking arrangements but are not tenants of Palmer Square, have been reduced.

All of this will add 82 short-term spaces. They will be open to anybody.

"The University has been very co-operative in making Jadwin available for fringe parking," Mr. Berner said, adding that the Ride-Sharing Committee is still working out procedures.

For the future, a van pool arrangement is possible, perhaps involving a van pool company whose services would be provided either by a corporation or by individuals buying space on a contract basis.

He said the committee isn't sure a van pool would work in Princeton because the distances are not great. Car pooling or fringe-and-shuttle is more likely, he surmised.

There has also been discussion of a privately-owned shuttle which could transport employees or perhaps run a shuttle for shoppers during off-peak hours. A shuttle might, for example, go between Princeton's CBD and the Carnegie Center on Route One.

Members of the Ride-Sharing Committee, besides Mr. Berner, are Leslie C. Vivian for Princeton University; lawyers A.C. Reeves Hicks and Michael Masanoff; Samuel M. Hamil II, executive director of the Middlesex-Somerset-Mercer Regional Study Council; Borough Council president Richard Woodbridge and Olindo Carnevale of the First National Bank.

Teacher Transfers

the teachers in their former jobs until after the school year has ended.

"A school board has a right to transfer teachers, even if they don't want to be transferred, because of the needs of the system," said board president Ann McGoldrick of the board's decision to ask the Supreme Court to consider the case.

She referred to this as "a straightforward right of the board," and said New Jersey statutes provide for "involuntary" transfers of teachers. It is not allowed, she pointed out, to punish teachers by moving them.

Both Mr. Ivan and Mr. Murray were physical education teachers at Princeton High School where they had taught for many years. Mr. Ivan was transferred to Littlebrook — an elementary school — and Mr. Murray to the Middle School. When Littlebrook was closed, Mr. Ivan was transferred to Community Park — also an elementary school — where he now is. Mr. Murray is still at the Middle School.

The two teachers have charged that they were transferred because they had criticized Mr. Sakala for changing a failing gym grade to a medically-excused grade. The student's father was president of the school board at the time.

The Appellate Court agreed with them that "bad faith" was involved in the transfers.

"We had been looking at the physical education program for some time," Mrs. McGoldrick explained. "We'd closed Johnson Park School, we had moved Bob Gilbert from Littlebrook to the Middle School because he had an excellent back-pack program at Littlebrook and we wanted to boost the environmental curriculum at the Middle School."

She said the transfer of Mr. Gilbert accomplished the board's goal.

She also asked what transfer powers the board might have in the future if Mr. Ivan and Mr. Murray win their case all the way to the top.

"Can we ever again transfer Larry or Tom? If so, under what circumstances?"

It is the view of board and administration, she explained, that from time to time teachers need "to look with a fresh eye" in a new setting.

For its request to the Supreme Court — and that court may not agree to hear the case, leaving Mr. Ivan and Mr. Murray victors — the board has retained additional counsel. Clapp and Eisenberg of Newark will work with board attorney William Hartigan.

A 'SISTER CITY'?

With Shchekino, U.S.S.R. A pairing of Princeton with a community of similar size in the Soviet Union will be proposed to Borough Council this Thursday at Council's 8 p.m. work session in Borough Hall.

Don Blankenbush and Hinda Winawer of the Coalition for Nuclear Disarmament will propose that the Borough accept a pairing with Shchekino, a town about the same size as Princeton and about the same distance from Moscow that Princeton is from New York.

So far, according to Mr. Blankenbush, 35 towns in New Jersey have begun pairing with cities in the U.S.S.R., mostly under the auspices of the Ground Zero Pairing Project, which proposed Shchekino for Princeton.

If Council approves — and Township Committee already has — letters from both governing bodies would be sent to Shchekino. Another letter would then be written which the Coalition hopes that many in the community would sign. This would be sent to Shchekino along with descriptive material about Princeton.

WHERE IS HOME?

More Attacks on Hill. Another Collins opponent, Gerald Boswell, has joined R. William Potter in Mr. Potter's effort to remove Barbara Hill from Council.

Mr. Potter has said candidly that he wants Ms. Hill off Council because she has supported Collins in the past and he is scheduled to appear before Council with an appeal from Planning Board approval of Collins plans. Both Mr. Potter and Mr. Boswell are lawyers with the New Jersey Office of the Public Advocate.

At last week's Council meeting, Mr. Boswell started things off by questioning the legal right of Ms. Hill to sit on Council. She and her husband, Raymond, have sold their Hawthorne Avenue house but the final closing has not yet taken place. Mr. Hill works in New York and Ms. Hill has just begun a new job there. She announced last week that she will be resigning from Council and leaving Princeton after the closing on her house.

Mr. Potter claims to know that the closing date is April 1. Ms. Hill says it is not, but declines to give the date.

In a two-and-one-half page letter to Ms. Hill, delivered to her at Tuesday's meeting, Mr. Potter repeated the charges he made last week.

"You needn't consummate your decision to leave for your residency (in the Borough) to lapse," Mr. Potter wrote. "It is sufficient that you have framed the express intention to leave and that you have taken steps which evidence that intention."

He quoted several cases in New Jersey law, commenting, "in short, you must not only live in Princeton, you must intend to remain here 'permanently and indefinitely' not temporarily or for some special purpose, if you are to remain eligible to sit and vote on the Council."

Ms. Hill reminded him and Council members of Nelson van den Blink who announced her intention of resigning from Council and remained an active member until the date she had chosen for her resignation to take effect. She resigned from Council in January, 1983.

"I own a house," she said. "I live here. I will stay until my house is sold. I am interested in staying as long as I am a legal resident."

She said she has been assured by lawyers she has talked to that she does meet residency requirements.

Council asked its counsel, Walter Bliss, to study the problem and give an opinion. Although Mr. Bliss suggested Council might want to bring in another lawyer to make that decision, Council demurred.

Mr. Bliss told Council that he would not, at the moment, find any reasons to disqualify Ms. Hill.

Ms. Hill has declined further comment on Mr. Potter's letter.

"It is really sad, really distressing, to have to leave in this fashion," she said this week. "I can guess one-hundred percent why this is being done — I voted for Collins and they are afraid I will again. I think it is a subversion of the democratic process."

DEADLINE THURSDAY

For Housing Suit. This Thursday is the deadline for the threatened court action by Calton Homes against Princeton Township unless Township Committee has in the works the kind of "Mt. Laurel" zoning ordinance Calton wants in order to build 1,280 houses.

But the Township has suggested a discussion meeting instead. Municipal attorney Edwin Schmierer has said that he hopes to meet this week with Calton's attorney, Henry Hill. He has also sent Calton a copy of the Township's affordable-housing study.

Next Wednesday, March 28 at 7:30 in the Valley Road building, the Planning Board will hold the first in a series of public meetings on the Affordable Housing proposals of John Nolon and Alan Mallach, the Township's consultants.

It is the first in a series of meetings at which the board will consider adopting the program. Some of the meetings will be actual public hearings on Master Plan housing amendments now being drafted.

The report and a summary of it, may be examined in the office of the Planning Board, the Township clerk or at the public library. It may also be bought at the Planning Board office.

After last Wednesday's discussion of the plan before the Planning Board, members George Adriance, Margen Penick and Tom Poole formed a sub-committee to examine the proposals.

Mrs. Penick said, at that meeting, that she thought the Affordable Housing Program was a good one which would keep the "appearance" of Princeton. Because it provides for "in-filling" and increased density, it means the appearance of the town can be maintained, she commented.

To say that open space can be given away in order to meet density requirements would be wrong, she said. She also emphasized that she doesn't want height restrictions waived.

Then she asked, "If we have a voluntary program to provide lower-cost housing, will we get enough?"

Mr. Mallach's figures show that Princeton will need to provide 873 units of lower-income housing by 1990. He found that between 1970 and 1980, the income mix of families in the Princeton community did not change significantly; however, Borough and Township differed sharply from each other. In the Township, probably because both Princeton Community Village and Redding Terrace were built during that decade for lower-income families, the lower-income population increased slightly. In the Borough, it declined significantly.

TO MEET ON SEWERS?

Borough Suggests. A Borough-Township meeting on a possible sewer connection ban may be held Thursday, April 19, although the two mayors have not yet talked with one another to set a date.

Meanwhile, Borough Mayor Barbara Sigmund will meet later this week with John McGee, chair of the Stony Brook Regional Sewerage Authority and its Township representative, to discuss the way sewer use costs are determined. Mayor Sigmund still wants a zero-based budget from the Authority.

Mayor Sigmund took issue this week with Dwight O. North for defending the Authority from the mayor's complaints about its budget and procedures. The mayor said Mr. North developed much of his analysis from the assumption that she was basing sewer plant cost comparison on data from past years when she was not.

She explained that she has been comparing projected 1984 costs for Princeton and for the Ewing Lawrence Sewerage Authority, in order to "get some sort of handle on the kinds of costs we presently should be incurring for treatment of our effluent."

It was while examining current projected costs in each of the two systems that she found differences which were unfavorable to Princeton, she said, adding, "I am still waiting for a step-by-step treatment analysis — zero-based budget — to explain the overall budget that I requested a month ago."

GROUNDBREAKING: Mrs. Atherton Hobler wields the shovel for the ceremonial breaking of the sod that precedes construction of a new headmaster's residence at the American Boychoir School. The residence will be named for herself and her late husband. From left are John Kuzma, American Boychoir music director; Larry Farrell, board member; Mrs. Hobler; her son, Herbert W. Hobler, chairman of the board; Stephen W. Howard, headmaster; his wife, Dadee, and Joe Hoell, board member.

At last week's Council meeting, municipal attorney Walter Bliss told Council that the Sewer Operating Committee does indeed have policy-making powers. The legality of the SOC's elimination of a no-connection zone has been questioned. Mr. Bliss added that the process for reversing an SOC decision is not clearly defined in its charter but presumably would require at least a majority vote by its three members — Borough, Township and Princeton University.

NEW RESIDENCE SET

For Boychoir School. Construction of the Ruth and Atherton Hobler Headmaster's Residence has begun on the 18-acre site of The American Boychoir School on Lambert Drive. Members of the Hobler family and their friends have honored 90-year-old Ruth W. Hobler and her late husband, Atherton W. Hobler, founder of Benton and Bowles Advertising, by providing the funds for the house.

Mrs. Hobler is an active supporter of the school, and her son, Herbert W. Hobler, chairman of the Nassau Broadcasting Company, is also chairman of the board of turstees of The American Boychoir School.

The house, which will be located among trees just off the driveway entrance to the main house, was designed by board member and architect Jeremiah Ford III of the firm Short and Ford. The three-bedroom home has been conceived to fit in with the architecture of the main house known as Albemarle, which was originally built by the late Gerard B. Lambert in 1917.

The Headmaster's residence is expected to be finished in mid-summer and will be occupied by Stephen N. Howard, headmaster, and his wife. To meet the demands of increasing enrollment, the Howards' current on-premises apartment will be converted into much needed dormitory space.

PARTY IS HELD

To Honor Conservationist. Some 160 environmentalists and conservationists gathered Sunday afternoon at Morven for a reception to honor James C. Sayen as he steps down from the Delaware & Raritan Canal Commission.

The event was sponsored by the D&R Canal Coalition-a citizens group--and the Friends of Princeton Open Space, both of which are headed by Rosemary Blair. It was planned as a surprise for Mr. Sayen, who has served the Commission since it was established by the Legislature in 1974 to formulate a master plan for the Delaware and Raritan Canal State Park and oversee its implementation.

The Commission is made up of the Commissioner of the Department Environmental Commission and eight citizens appointed by the Governor. In stepping down, Mr. Sayen has agreed to take on the monumental task of acquiring green space as a buffer to the development taking place along the Route 1 corridor.

Those attending the gathering included D&R Canal Commissioners whose terms continue, and citizens who have worked with Mr. Sayen over the years as he energetically led or supported efforts to preserve accessible open space in the midst of rapid development.

Thomas O'Neill, president of the Center for the Analysis of Public Issues who was with the DEP at the time the D&R Canal State Park and Commission were established, served as moderator for the tributes to the honored guest. "We are here, not only to honor Jim Sayen," he said, "but also to honor the idea of the D&R Canal in preserving the best around us."

Margen Penick spoke of Mr. Sayen as "the person who has shaped the landscape through moving other people." As a member of the Township's Open Space Study Commission, which became the Open Space Commission and then the Environmental Commission, Mr. Sayen pushed for a policy of dedicating 25 percent of the Township's total land area to open space. This policy has led to the acquisition of some 2,300 acres of open space, which includes large parks and playgrounds as well as smaller neighborhood parks and play areas for active recreation, and reservations and flood plain areas for conservation and passive use.

The 25 percent policy was subsequently adopted in the Borough, where Mr. Sayen founded the Borough Environmental Commission in 1970, and was incorporated in the 1986 Master Plan.

Mr. Sayen presently serves on the Mercer County Park Commission and the D&R Canal Coalition. He is a former chairman of the Stony Brook-Millstone Watersheds Association and founded the Princeton Friends of the Environment.

He was presented a plaque from Trenton Mayor Arthur Holland for "faithful service rendered to Trenton" and serenaded in song created and

ONE WOMAN STABBED

Another Woman Arraigned. Women made some progress toward achieving equality in the male-dominated world of violent crime as a result of an altercation that took place in the early morning hours Sunday in front of the Ivy Inn on Nassau Street.

Borough Police charged a 21-year-old Princeton resident, Wanda Djames of Juniper Row, with aggravated assault, possession of an illegal weapon (a folding knife with a four-inch blade), and possession of cocaine. The police said she stabbed a 41-year-old Trenton resident, who was treated and released from the Princeton Medical Center with wounds in the arm and stomach.

The defendant was arraigned before Judge Russell W. Annich Jr., who remanded her to the Mercer County Detention Center pending grand jury action.

Police said that the incident occurred at about 2:15 a.m., when the defendant entered the bar and attempted to purchase some alcohol. She was refused service and an argument followed, with the participants moving from the bar into the parking lot, where the stabbing took place.

Borough detectives were continuing their investigation and police said that more charges, possibly involving other individuals, could be lodged.

NATURAL CAUSE CITED

In Student's Death. Kelvin Collins, a 21-year-old sophomore at Princeton University, apparently died of a pulmonary embolism sometime last week.

The body of Mr. Collins, an engineering student from Fort Worth, Texas, was discovered Sunday afternoon by his roommate at the Princeton Inn College. The roommate, who had just returned to campus after the spring vacation, notified University officials who called Borough police who in turn notified the Mercer County Prosecutor's office.

The county officials said they discovered no outward signs of foul play and no other unusual circumstances at the scene. The body was found in bed and officials speculated that Mr. Collins may have been dead for several days. University officials said they knew of no chronic illnesses suffered by the student.

An autopsy was performed on Monday. The preliminary report of the Medical Examiner indicated that the death was natural, caused by the embolism, or blood clot.

A memorial service for Mr. Collins was scheduled for this Wednesday at 8 p.m. at the University Chapel, with the Rev. Kenneth Jasko, associate pastor of the Nassau Christian Center and leader of the Alpha-Omega Christian Fellowship, officiating. Mr. Collins was a member of that fellowship as well as the Society of Black Engineers.

CASH AND SHOTGUNS

Top Theft Report. Borough Police were investigating the theft of three Smith & Wesson shotguns from a Maple Terrace home, which was entered sometime during the day last Friday through an unlocked window.

The shotguns, valued at $965, belonged to a hunter and were properly registered, according to Lt. Thomas Michaud.

At the Springdale Golf Club, the theft of $390 in cash was reported on Friday, though Borough Police believe that University, apparently died of the theft occurred earlier in the week. Police saw no sign of forced entry and have no suspects in the case.

Bike, CB, Typewriter. A bicycle belonging to a Bayard Lane resident was reported stolen Sunday from a rack at the Princeton Shopping Center. Police said the bike's chain had been cut. It was a 26-inch, blue Schwinn 10-speed, valued at $90.

A car parked in the lot at the Princeton YMCA was entered sometime between 6 and 7:45 Monday evening. Thieves made off with a CB radio, hand tools, and books, which were valued at $207. Police said a window had been pried open to gain entry.

A portable Praxis typewriter, valued at $395, was stolen from a Nassau Street bookstore sometime overnight March 12. The thieves, who entered the

Princeton Regional School HIGHLIGHTS

Highlights is sponsored and prepared by the Parent Teacher Organization of the Princeton Regional Schools.

RIVERSIDE SCHOOL

Both Riverside Elementary School and Community Park School were treated to a performance of the Pegasus Production of "Aladdin" -- thanks to their PTO's.

The Chinese New Year, 4682, which is The Year of the Rat, was welcomed in by Evelyn Saldick's Kindergarten class. The children paraded through the hallways in a dragon costume and with Chinese animal masks while clanging cymbals, ringing bells and making merry noise. Red lantern decorations were made and the children enjoyed a Chinese lunch including rice and mandarin oranges. Because red is a sign of good luck each child received a shiny new penny in a red envelope.

In addition to each class having its own Valentine's Day party, Mrs. Walter's Health class had the children from Mrs. Rosendorf's, Mr. Cirullo's and Mr. Fairful's classes make Valentine's Day cards for senior citizens in local nursing homes. This project was in coordination with the Youth Services Program of the American Red Cross.

Rhythm is the theme of John Fisher's gym classes this month. Some classes are marching, others are rope jumping and some classes are learning to square dance. But the 4th graders are Tinikling. This is a Philippine folk dance which has the dance movements coordinated with the simultaneous moving of bamboo poles. The steps of the Tinikling dance are supposed to resemble the Tikkling bird, which lives in the marshes of the Philippines.

Bill Cirullo's class has been busy studying New Jersey as part of their social studies work. They are involved with doing research on various aspects of this state and presenting their findings in such areas as crime, communications, etc. to their classmates. In science the students are studying the environment. In their classroom they have set up a twenty gallon aquarium for tropical fish as well as terrariums.

Librarian Sharon Haupt along with Eleanor Angoff helped Riverside School honor Black History Month by exhibiting some of the interesting and varied materials owned by the R.S. library. They also printed a bibliography of all the books in the collection on black history/literature which was then given to each teacher to be used for classroom study references.

BOOSTING THE DEMOCRATS: Jennye Stubblefield, second from right, president of the Mercer County Democratic Committee, presents charter memberships in the newly formed booster club to Mary Perone, far left, former municipal chairperson; Walter Bliss, former Mercer County Democratic Chairman; Princeton Borough Mayor Barbara B. Sigmund; an d Gertrude Dubrovsky, municipal chairperson. The booster club was introduced at a special cocktail reception held in Ewing Township.

RESTROOM DAMAGED

At Shopping Center. Township Police reported that vandals struck at the restroom at the southern end of the Princeton Shopping Center sometime between 3 and 5:15 p.m. last Friday. Trash cans were emptied, debris scattered, a tissue dispenser was damaged, and a gas pipe leading to a heater was broken.

Patrolman John Clausen was investigating. No estimate of damages was given.

MORE DEER STRUCK

On Township Roads. "Beware of Deer" signs should continue to be posted squarely in the minds of all area motorists. The creatures caused two more accidents on Township roads last week.

Robert H. Yvell of 68 Thoreau Drive, Plainsboro, was traveling south on River Road last Friday at 6:20 p.m. when a deer ran into the path of his car.

At 9:43 p.m. on St. Patrick's Day Jack R. Brown of Convent Station ran into a deer in the vicinity of Lover's Lane and Stockton Street.

$1000 TO LIBRARY

To Teach Reading. Public libraries of Princeton, Mercer County, Trenton and Hamilton have been given $1,000 from the B. Dalton Bookseller National Literacy Initiative.

Overall, 43 adults are now being tutored in these libraries. Each volunteer tutor meets with a student in the library twice a week, and spends a third hour in lesson preparation.

The next tutor-training course will be March 28, April 4, 11, 18 and May 2 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. in the Hamilton Township public library. Volunteers — or those who would like to learn to read — may call the Princeton public library at 924-9529.

Mr. Woodbridge, a specialist in patent, trademark and copyright matters, will discuss the recent Betamax decision as it affects the rights of private citizens to videotape television programs. It is his third appearance on public television to discuss rights of inventors and authors.

He has served for more than ten years on the Inventors Subcommittee of the Patent, Trademark and Copyright Section of the American Bar Association. He is also president of Princeton Borough Council.

DYSON TO SPEAK

At Coalition Event. Noted physicist and author Freeman J. Dyson will speak on "The Cult of Obedience and the Cult of Destruction" at the second annual Membership Gathering of the Coalition for Nuclear Disarmament.

The event, which will also honor former Princeton High School student Ariela Gross and feature an account of her much-publicized meeting with President Reagan last June, is scheduled for 8 p.m., Sunday, March 25, at the Nassau Presbyterian Church.

Prof. Dyson, professor of physics at the Institute for Advanced Study for more than 30 years, is the author of "Weapons and Hope," excerpted in a four-part series in The New Yorker last month. His earlier work, "Disturbing the Universe," was also excerpted in that publication.

Freeman J. Dyson

Born and educated in England, Prof. Dyson has taught at a number of American and foreign universities. He is consultant to the U.S. Defense Department, space agency, disarmament agency, and weapons laboratories. He is also a member of U.S. National Academy of Sciences and was chairman of the Federation of American Scientists in 1962-63.

Ms. Gross, now a Harvard University freshman, went to Washington, D.C. last June to be honored as a recipient of a Presidential Scholarship, awarded to the nation's most promising high school graduates. She organized a petition to support a mutual U.S.-Soviet nuclear freeze and challenged President Reagan to support the freeze. She will discuss what transpired in her subsequent personal meeting with the President.

The event is open to the public and there is no admission charge.

RARELY VISITED ARCHAEOLOGICAL SITES OF MEXICO

Many people have been to Mexico and have seen the commonly visited sites such as Teotihuacan and Tula. But few have had the opportunity to visit some of the more remote and remarkable sites on this itinerary which have never before been offered on an organized tour. This program represents the culmination of a great deal of research and field investigation to make such a Unique Travel Experience possible. So join us as we venture out of the realm of the Aztecs to visit the Mattazingas, the Tlahuicas, the Totonacas, the Olmecas, the Tlascalans, and the Huastecas.

Nobody knows Mexico better than

FUND IS ESTABLISHED

To Honor Retired Dean. Princeton University has established the J. Douglas Brown Fund as part of A Campaign for Princeton, a $330 million fund-raising effort currently under way.

J. Douglas Brown

The fund has already received several major gifts and is expected to be augmented by further gifts from friends and admirers of Dean Brown as the campaign progresses. It will be used for special situations in recruiting and retaining faculty.

An economist, Dean Brown was one of the architects of the original Social Security legislation in 1935 and a leader in the reform that broadened its coverage and scope in subsequent decades. In 1971, he received the Arthur J. Altmeyer Award, the Social Security Administration's highest honor.

Dean Brown joined the Princeton faculty as an instructor in 1921, and, from 1926 to 1955, he directed the university's Industrial Relations Section, a pioneering research organization in the field of industrial relations and human resources. He served as dean of the faculty for 21 years, 1946 to 1967, and in 1966-67 also served as Princeton's first provost for one year prior to his retirement.

He presently lives in Meadow Lakes Village, Hightstown.

Lecture at Princeton

University. He will speak Monday at 8 p.m. in the Dodds Auditorium of the Woodrow Wilson School.

Before becoming the 13th president of N.Y.U. in July, 1981, Mr. Brademas had served for 22 years as U.S. Representative from Indiana's Third District, the last four as House Majority Whip. During 22 years of service on the Education and Labor Committee, he played a principal role in helping write most major legislation concerning elementary and secondary education, higher education, vocational education, services for the elderly and handicapped, and federal support for libraries, museums, and the arts and humanities.

Mr. Brademas will survey the current condition of graduate education and research, reflecting on the value of graduate training to the nation's economy, diplomatic and defense capability, and social and cultural life. He will also outline an agenda for action by the federal government. His remarks will be based on the report recently completed under his direction as chairman of the Graduate Education Subcommittee of

He was chief architect of the National Institute of Education, the principal federal agency supporting research in education, and a major sponsor of the Higher Education Acts of 1972 and 1976.

DISCOVERY ROOM OPEN

At Watersheds Headquarters. The Stony Brook - Millstone Watersheds Association has officially dedicated its new Discovery Room at the headquarters building on Titus Mill Road.

The new facility features hands-on exhibits. One depicts New Jersey geology with information for field trips and appropriate land use; another is a slide show on groundwater. There are also interactive exhibits on soils, a stream table, and displays of living organisms and pond life.

"Man and the Environment" is a many-faceted exhibit that looks graphically at current environmental issues like hazardous waste, acid rain and the impact of growth.

The new resource is open to the public from 9 to 5 during the week and on Saturdays by appointment. Those interested in bringing groups should call in advance to arragne special programs. Information is available from the Watersheds' office at 737-3735.

SWIM ON SUNDAYS

Pilot Project Continues. The YWCA will continue Sunday Open Swims through May 20. The pool will be open from 1 to 4 p.m. on Sunday afternoons.

The hour from 1 to 2 will be for those who are disabled or over 60 with special needs. There will be a number of helpers on hand, as well as two physical therapists from the Princeton Medical Center in the water every week to offer encouragement and assistance. Family swim will be from 2 to 4 p.m.

The admission fee is $2 for members, $3 for non-members, and $5 for a family of a member. During this pilot project, YMCA membership will be honored as well.

For further information call the YWCA office, 924-5571.

WOMEN'S POETRY SET For Dramatic Presentation. Women talking to each other across space and time is the theme of "Sisters Across the Centuries," a dramatic presentation of women's poetry by both American and English writers from the 17th century to the present.

The program will be presented in Cafe, the basement of Murray-Dodge Hall on the Princeton University campus on Thursday at 8 p.m. It is sponsored by the Princeton University Chapel.

Four Greenwich women, poets and actresses, have developed a theatrical dialogue using the actual texts of the 50 poems chosen for their particular relevance to women's lives today. The group spent more than a year deciding on selections and sequences, and the finished script includes a wide range of women's attitudes on family relationships, love and work.

Poets range from Aphra Behn, the first "professional" woman writer, through Elizbeth Barrett Browning and Emily Dickinson, to contemporary poets Anne Sexton, Denise Levertov and Margaret Atwood.

The four performers are Mary Ann Hoberman, Jane Milliken, Madelyn O'Neill and Florence Phillips. The piece has been directed and choreographed by Melisa Cassell.

WRITER TO SPEAK

At Library. Steve Schlossstein, author of Kensei and Trade War, will speak Tuesday at 8 at the Public Library. His talk is part of the Writers Talking sponsored by the Library.

After six years of living and working in Japan, Mr. Schlossstein resigned as vice president of Morgan Guaranty Trust Company in 1982 to establish his own financial consulting firm. He lives on Patton Avenue and divides his time between Tokyo and New York.

Kensei is a novel that shows the samurai spirit applied to high-tech rivalries. Mr. Schlossstein's new non-fiction book, Trade War: Greed, Power, and Industrial Policy on Opposite Sides of the Pacific, addresses the subject of the U.S.-Japanese balance of trade in practical, human terms.

CANVASS IS PLANNED

Of Freeze Voters. Nuclear weapons freeze supporters working with Freeze Voter '84 will kick off their door-to-door canvass on Saturday in Princeton. The volunteer effort will sign up voters who pledge to support pro-Freeze candidates in the next election, and will also recruit volunteers and contributors.

According to Rachel Findley, the area Freeze Voter '84 canvass coordinator, some 50 volunteers will canvass throughout Princeton. Ms. Findley pointed out that Saturday's canvass is the first step in what will be an ongoing election year effort. "We plan to focus the overwhelming support for the Freeze that already exists on the upcoming elections," she said.

Freeze Voter '84 is the nuclear weapons freeze movement's political arm. It is organizing electoral support for a mutual, verifiable freeze on the testing, production, and deployment of nuclear weapons by both the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

The Washington-based political action committee plans to target 30 key U.S. House races, six to ten U.S. Senate races, and the Presidential race. It has a goal of enlisting more than one million freeze voters, volunteers, and contributors into an election year freeze force.

Saturday's canvass is one of ten such canvasses planned in New Jersey and one of hundreds this weekend. In Princeton, canvassers will meet at 10:30 at Christ Congregation, Walnut Lane and Houghton Street, before going door-to-door, from noon to 4. Those interested should contact Carol Segur at 924-9690 or David Madole at 921-0425.

Princeton Resident, World's Leading Authority on Fly- Fishing, Is Also an Architect and Land Use Planner for Giant Projects

ALTHOUGH HE KEPT THIS ONE, a Rainbow caught on a dry fly on the Rio Malleo in Argentina, Ernest Schwiebert has this to say about killing fish: "The sophisticated angler counts as his highest reward the number of fish released for another day. His basket may contain an occasional fish if someone has expressed a desire for a trout, or a fish has been hurt taking the fly and cannot be released successfully. But the really skilled fisherman loves his sport far too much to spoil it with wanton killing." Trout (1978)

Lucky the man whose lifelong interests and livelihood are happily merged. Lucky the audience--and the interviewer--who has the opportunity to hear a master talk on a topic on which the world acknowledges his authority.

The Princeton community will have an opportunity to hear Ernest Schwiebert speak on "Salmon Rivers of Norway" on Monday at 7:30 at the YMCA as part of its lecture series. He will also show slides, but this will be no ordinary travelogue.

For Mr Schwiebert is regarded as the world's leading authority on fly-fishing--one whose published writings on the subject combine encyclopedic scientific knowledge and evocative nature writing. His first book, Matching the Hatch,a guide to the imitation of insects found on eastern and western trout waters, was published while he was still in college.

His monumental two-volume treatise, Trout, published four books later in 1978, is a compendium of six centuries of the history, literature, theory and technique of trout fishing. But Mr. Schwiebert is not just a trout fisherman who writes prolifically and well on his favorite pastime. He is also an architect and land use planner of large scale projects on several continents.

An Excuse for Travel. Both callings take him on travels around the world, and "Salmon Rivers of Norway" is a dart-board choice among his many fishing experiences with famous people on legendary waters. And although trout are wary and difficult to catch--comparable to playing chess, in his view--Mr. Schwiebert regards salmon as the "primordial fish" and salmon fishing "the apogee of angling."

For the interviewer who had heard of this Princeton resident's reputation among knowledgeable trout fishermen and had noticed the glowing reviews of his books in the New York Times, an introduction to the many parts of Ernest Schwiebert begins with a visit to his house on Stuart Road. It is a stunning contemporary home, which he designed while still a graduate student at Princeton University and built somewhat later.

Mr. Schwiebert and his wife Sara, who is head of the lower school at Princeton Day School, came to Princeton in 1958 from Colorado. Having received his bachelor's degree in architectural studies from Ohio State in 1955, he spent the next three years first as design review architect for the new Air Force Academy and then as one of three project officers for the construction of the complex.

Double Doctorate. With the completion of that immense project and the arrival of the first cadets, Mr. Schwiebert decided to go on to graduate school. He enrolled for an M.A. at Princeton's School of Architecture and subsequently earned a double Ph.D. in art history and in architecture.

He credits Donald D. Egbert of the Art Department with teaching him how to research and organize copious complex material in depth--a knack that has proved invaluable in all his subsequent work, including writing on trout. In architecture he studied under Jean Labatut, Enrico Perisutti and Louis Kahn at a time when there was an interest in vernacular architecture and a fascination with the psychology of the variables of space and levels of light.

His own house, with its variable ceilings--sometimes white plaster like the walls, sometimes wood, sometimes vaulting 20 feet high--its room-spaces unencumbered by doors, its patches of light falling from skylight windows in surprising places, and its meticulous use of the finest stained woods and strong accent colors, reflects these influences and his own interest in climatology.

After graduation Mr. Schwiebert worked for a large New York architectural firm, Tippetts, Abbot, McCarthy and Stratton, involved in huge projects all over the world. He took part in designing and building airports in Puerto Rico, in Caracas, Venezuela, and Santiago, Chile, for instance, and did the the master plan and site plan studies for the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport.

Big Dams, New Towns. Other projects were the Tarbela Dam in Pakistan, larger, he says, than the Aswan Dam in Egypt. Still another involved the construction of two entire new towns and 350 miles of connecting railway from Mt. Newman to Port Headland in Australia, sites of an iron ore lode and an ore-handling port.

"When you work at that level, you are like a player in an immense orchestra--and you end up a little anonymous," he says. He left the firm and founded his own company, Ecosystemics, a loosely organized group of scholars and planners who take on equally large projects in master planning and land use but usually only one a year.

Having served on a U.S. National Park Service advisory group which had international observers, he was invited to do a bio-physical inventory and master plan for a new national park in Chile that is twice the size of Yellowstone and has a mountain range as high as the Tetons. There was a similar project in Argentina, which he describes as having the most advanced national park system of all Third World countries.

Private land owners in Montana and New Mexico seek him out to make bio-physical inventories of their large land holdings and advise them on the best use of the property and whether and how a portion might be developed.

Scriptwriter Too. Dazed, the interviewer wants to get back to trout. Mr. Schwiebert smiles. A somewhat stocky man of medium height and large brown eyes, he is at once genial and very serious. He has just returned from six weeks in New Zealand, where he combined fishing with making a TV film on a wild river system that is threatened by hydroelectric power dams.

He wrote the script for that film, as he writes the scripts for all TV films in which he appears fishing one river or another.

He explains that his father, a history professor, liked to fish and that he began the pastime as early as age three or four. By seven he had his own tackle, and soon he was learning fly-dressing from a master fly-tyer and casting from an expert tournament caster.

Chapters in his two books of essays, Remembrances of Rivers Past (1972) and Death of a Riverkeeper (1980) describe idyllic summers during the Depression spent fishing trout streams of Michigan and Illinois. "Trout became the consuming passion of my boyhood," he writes. "Winters were occupied tinkering with tackle and learning to dress flies."

Hatching Calendar. It was William Blades, the master fly-dresser, who urged his protege to write a guide to trout stream insects and the artificial flies that imitate them. Blades pointed out that the key to fishing difficult waters lies in knowing what is hatching when and how to devise the most effective artificials.

Matching the Hatch evolved during teenage years of fishing further afield, in Colorado and upstate New York as well as the mid-West, all the while collecting jars of insects and keeping diaries of hatches. The first manuscript was completed before he was 20, the book was under contract when he was 22 and published when he was 24.

Ours is the grandest sport. It is an intriguing battle of wits between the angler and the trout; and in addition to appreciating the tradition and the grace of the game, we play it in the magnificent out-of-doors.

Ernest Schwiebert in Matching the Hatch* (1955)

The only book of its type to cover rivers east of the Rocky Mountains, it has been continuously in print since 1955 with 13 printings. A 30th anniversary edition is tentatively scheduled for 1985. Mr. Schwiebert says only the original cover will remain, as the text will be totally revised to reflect new knowledge of entymology.

Fame Before 30. In 1959 Life magazine published a photographic essay on Ernest Schwiebert, having discovered he was an expert not yet 30 in a field dominated by older men. The exposure gave a boost to sales of Matching the Hatch and prominence to its author. Sports Illustrated paid for a 10-week trip to Patagonia, Argentina--his choice of location--and there were other articles in Esquire and sports journals that helped break up what he jokingly calls the "self-inflicted manic-depression" of writing a Ph.D. thesis.

Delving into the adjoining library-study where stacks of books, magazines, fishing tackle, color slides, and artist's paraphernalia compete for space, Mr. Schwiebert returns with the body of his published work. In 1970, Winchester Press published a boxed, limited edition of 750 sets of his Salmon of the World.

One side of the portfolio-sized hinged box is indeed a portfolio--30 color paintings of different species of salmon, each one seemingly more delicately shaded and carefully drawn than the next. The other side is text, describing salmon and their ecology all over the world.

Published at $100 each, Salmon of the World is worth $500 today. Mr. Schwiebert says. Remembrances of Rivers Past came next and was followed in 1973 by Nymphs, a treatise on immature aquatic insects and illustrated with page after page of original, carefully accurate insect drawings, each four times life size.

Exhaustive Study. The two-volume boxed work, Trout, was prompted by an editor at E.P. Dutton whose idea it was to do a very big book on the state of the art of trout fishing covering six centuries. Some 15 years in preparation, it has close to 1,800 pages, 15 color plates and 1,000 black and white drawings and diagrams. Introducing and concluding the work, and mingled along with theory and technique, are stream-side conversations and experiences all rendered in clear and flowing prose.

Close to 15,000 copies were printed in 1978 and were immediately snapped up. A new edition, for which Mr. Schwiebert is presently making considerable revisions, is planned for Christmas, 1984.

A new book still in the process of being written will be on the Katmai region of Alaska, where 300-500 million salmon are spawned each year on four major watersheds. It will raise questions about whether it is feasible and desirable to drill for oil in a region near the Bering Sea known for having the worst tides, the worst earthquake fault, the most volcanic eruptions. An oil spill or the break-up of an oil rig somewhere in Bristol Bay could "erase a year's class of fish," he points out.

"The world needs protein as much as it needs oil, and the point is, why not have both?" Mr. Schwiebert is excited about this book, which is a departure from his earlier fishing works and is about a part of the world he knows well.

A Special Sport. There is both power and beauty in fishing with the fly, Mr. Schwiebert thinks. Even the equipment is beautiful. He delves into the library-study again and comes back with a photograph of President Reagan presenting a special deluxe edition of Schwiebert's Trout to Australian Prime Minister John Malcolm Frazier in 1982 and a replica of the $2,000 silver-handled, specially inscribed and encased split-cane rod he had made at the request of the White House as the Gift of State to the Prime Minister.

Mr. Schwiebert's companions on fishing expeditions have included English, Scottish and Norwegian nobility, as well as American notables such as Bing Crosby, Jack Lemmon and actor Richard Crenna. He says there are only two regions of the world that he would like to fish and has not--yet. One is the Vale of Kashmir in the north of India, another is the Zululand in the Drachensberg Mountains in South Africa.

At the end of the interview, the Schwiebert living room is cluttered with architectural drawings, Schwiebert books, Schwiebert original sketches of horses and birds as well as fish, the manuscript of the Alaska book, Ecosystemics reports, TV scripts, magazine profiles and taped interviews. Mr. Schwiebert surveys it all calmly. "It's all of one piece, you know, all of one piece."

Princeton's Walt Servis, Owner of The Prep Shop, To Close Store after 32½ Years in Business

THE PREP SHOP LOOK: Navy blazers — a calm presence in a fast-changing world. Walt Servis, who has sold these blazers to two generations of boys and youths — except for those bad years in the '60's — is closing his Palmer Square shop and retiring.

He was born on Chestnut Street, lived for 25 years on Walnut Lane (just down the block, given the Chestnut-Walnut continuity), graduated from Princeton High, opened his Prep Shop 32½ years ago.

Walt Servis is, you might say, "Princeton." He will close the Prep Shop and retire on May 1.

A carroty red-head, he has a touch of that tough swagger that so often protects a very soft interior. Ranged on a beam in his store is a row of pictures of all the men and women who have ever worked in The Prep Shop. He tells a visitor proudly that the darkly carved table he bought from Lester Slatoff has been in the shop 32½ years. So have the chairs. The clock belonged to the grandfather of his wife, Betty. Walt is now serving sons of the sons he served over a generation ago.

"I've always loved clothes."

Loved clothes and color and form. He could tell an unsure mother or a coltish teen what tie would go with what shirt, with what belt, with what jacket, with what socks.

He paints, and his oils so fill the Servis' Clearbrook home that the landscapes and still-lifes have to rotate on the walls.

"Self-taught," is his typically laconic comment. "Except for Edith Margerum in the Princeton High art class."

Class of '39 at PHS, he went into the Army in November, '41 and saw action ("Action? Holy Nellie!") with General Patton as a combat medic.

After the war, he went with Langrock's, then with Nina Lord's Boys' Clothes Line on Palmer Square and then, in September, 1953, he opened his own shop at 12 Chambers Street.

"I called it 'Prep' because that was the size range — 14 to 20. Then I took on young men's or student sizes with the prep look."

The boys at the old Princeton Country Day, Princeton Day School, Lawrenceville, Hun, Peddie — "maybe Choate and Andover — I never ask" — all were outfitted at The Prep Shop. "Used to sell to Chris Reeve, too."

But there were the lean '60s — "tough! Whew!" — when the prep look drew only a blank, the years of stovepipes, flares, bell-bottoms, sweatshirts, painters' overalls.

Walt still shudders. "I told Betty 'I'm going to stick it out' and we did."

Look in the shop today and you'll see what was there 33½ years ago: Madras slacks, khaki pants, striped jerseys, Shetland sweaters, button-downs, navy blazers — and the Prep Shop spinning-wheel.

From 12 Chambers, Walt moved to much larger quarters in the east wing of the old Playhouse at the foot of Palmer Square. Soon, Betty joined him with her Princess Shop in the west wing, providing for Prep Shop sisters. She was there about five years, but a disastrous robbery in which she lost her entire stock of new spring garments was just too discouraging and she quietly closed the door.

Eight years ago, Walt moved to his present spot at 33 Palmer Square. He loves it. Best location ever. Collins wanted him to stay but he decided against it. "Collins was great — couldn't have been nicer."

So now there will be more time to paint. Visitors may have noticed the duck decoys at the rear desk. In quiet times, Walt paints his decoys, enjoying this new hobby which is still another reflection of his love for color and line.

More time, too, for trips to Arizona to visit grandson David, nine, and granddaughter Brandy, age five. They are the children of Mike, who worked with his father in the shop, both at the Playhouse location and here on Palmer Square.

Mike was 24 when he was killed in an automobile accident, six years ago this January.

Mike's sister Betsy is close by, in Maple Shade with her husband. Ruth Servis, Walt's mother, is now 85, living in Princeton Junction close to Walt's sister, Ethel Servis McNinch. Walt's wife, who was Betty Clayton, is of course, just as Princeton as he, Princeton High diploma and all.

And then there are all the other Servises, like cousins Norman and Jack...

Town changed, in 33½ years?

Walt shrugs. "It's grown, but it's stayed pretty much the same and I like it and sure, I'll be coming back — Clearbrook isn't that far."

He looks out the window of The Prep Shop at Palmer Square and the post office. He likes the location.

"Same view I've seen for 30 years."

INVESTMENT SEMINARS In West Windsor. "Investment Strategies for Maximum Returns" is the topic of a free two-evening seminar to be held March 22 and March 29 at 7:30 p.m. at the West Windsor Branch of the Mercer County Library located at 332 Clarksville Road, Princeton Junction.

The March 22 session will discuss the economy and the effects of the budget deficits on the Stock Market outlook for 1984. In addition, the benefits of investing for tax free income will be presented, such as who should invest in tax free bonds; how safe are tax free investments, and some defensive strategies for investing in bonds.

The second session, on March 29, will address Government-backed GNMA securities (Ginny-Maes) and options strategies for maximum returns. There will also be a brief discussion of tax advantaged investments and who should invest in them.

For additional information, contact the West Windsor Library.

"BIG BAND SOUND" At Good Time Charley's. Every Wednesday evening at Good Time Charley's in Kingston, music reminiscent of the big band era is highlighted, featuring the Lenn Miller "Swing" Dance Band.

Mr. Miller began his career with the Jimmy Dorsey orchestra, and arranged for Dorsey and other big bands. About five years ago, he set out to establish his own "affordable" dance band, when he recognized the cost of the old 16- to 20-piece dance band was prohibitive.

After experimenting with voicing and instrumentation, Mr. Miller finally succeeded in developing his own big band sound with only six musicians.

Mr. Miller has played his "Swing" dance music at many hotels and country clubs on the east coast. While he describes his sound as reminiscent of the big band era, the young musicians in his band, he claims, impart a contemporary flavor to his music which attracts all ages for dancing and listening.

COLFAX

AT BEDENS BROOK

YOU CAN MOVE INTO THIS MAGNIFICENT COLFAX HOUSE IN SEPTEMBER

World-renowned architect Robert A.M. Stern designed this splendid classic to "sit just right" on one of the loveliest lots at COLFAX. In fact, the lot is the very first overlooking the five acre park in the center of COLFAX with all its privacy and serenity.

This very minute it is under construction by the prestigious firm of L.R. Hunt & Associates builder of many outstanding homes in the Princeton area. And the house should be ready for occupancy in early fall.

Mr. Stern's particular blend of traditional design with classic details and materials contains a beautifully proportioned 38' living room with a dramatic brick faced fireplace, enormous family/living areas with over-sized foyers and hallways for gracious living. Four bedrooms and three full baths plus an expanded powder room are included. A library and second fireplace are here, too. A 3-car garage, of course.

It is not too late to make minor modifications and selections to suit your own tastes and lifestyle. But hurry.

Call your nearest Henderson office for the exclusive details of this Robert A.M. Stern classic. Plans are on exhibit right now. Or bring your own plans for other available lots at COLFAX. And please, do it soon. There are only 13 lots remaining.

At COLFAX you'll find a lovely very private cul-de-sac lined with Norway Maples and Belgium Block curbs winding its way upwards for perhaps the most spectacular views. Each building lot has been carefully delineated with rows of flowering dogwoods for beauty and privacy. Absolutely perfect to create your own private world.

The name is COLFAX. And COLFAX may well be the most beautiful place to live in the Princeton area. Yet COLFAX is only minutes from downtown Princeton. COLFAX is really part of the Princeton lifestyle.

Over 18 acres of rolling hillside have been dedicated as "Green Acres" to remain untouched in perpetuity for the exclusive use of the COLFAX community. If you're considering Princeton as a place to live and prosper, you really must pay a visit to COLFAX!

Five Candidates Running for Three Positions In Princeton's Annual School Board Elections

Three new school board members — two from the Township and one from the Borough — will be chosen by Princeton voters in the annual school election Tuesday, April 3

Voters will also pass on the school budget.

This week and next, Town Topics will present interviews with the five candidates, outlining what they perceive to be the key elements in the campaign. So far, it has been a singularly quiet campaign in spite of the contests in each municipality.

Borough candidates are Corinne Kyle, 14 Hamilton Avenue, and Tatiana Ermolaev, 30 N. Stanworth Drive. There is one Borough seat to be filled on the board this year and voters will choose one of the two candidates.

Township candidates are incumbent Harry Levine, 147 Crestview Drive, Sharon Muzyk, 243 State Road and incumbent Hugh Brandt, 61 Bertrand Drive. There are two Township vacancies this year, and voters will cast ballots for two of the three candidates named above.

Mrs. Ermolaev, who is running as a candidate of CASE — the Citizens for American System Education (see page 1, this issue) wants a "classical core" which all high school students would be required to take.

Tatiana Ermolaev

It would consist of history — including ancient history — geography, philosophy, grammar, languages, mathematics and all sciences. It is the CASE core curriculum, although CASE would require Greek and Mrs. Ermolaev says that in her view, CASE is "sometimes too rigorous," and she is inclined to think Greek would not be necessary.

Study the Classics. She also supports CASE's belief that students should study Shakespeare, Milton, Cervantes, Dante, Schiller and the Bible, and classical music, including "composition of well-tempered polyphony."

"I think the non-college-bound students need this classical core as much as those bound for college," she says. "And I believe foreign languages should be taught from the early grades."

Although she does not like electives — "kids tend to take the easiest" — she would not eliminate them entirely, perhaps allowing students to choose which languages or which sciences they would study.

"This is not 'Back to Basics,'" she emphasizes, "because that is not enough. Princeton's Long Range plan says Back to Basics isn't enough, and I agree."

Corinne Kyle

A native of Latvia, Mrs. Ermalaev came to this country in 1950 and to Princeton in 1974. From 1974 until last year, she taught Russian at Princeton University.

More Grammar. "In teaching university-level students," she continues, "I have found that kids really don't know much — they don't even know English grammar and we have to teach them that, before we can teach them Russian."

She wishes that teacher training were less "dull," and gave teachers solid training in languages. "If they had training in languages and philosophy at the university level, they could carry that over into the classroom."

The candidate, who pronounces her name Erma-LAH-ev, has a seven-year-old daughter in Community Park and a three-year-old daughter at home.

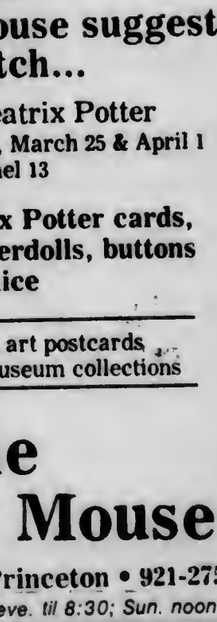
Corinne Kyle, who was chair of the Princeton School Closing Advisory Committee, ran for the school board unsuccessfully last year. She is manager of Social Science Research for the Gallup Organization and has been for more than 20 years a consultant to public agencies on management planning.

Mrs. Kyle is a graduate of Bennington College with a masters from Harvard in public administration. A resident of Princeton for three and one-half years, she has a daughter who is a junior at Princeton High School and a son who is out of college.

"We have a very strong school system — staff, administration and board are continually reviewing — and it's an exciting, positive group I'd like to join," Mrs. Kyle said.

Several aspects of the Long Range plan, she points out, "merely comment on what we're doing now," including programs to meet the needs of different students, a strong, in-service teacher training program, attention to new technology.

Encourage Self Expression. Among the most positive, she believes, is the policy of making sure that teachers encourage students to express their own ideas. Students, she adds, should feel comfortable about putting forth ideas which may be different from what the teacher said.



Three curriculum areas need attention, in her view: science in the elementary schools; teaching foreign languages at an early age, perhaps at two levels: academic and conversational, to accommodate students with different levels of ability and the kind of physical education program, K-12, that allows students to "let off steam." Included would be education making students reponsible, life-long, for their own health.

Better communication between board members and the public is also a concern. "I'd like to see a good bit more outreach, letting the public know what the board is talking about, not just 'what we decided last night.'" She suggests greater use of cable to this end.

Second Try for Ms. Muzyk. Sharon Muzyk, running again this year after her try last year, is recuperating from successful surgery for removal of her gall bladder and must confine her campaigning to telephone calls and letters written for her by friends.

President of the Community Park PTO, she is in her tenth year as director of the High School Equivalency Program and Adult Basic Education at Mercer County Community

News of the THEATRES

JACKSON PLAY NEXT

"At This Evening's Performance," McCarter's Artistic Director Nagle Jackson has re-written his play, "At This Evening's Performance," for the McCarter Theatre mainstage and it will open there March 30.

The comedy-melodrama — with serious undertones about artistic freedom and life in a totalitarian East European country — played last year at 185 Nassau Street in a McCarter Stage Two production. The set has been re-worked for the mainstage as well, because the Stage Two performing area was very small (McCarter likes to say "intimate.")

After the play closes April 15, it will move to the Virginia Museum Theatre in Richmond where it will play for one month.

Mr. Jackson has said that the idea for the play came to him in 1977 shortly after he'd done his adaptation of "A Christmas Carol."

"What if," he said, "what if an actor felt that his performance quite literally were a question of life or death, and suppose the question 'Why must the show go on?' were truly to be asked.

"A few years later, I found myself touring Eastern Europe and visiting several theatre companies there. Returning from the Balkans, I completely rewrote the text — it had already had a first performance in San Francisco — making it a play about man's artistic freedom and what it's like to have that at stake."

T.S. ELIOT

"Cocktail Party." After a successful Broadway run in 1950, T.S. Eliot's verse play, "The Cocktail Party," was revived in New York in 1968 and will now be given a Theatre Intime production on the stage of Murray Theatre, Princeton University campus. Opening night is this Thursday at 8. It will play again this Friday and Saturday and March 29-April 1.

T.S. Eliot worked on the final draft of "The Cocktail Party" during his stay in Princeton at the Institute for Advanced Study. His verse combines the flow of everyday speech and rich poetic imagery into a natural means of expression for each character.

At the Chamberlaynes' cocktail party, the hostess is unaccountably absent, which means her husband must entertain a roomful of guests who make him most uncomfortable — especially an "Unidentified Guest" — who turns out to know more about the Chamberlaynes than one might guess.

With the help of an unusual psychiatrist and his helpers, characters in the play attempt to rearrange their lives and in so doing, propel Eliot's comedy into new examinations of the human condition.

Meg Patterson, an alumna of Princeton, is directing. In the cast are actors, including Hal McCard and Eleanor Moseley, who have acted in other Intime productions.

Reservations may be made by calling 452-8181 or 452-4950 between 1:30 and 5:30 Tuesdays through Fridays.

To Direct Development

Nancy Anne Macy, associate director of development at the Alliance Theatre Company in Atlanta, has been appointed Director of Development at McCarter Theatre. She will assume her new duties April 2.

A graduate of Denison University, she has a paralegal degree from Roosevelt University in Chicago and has completed 24 credit hours in arts administration at the graduate school of Indiana University.

She taught speech and drama in Gary, Indiana, and was an Equity actor from 1973 to 1980. She began with Alliance as an administrative intern and later became assistant director of development before promotion to her present post.

At Alliance, she said this week, "we had an individual campaign goal of $230,000. We are already up to $300,000 and going strong. I hope to bring similar success to McCarter."

'TEX'

On Kresge Screen. Movies-from-McCarter will move on, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, with "Tex," the story of two motherless brothers abandoning their childhood to face the hardships of a real world. It will be shown in Kresge auditorium, Washington Road, at 7:30 and 9:30 each night.

Matt Dillon plays 15-year-old Tex, rebel against every aspect of authority, who in the course of the film, has his first experiences with drugs, sex, alcohol, class differences and even death.

Jim Metzler plays his serious older brother Mason, who must be a father to his younger brother and keep his basketball scholarship at a major university at the same time. The film has been compared to other "growing up" movies like "The Last Picture Show" and "The Yearling."

FROM JAPAN

Dance, Discussion. Eiko and Koma, whose work reflects the traditions of old Japan and contemporary American avant-garde, will give a free program of dance this Wednesday, followed by discussion with the audience.

The program, which will be given at 8 in the 185 Nassau Studios of Princeton University's Program in Theatre and Dance, is the third in a series designed to bring unusual and lesser-known artists to the campus for performance and discussion.

Frequently using images from nature — a fragile moth or an aging seal — they transcend the limits of the image, sometimes moving very slowly until they break through the everyday concepts of time and space.

Dance Magazine said of them, "You feel you are seeing into their bodies. The material is primal, and its treatment theatrically sophisticated ... they are simply the most moving and original dance or theatre in town."
